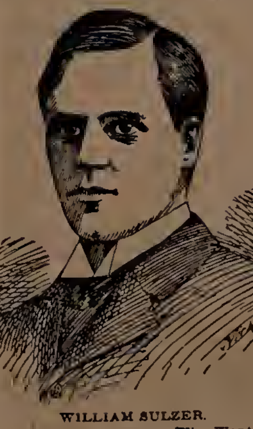
WANTS TO BE LEADER.

Congressman Sulzer, of New York, Ambitious to Succeed to Joseph W. Bailey's Honors.

Among the younger democratic leaders none is more popular than Congressman William Sulzer, of New York. He has for some years played quite an important part in New York city and state politics, and now is ambitious to be minority leader in the national house of representatives. In this position he desires to succeed Joseph W. Bailey, who is likewise a representative of the younger democracy. The truth of the matter is that Mr. Sulzer has been almost as much of a "boy wonder" in politics as the noted Texan. He represents the Eleventh district of New York (a city district). At 21 he was admitted to the bar. At 27 he was elected a member of the New York legislature. This was in 1890, and he continued to serve in that capacity in 1891, 1892, 1893 and 1894. In 1893 he was intrusted with the speakership of the assembly. He was a delegate to the Chicago convention of 1896, and was elected to the Fifty-fourth congress and reelected to the Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth. Should he be chosen in the house he will have no lack of experience. Mr. Sulzer is a loyal Croker man.



WILLIAM SULZER.
(New York Congressman Who Wants to Be Democratic Leader.)

Interesting English Clock.

The Wesleyans, of Wycombe, highly prize an old eight-day clock, which hangs in the schoolroom attached to their principal chapel. They claim that it was by this timepiece that John Wesley, when he visited the town, used to time his sermons, some of which extended an hour and a half. The clock, which was removed some time ago from the old chapel in St. Mary street, is now going as well as ever it did. John Wesley regularly visited Wycombe, a fact which probably accounts for the strength of Methodism in the locality.

Barrels of False Teeth.

About 20,000,000 false teeth are produced annually in the United States, nearly all being the product of Philadelphia factories. About 40,000 ounces of fine gold are used with this output.

PILES

"I suffered the tortures of the damned with protruding piles brought on by constipation with which I was afflicted for twenty years. I ran across your CASCARETS in the town of Newell, Ia., and never found anything to equal them. To-day I am entirely free from piles and feel like a new man."

ABOUT THE RAND.

The Mineral Wealth of the Country Has Plunged It Into War with England.

When the Dutch settlers in South Africa were crowded out of Cape Colony, they went northward across the Vaal river and founded a republic in the interior, where they fancied that they would be allowed to live in peace. Without knowing it, they built their capital, Pretoria, on the edge of the richest goldfield in the world.

When Mr. Gladstone restored their country to the Boers in 1881, and made a treaty of peace by which their independence was recognized, nobody suspected that there was in the Rand a great gold basin extending 30 miles east and west and ten miles north and south. It was not until 1887 that the value of this rich district was understood.

It became a magnet to draw gold-hunters and adventurers from every quarter of the world. In other regions gold had been discovered either in the beds of streams as dust or as small nuggets, or in veins of quartz of uncertain and variable extent. In the Rand there were three parallel reefs of sandstone, quartz and other stone, and this conglomerate was powdered with gold.

It was a new and previously unknown kind of gold deposit. A scientific industry, with costly machinery, was created for the extraction of the gold from the reefs. The sandstone and quartz were broken up at deep levels, crushed to pieces, and treated with various chemicals until nearly all the gold was got out of it.

Johannesburg was the center of this wonderful industry—an English mining city richer and more populous than all the other territories of the Boers. Millions of capital were invested in the mines and immense fortunes were made by the largest owners.

The thrifty Boers smiled whenever they thought of their good fortune in seeking a quiet "lodge in a vast wilderness" and finding a goldfield. Their English neighbors, who were forced to pay tribute to them and to submit to Dutch government, groaned whenever they remembered that Mr. Gladstone had handed back this rich gold basin to the Boers.

In this way there has come about a race feud which has ended in a war for the control and possession of the Transvaal with its goldfields.—Youth's Companion.

She Knew.

Mrs. Squildig—Why, my dear, don't you know? He was the man that invented that wireless telegraphy.

Brave Men Fall

Victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles as well as women, and all feel the results in loss of appetite, poisons in the blood, backache, nervousness, headache and tired, listless, run down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that. Listen to J. W. Gardner, Idaville, Ind. He says: "Electric Bitters are just the thing for a man when he is all run down, and don't care whether he lives or dies. It did more to give me new strength and good appetite than anything I could take. I can now eat anything and have a new lease on life." Only 50 cents at A. C. Mason & Co.'s drug store. Every bottle guaranteed.

NORFOLK, SS.

PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin and all other persons interested in the estate of Nancy J. Roper, late of Medway, in said county, deceased:

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said court for probate by James A. Snow of Medway, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, without giving a surety on his official bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham, in said county of Norfolk, on the twenty-first day of March, A. D. 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper published in Franklin, the last publication to be one day at least before said court, and by mailing, postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate seven days at least before said court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esq., Judge of said Court, this 26th day of February, in the year one thousand nine hundred.

Rev. Isaiah W. Sneath preaches this evening in Milford at the Congregational church, where revival services are being held.

Dr. John S. Stetson, well known here, died at the Everett hospital in Boston on Sunday of diabetes. An obituary will appear on Friday.

The infant son of Joseph Moreau died last Friday and the funeral was held Sunday afternoon, the interment being in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Calkin were called to Franklin, N. H., last week to attend the funeral of his brother's wife. They return tomorrow.

The Rev. F. A. Bisbee, D. D., editor of the Universalist Leader, will preach at the Universalist Lenten service Thursday evening, at 7.30.

Col. George W. Nason was unable to attend the meeting of Franklin post last evening in consequence of being again confined to the house with the grip.

Owing to the town meeting on Monday evening, March 19, the meeting of the Farmers' club will be on Tuesday evening, March 20, with Horatio Metcalf, Sheldonville.

C. M. Allen addressed the grange at Millis very interestingly last Wednesday evening on "Farming as a business, with profits compared with those of other occupations."

The estate of James Mahon has been appraised at $2,184.25 and Bridget Mahon has been allowed $384 from the personal estate left by her deceased husband, James Mahon.

The children are working hard on their part of the program for the picture benefit at the Wm. M. Thayer school. Of course you will encourage them by a large attendance.

The school committee has organized with Dr. Ambrose J. Gallison chairman and W. A. Wyckoff secretary. Silas W. Nickerson and N. E. Newell were appointed truant officers and N. E. Newell census enumerator.

The suicide of L. F. Mendell, former tax collector of Wrentham, is believed to have been due to a shortage in accounts, alleged to be about $4,500. A number of Franklin people were acquainted with him.

The committee of fifteen will meet on Thursday evening at 7.30 at the selectmen's rooms, when they will be pleased to hear from persons interested in any of the articles of the warrant to be acted upon next Monday evening.

The Ladies' Benevolent society of the Congregational church will meet in the parlor Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. A "Pussy-Will-Oh" supper will be served at 6.30; tickets usual price. Social and entertainment in the evening.

Mrs. Willard Wilcox died at her late home on Alpine street Friday. She had been ill with consumption for the past two years. She was forty-eight years old. The funeral was held Monday, the interment being at City Mills.

"Personally, we are acquainted with the 'white man's burden,'" Papa Hampton, of the Kingston (Mo.) Mercury, confidingly informs readers. "Its average weight is about ten pounds, but it gets heavier about two o'clock a. m."

Franklin Woman's Relief corps will hold an Easter sale of useful and fancy articles on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, April 10 and 11. On Tuesday evening supper will be served from 6.30 to 8 o'clock. Wednesday evening dancing from 10 to 12 o'clock.

Although 1,000 copies of the Town Report were printed, yet that number was insufficient, as some persons must have taken more than they were entitled to. Persons having spare copies are requested by the Selectmen to return them to the town officers' rooms.

The senior class of the High school have prepared a dramatic entertainment to be given Friday evening, March 23, in the Horace Mann building. Music will be furnished by the High school orchestra, and two plays, "A Chinese Dummy" and "A Rank Deception" will be given.

The postmaster general has perfected a plan to sell postage stamps in book form. Two cent stamps will be offered for sale in books of twelve stamps at twenty five cents. The books will be of a size convenient to slip into the vest pocket, with wax paper between the stamps.

The matter of having one man keep all the books for all the boards of town officers is being agitated in Millbury and other places upon the claim that it would make the work of auditing the books much easier, and better for the officials. The same idea is being advanced in Westboro.

Capt. J. B. Crocker went to New York yesterday and will sail from there to Galveston, Texas, with coal. Before coming home he may take freight across to Florida, and from some point then find a charter home to New York or Boston. He expects to be about three months on the trip.

The Young People's society have provided a most pleasing entertainment in the Universalist chapel for tomorrow evening, consisting of vocal and instrumental music, etc. Miss Kimberly, the famous flutist from Boston, who has been heard here, will also play. An admission of 15 cents will be charged.

Fifteen years ago the present March as one of the sober-minded citizens recalls the weather, the temperature fell to zero, where it remained several days with a foot or more of snow upon the ground. It was the coldest part of the winter and such weather as brought to mind the saying, "Going out like a lion.

There are two methods of extending the water works to Unionville, and either is a matter of considerable expense. One is to extend the pipe and pump direct from the pumping station, and the other to supply from the standpipe. The latter method would require more tearing up of the streets than the former.

The regular Friday evening meeting at the Methodist church is changed to Thursday evening for this week only. An interesting service, evangelistic in character, will be held, to which a general invitation is extended. The pastor will preach a short sermon; subject, "The Church's Call to Those Who Are Without."

Owing to the condition of St. Mary's church the school rooms in the basement have been closed. The teachers in these rooms are Sisters Mary Agnes, Euphemia and Sabina. The scholars will continue their studies as soon as the rooms in the new building can be arranged for their accommodation, which will probably take eight or ten days.

The Epworth league will hold a sale of fancy articles, also aprons, sofa pillows, home-made candy, cake and ice cream in Odd Fellows' hall Friday, March 16. A fine entertainment of home and out-of-town talent has been provided, also twelve young people will tell "Why they were never married." Doors open at 3 o'clock. Entertainment begins at 3.

Representatives of the National Flax Fibre company were at Slatersville again last week looking over the mill property. A gentleman familiar with the situation says that the price the concern above mentioned agreed to pay for the Slatersville property is $162,000, and that $10,000 has been deposited to bind the deal and as a forfeit in case the option is not taken up.

A stranger without money or friends was found suffering with a chill on Main street Friday afternoon by Officer Connor. The latter brought the man to a physician, who pronounced the case one of malaria, and after the doctor prescribed for him the officer put the stranger in the care of Overseer of the Poor Reed, who had him cared for at the poor farm.

The N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad company is making a record of poles and wires along their line which are used by companies or individuals for telephone telegraph or other electrical purposes with a view, it is surmised, of requiring rental if on railroad property. In this vicinity that question of railroad bounds, however, is one of those things that are hard to find out.

The selectmen met Saturday evening and organized with J. Cushing Gallison as chairman. Nelson E. Newell was chosen secretary for the board. Several applications for appointment were received and laid on the table for future consideration. It was voted to employ L. J. Morrissey to keep the sewer in condition. A partial number of special policemen and other minor officers were appointed, and the list will be published Friday.

Christian Endeavorers will be interested to know that Rev. F. E. Clark and Mrs. Clark and son, have been heard from several times since reaching Japan. They stopped at Honolulu on the way, but were not allowed to land nor receive anyone on board, because of the bubonic plague. There was a crowd of Christian Endeavorers on the wharf to greet them, and as the vessel sailed away the company on the wharf sang "God be with you till we meet again," which was heard some distance out to sea.

Rev. Dr. Perrin of the Everyday church in Boston has been heard here a number of times and always with pleasure. His little daughter objected to going to sleep in the dark, so he spent half an hour or so in explaining to her how God's love and care surrounds us in darkness as well as light, and then, bidding her goodnight, started to leave the room. At once came the little voice: "Oh, papa, I don't want to be left in the dark." "But, Dorothy dear, I have told you how God is with us at all times." "Yes, papa, but I'd rather have gas than God."

Rev. John B. Koehne of Chicago will begin a course of six lectures on Friday evening, in the Congregational church, upon "The Nazarene, or the Reasonableness of Christianity," to which all are invited. The admission is free. Mr. Koehne is a "vigorous combination of scholar, poet, philosopher, orator and prophet." He interests large audiences wherever he goes, and those who hear him once desire to hear him again. This week he will speak on "The Preparations for Christianity Through the Gentile World." Come and hear him.

The recount of votes for assessors took place on Saturday evening in the town officers' room, and the second count showed no change in the result as between Lawrence J. Kelly and William Rockwood, although Mr. Kelly, with two of the leading candidates, gained one vote, while James O. Chilson gained two votes. The work of recounting the ballots was begun at 7.30 and was not completed until 11 o'clock. George W. Wiggin was present in the interest of Mr. Rockwood and Henry E. Ruggles represented Mr. Kelly. The counting was done by the board of registrars, composed of O. T. Doe, James W. Deemond, John B. Collins and Bradley M. Rockwood.

Lovers of base ball will be interested to know that the principal changes in the base ball rules this season are to the effect that a batsman no longer gets a base on a balk, but only the base runner, and the rubber home plate will be turned so as to squarely face the pitcher and catcher, instead of being diamond shape as heretofore. It was thought that the umpires would find less difficulty in gauging the delivery of a pitcher by this innovation and there would be less kicking about the calling of balls and strikes. This change will work to the manifest disadvantage of pitchers, as the effectiveness of their work lays in "cutting the corners," and fewer strikeouts will result.

Mr. Partridge, who is a member of the American Brass Band Veteran association, attended the funeral of the late D. W. Reeves yesterday. The band and veterans met at the residence, on Doyle avenue, at 9 o'clock, and after short services escorted the remains to the First Baptist church on North Main street. The casket was opened and for one hour there was a steady stream of people passing through the church to take a last look at the dead band master. Services were conducted by Rev. Dr. King and by the Calvary commandery, Knights Templars. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful, among which were 200 bride roses from John Philip Sousa. The full National band of Providence escorted the remains to Swan Point cemetery, his last resting place.

One by One.

The funeral of the late Sabin Hubbard was held from his residence on Central street on Sunday afternoon, Rev. Mr. Sneath officiating. The services were in charge of King David lodge, I. O. O. F., and quite a generous representation were present. The remains were interred in the Union street cemetery.

He had been sick but a short time, as he was about the street the Friday before his death, but was taken sick that night. His disease, erysipelas, was exceedingly painful, at times seeming more than he could bear, requiring the attention of three persons to minister to him. Death only brought relief.

Mr. Hubbard was one of Franklin's oldest and most respected citizens, born here June 20, 1823. He was the eldest son of Elisha and Amelia (Turner) Hubbard. He was married March 24, 1847, to Almira, youngest daughter of Asa and Polly Ball Sargent. His entire life has been spent here, with the exception of a couple of years which he spent in Woonsocket, where he pursued his vocation as carpenter and builder.

For many years Mr. Hubbard lived on the Holbrook farm, now the property of E. K. Ray, but later built a house on Central street, where he had resided for the past twenty years. When engaged in box making he for a time had the saw mill and box factory which stood on Depot street and afterwards burned and also rented for a year or two the Metcalf mill that was burned two years ago.

He was never prominent in politics, though he served his party and his town on several boards of overseers and assessors. In 1883 he represented this district in the legislature. He joined King David lodge at its institution in 1878, and remained actively interested in its affairs till his death. The prosperity of the lodge and the order was ever near his heart, passing through the various offices here and into the Grand lodge. He was the secretary of the lodge here for many years, until the infirmities of age compelled him to lay down the burden.

He leaves a widow and two sons, Adin S., an instructor in the Providence Bryant & Stratton's business college, and Ernest E., in the real estate business in Boston. Two brothers also survive him, Capt. William E. Hubbard of Woonsocket and J. G. Hubbard of Derry, N. H.

A Timely Discourse.

Rev. F. B. Sleeper at the Baptist church last Sunday forenoon gave an important sermon on "The After Thought and the After Work." He spoke of the splendid victory gained at our last town meeting for no-license. Yet the work is not ended. Our great success will prove our saddest defeat if we rest easy on our arms assured that the prize is forever ours. Pure and undefiled religion is needed in our shops, on our streets and in our homes. There is an evil that slinks and grovels and will run like a coward before the searching light. We need brave men for integrity and for nobility of speech acceptable unto God. It is easy to drift with the world in their coarseness and reckless slang. But that is not religion. The divine pureness of Jesus Christ should be in every word and action. If not, we shall transform the young men and boys into infidels and unworthy citizens and haters of God. The curfew law is needed in two places: (1) In the home. If fully and sweetly carried out there then every possible requirement will be met. (2) Upon the streets. There are homes that are careless, and worse. And no greater evil can be visited on this noble town so free from roughness than street education at night.

Benefit Entertainment.

At the Horace Mann hall, Friday evening next, a concert will be given to provide pictures for Mr. Frazer's and Miss Reilly's rooms. The first part will be rendered by some of the pupils of Miss Reilly's and Mr. Frazer's classes. There will be chorus, duet and solo singing and recitations, closing with the short dialogue, "Mice at Play." The second part will be furnished by Dr. Hodge, Ray Wyckoff, Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Tompson, the Misses Bly, Misses Gould, Whiting and Ferrer. They have kindly consented to give their services, and with such talent the entertainment cannot fail to be a success.

Will you not encourage us by your presence in our work of making the school rooms attractive and helpful places for the children of Franklin? Tickets are only twenty cents and are on sale by the pupils. They also can be purchased at the door. Doors open at 7 o'clock; entertainment commences at 7.45 sharp. Come and you will feel repaid. S.

Half-Hour Trips.

The Woonsocket electrics will run on Saturday at half-hour intervals, commencing at 8.15 a. m. and continuing till 11.15 p. m., when the last car will leave Woonsocket for the car barn. On Sunday the cars will also leave on half-hour time, commencing at 12.15 p. m. This will accommodate the public as the pleasanter days come on.

IN THE WAKE OF THE SWALLOWS.

Biltmore and Asheville, N. C.—A Sky Flight.

KENILWORTH INN, BILTMORE.
February, 1900.

Have you ever noticed the sunset dance of the swallows? As dark draws on they circle and swing, balance and meet, dip and sway, leap and fall, in wonderful entanglements of graceful motion! I could but think of this as the upward flight of the train lifted us over the peaks and valleys, hills and hollows, gorges and pinnacles, tunnels and trestles that make up the amazing approach to this "strip of herbage sown" in the wilderness of huge mountains and forests of North Carolina!

I have traveled somewhat, but not even in the grand, the stupendous stretches of the Rockies, have I seen more interesting features of landscape than between Salisbury and Asheville. At one point the train travels nine miles to advance three, and we look back again and again upon the track, wondering and not believing our own eyes as we see the steel loops glistening below and the snow white fountain of a beautiful geyser spring leaping into the air like a rocket only to tumble in a snowy cascade fifty feet below. The interest of the trip alone is well worth the coming, but the arrival is a crowning satisfaction both to body and soul.

This great castle-like caravansary is like a home and a place of well being, for its situation precludes the idea of illness, care, or the remembrance of the outer world of weary things. It is on a high eminence, the very center of all the breezes that blow clean and clear from mountain ranges on every side; sheltered from heavy winds, yet "set tip-toe upon a little hill," with Keats "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

For who can deny a joy to the soul that can love God for his beauty, when the eye, turning north-east, sees blue Mount Mitchell looming in solitary grandeur many hundred feet higher than Mount Washington, surrounded by a body-guard of sentinel mountains but little lower than himself; or southward, Pisgah, which lifts its glory above the grand estate of Biltmore, whose palace-like walls rise in stately assurance that America has begun to place here and there, evidences of her wealth, her artistic discrimination and her substantial enterprise, in homes that shall descend to many unborn generations.

Westward "the great Smoky Mountains," made immortal in literature by the pen of Charles Egbert Craddock, hold for an instant the setting sun upon their sturdy shoulders, while at the same moment, opposite, over the Blue Ridge, the moon, pale with jealousy, rises to shine above his going.

Billows of forests everywhere, broken on every hill by beautiful residences, attest the constantly growing popularity of this vicinity as a health resort in winter—an escape from the severities of a northern climate, or a cure for those disorders bred in cities. Nature in the fullest scope of hills, rivers and forests, airs and waters clarified by distance from great manufactories or smoky centres, lures the tourist to become a visitor and then a resident, until half of the little thriving city of Asheville is made up of charming homes, surrounded by those evidences of good taste which bespeak culture as well as means.

We Northerners are rapidly finding out why such gentlemen as have lavished millions within a fifty mile range, should have come so far from the centre of civilization to spend time, thought and unlimited resources upon what we had dreamed to be a wild and unattractive country! It proves to be in all respects an ideal spot—so beautiful and healthful that strenuous efforts are being made to induce congress to take five hundred thousand acres for an "Appalachian National Park," thus preserving to the people the forests and their denizens, and to bring nearer to the East a national play ground, that which not even the

Every Precaution Taken.

Prof. Peirce has sent out the following: "Dean academy will reopen Tuesday, March 20, and will continue in session till the close of the school year in June. The one case of scarlet fever which caused the earlier vacation proved very mild, and the patient has fully recovered and is now at her home. No cases have been reported among students who returned to their homes. Wishing to use every precaution we have thought best to extend the vacation a few days beyond the ordinary time, so that there may be absolutely no danger of any other case.

"Every precaution known to the best experts has been taken, under the direction of competent authority, to thoroughly fumigate and disinfect the school buildings, so that every germ of the disease may be destroyed. Parents can be assured with confidence of complete safety in the return of pupils."

COMMUNICATIONS.

MR. EDITOR:—Are our children growing up profane? Passing a group of lads coming home from school the other day, I was horrified at hearing the profanity which was uttered, though I could not tell by whom. Every parent should find out if their children use profane language. It has been said that "Profanity is not necessary to make language effective. It is the weapon of the coward and bully. Profane language is going out of fashion, and in the same manner as the drinking of intoxicants is decreasing. Public opinion is the public conscience. When public opinion as to profanity becomes more refined, profanity will cease to be. Training the conscience of the rising generation to perceive the evil of profane language will help a great deal. B.

The Shut-Ins.

Verily, we agree with Uncle Silas that the quarantine business and everything connected with it is funny. It is amusing, as well as ridiculous, to see the care with which the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker approaches a quarantined house to leave his wares. He reaches eagerly after the money, being very careful not to touch the hand extended toward him. Then speeds away to the next customer there telling them that he has not been inside the door of the quarantined house, and at the same time perhaps making change with the money taken from the infected house. V.

Lessons from Life.

Rev. Mr. Sneath spoke on Sunday evening to a large audience upon "Some Timely Lessons from the Life of Mr. Ray." He said: Franklin has given to the history of literature three names, Emmons, Mann, Thayer. It has also given a name to the history of business, the name of Ray. The death of Mr. Joseph G. Ray should leave three forceful lessons upon the minds of the young men of Franklin. First, the lesson of diligence. The Bible does not sanction laziness. Mr. Ray was "diligent in his business." So should all business men be. This is the age of "hustle." It should be the aim of all young men to be at the front and not at the rear of the business procession. Second, Mr. Ray was interested in the material, intellectual and moral welfare of Franklin. He was a leader in many movements. Upon whose shoulders will his mantle fall? It is a time for young men to interest themselves for the welfare of our community. There were grounds of encouragement for aggressive movements. By cooperative methods the young men could increase the business welfare of our town. It may require some sacrifice, some venture, but the efforts ought to be made.

Third, what is to be done should and must be done now. Life is uncertain. The time may not be ours later, and whatever planning is done should be done in connection with God. Men should plan for the spiritual as well as the material welfare of a community. The churches of Franklin should be supported by the young men. They are the conserving forces of the moral and spiritual welfare, and "what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul. I appeal to the young men to join with others who have already entered the work to push forward zealously the material and spiritual welfare of our beloved town.

IN THE WAKE OF THE SWALLOWS.

Yellowstone could in many respects claim advantages, and which, instead of being 2,500 miles at least from the "Hub of the Universe," or a little less from New York, could be reached from that latter city in twenty-four hours. For a letter posted me at Madison Square yesterday, at 2 o'clock, reached me at this hotel at 2 o'clock today!

Asheville, a congregation of 12,000 inhabitants, nestles in a sort of cup a mile or two away and presents some astonishing features to the traveler. It reminds me somewhat of my feelings when I arrived at Golden, Colorado, which after a series of similar loops and whirls, flights and bird like liftings of the railway came into sight—a city in the hollow of huge hills, out of sight and bearing of the world, a nun, a novice, an innocent village maiden, one would suppose—but no! Bless me! Exquisite costumes, fine equipages, tigers and footmen, dainty and elegant women, very finely tailored men, shops that would not look out of place on Broadway, and here, for instance, a window full of gems!

These prove to be native North Carolina gems, mined in Mount Mitchell, and so new, so rare in color and quality that they are pronounced hardly inferior to the superb green demantoids of Siberia. They are garnets, but of a true rose or rhododendron hue, so different from the ordinary garnet that they have been given the scientific name of rhodolite, and are an utterly new variety, brilliant, hard and of so rich shades that I can see no preference between them and the ruby.

Here we find very substantial and wholly modern business buildings and many public buildings wholly up to date, while the trolley, electrics and the other necessities of our life of today are all provided. Probably the great attraction to many will always be the drive to Biltmore, the Vanderbilt estate, and the inspection of its 125,000 acres, containing not only the splendid residence so often described, but forty miles of the most perfect driveways, a dairy with cattle whose pedigrees are longer than many a lord who carries off a rich American girl as a prize and who have themselves won unnumbered prizes; the stables where speed and breeding, beauty and intelligence have won the approval of the master of horse to this American esquire. Again, the piggeries are by no means to be neglected, since here is the proof that pigs do not love dirt and are as self-respecting an animal as any and as fond of a bath as a duck. The guests of this house are supplied with fresh tomatoes, cucumbers, radishes, peas and early strawberries from the truck farm and hot houses of the Vanderbilt estate, while the rich cream, poultry and many other supplies have proved a really lucrative investment for this "fancy farmer."

Magnificent stretches of scenery are ever present from any point in this princely domain, and around it is growing up the village of Biltmore, arranged in cottages that may be had at a very reasonable price, or in villas, chalets or more expensive residences for the "better to do." These are the natural extension of the great enterprises which are emanating from a wise young head and a free hand, and from the kindly and admiring expression of people about I fancy they are deeply appreciated.

We find the amusements here, for both in and out of doors, of the most varied character. Every one seems in gay spirits. Every one seems busy. The golf links are extremely interesting and call for clever play as they run around the hills and give a new inspiration at every tee. Horseback riding is ideal and the young ladies with their escorts or grooms canter away every morning. The short skirt and alpen stock are in evidence, as mountain climbing is in great favor, for there are twenty-five points to gain from this center.

But to return to a still higher flight—up to the thought of the grandeur and greatness to be seen here, there and everywhere in our noble country. If Americans wish to see the world let them view it from the top of an American mountain first. There is no foreign peak that will invoke nobler memories or lift them to more exalted aspirations than those which rise above the splendid landscapes of their native land.

CORA LINN DANIELS.

"He That Any Good Would Win"

Should have good health. Pure, rich blood is the first requisite. Hood's Sarsaparilla, by giving good blood and good health, has helped many a man to success, besides giving strength and courage to women who, before taking it, could not even see any good in life to win.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Never Disappoints

We try to get as near as possible to the man who drinks the Coffee.

To find the best coffee in this country a woman needs only two qualties. She can use a dozen, but she can do it on only two. They are Intelligence and Courage.

Ten women have intelligence and no courage where one has courage and no intelligence. Courage is really what the average woman needs if she wants coffee way up in G.

Now it doesn't require much courage to buy a pound of Chase & Sanborn's High Grade Coffee if you set about it right. The grocer will give it to you in a parchment-lined bag with our seal and signature attesting its high quality. You have really only to drink it.

Even here you run no risk. The man who ate the first oyster took terrible chances. But the only chance you will take is the probability that never again will you be willing to drink any other kind of coffee.

Even then, you will thank us. Ask your grocer for a pound of this coffee to-day.

CYANIDE'S ATTRACTION.

Those Who Handle the Deadly Drug Are Drawn Almost Irresistibly to Swallow It.

"Just now we are engaged in the making of tons of cyanide of potassium," said a member of a firm of manufacturing chemists, "and of all poisons, this, to my mind, is the most dangerous, because of a singular quality it possesses. It is in appearance so very attractive to those who handle it that they are often seized with an almost overwhelming desire to eat it. To one man it probably suggests sugar, if he have a fondness for saccharine substances, and to another snow newly fallen; but to both it is so alluring that they may only overcome the temptation to put it in their months by great force of will power.

"The very men who make it and who are most familiar with its deadly properties are pursued by an unreasonable desire to eat the poison, and as long as they remain in its vicinity this extraordinary craving endures. They know that to give way to the craving means death almost instant and horrible, and as a consequence are usually able to resist the strange temptation, but during the last ten years we have been engaged in the manufacture of the drug four of our most intelligent and steady workmen have committed suicide in this way."

"Ever feel like eating it yourself?" asked the reporter.

"Yes," the manufacturer replied. "Many times when in contact with the cyanide fumes, and have had to leave work precipitately in consequence. So well is this curious fact known in all works where cyanide of potassium is made that there are always two men at work together, and a jar of ammonia, which is the antidote to the poison, is kept at hand.

"Potassium is one of the most interesting substances known to chemical workers. The metal itself is scarcely used at all in the arts, but its many salts are of immense practical value, being used largely in the production of gunpowder, fertilizers, medicines and dyeing compounds. Cyanide is a compound of cyanogen with a metallic agent. Cyanogen is a colorless, poisonous liquefiable gas which has the odor of almonds and burns with a purple flame. Cyanide of potassium is made by burning potassium, an alkali metal, in cyanogen gas, and is really a prussiate of potash. It is produced also in blast furnaces in which ore is smelted, with coke or coal, and is permanent when kept dry, but decomposes readily in moist air. It crystallizes in dry, octagonal blocks, and is extremely soluble in water. It has the odor of prussic acid and kindred bitterness of taste. Cyanide of potassium is also used in electro-metallurgy and photography to a considerable extent. It will remove metallic oxides, the juices of fruits and indelible ink."—N. Y. Sun.

The Reason.

Mr. Jones—Here is a man who tried to kill himself by eating the heads off of phosphorus matches. What an insane idea!

Mr. Sharpe—Not at all. Very logical. He wanted to light out, you know.—N. Y. World.

His Way.

Young Mother—Arthur Oidbeau is always paying queer compliments.

Friend—What's his latest?

Young Mother—To-day he congratulated the baby on having such a pretty mother to look like.—Puck.

The Cart Before the Horse.

Cox—What does [illegible] have in that trailer behind his automobile?

Nixon—A reserve power.

Cox—Some electrical contrivance?

Nixon—No. It's a good, old-fashioned horse.—Harlem Life.

ON THE MISSISSIPPI.

Quaint Sights and Incidents of Travel and Traffic Along the Great River.

Passenger service on the Mississippi river is in a fairly satisfactory condition. Between St. Paul and St. Louis, and from there to New Orleans, there are large and well-built craft, with comfortable staterooms equipped with running water and spring matresses. Each steamer has a long cabin extending from stem to stern, where the tables are set for meals, and where the passengers dance in the evening. There is a piano and sundry easy chairs. It costs about as much on the boat per day as it does at a good lakeside hotel, so that a passenger virtually has the pleasure of travel for nothing. The chief difference between the life on a boat and that at a summer hotel is that, instead of viewing the same prospect day after day from a piazza, you have a new view from the boat every moment. The boat stops at every town, so that the passengers may become familiar with the urban as well as the country life of the valley. The freight of the river is always taken to and from the boat on the backs of negro roustabouts. There has been no advancement in the manner of handling it since the steamboats first plowed the river. As soon as the boat's nose touches the shore the gangplank is lowered, and a seemingly endless procession of negroes begins to move back and forth carrying on board the bags of flour, which, on the northern portion of the river, often makes the bulk of the cargo. Plows, boxes, lumber and merchandise are the other products. River lives are much the same everywhere. The cargoes, however, are varied. They all present a picture of a hundred years ago. At Memphis, from the bluffs to the water's edge, is an immense inclined plane of granite paving stones. In the center, about 200 feet from the bluffs, runs a wide road the entire length of the levee, and disappears among the compress factories and oil mills, whose great bulk and tall chimneys appear in the distance. Between this road and the bluffs the levee is nearly level; from here to the river there is a steep descent. Above the road come and go continually a swift stream of cotton loads and empty drays, and great piles of small cargoes to and from local jobbing houses; below it there are, during busy hours, a conglomerate mass of drays, mules, cotton bales, sacks of cottonseed, darkies, and all sorts of freight. Beyond is the long row of steamers that line the shore, and in the background sweep the waters of the Mississippi. The center of activity may be one boat, such as the Big Sandy, of the Memphis & Cincinnati line, just arrived, bringing a cargo of 2,000 cotton bales that have been picked up along the river mouth. The huge pile of boxes of furniture, and bags of cottonseed are being carried, one piece at a time, by a long stream of lazy darkies, over the gangplank into the bowels of the big boat. There some laborers, returning by way of the stage plank at the prow, roll out before them the cotton bales and file them in rows some distance up the levee. Above the din of wheels rumbling over the rough pavement, drivers shout to their stupid mules. There are picturesque oaths and snatches of melody. Escaping steam, shrill whistles, the creaking of loading and unloading freight, and the bellowing of overseers, who are, as a rule, active darkies, with monstrous lungs and an inexhaustible supply of big words, mingle in busy confusion.—Ainslee's Magazine.

No Doubt of It.

"Is he what you would call a cultured person?"

"Cultured! Well, I should say so. He knows twice as much about the history of ancient Greece as he does about the history of the United States. And he can do a problem in trigometry in one-third the time it would take him to calculate the interest on a 90-day note. Cultured! Well, I guess!"—Washington Star.

To Match.

"Lobelia," demanded Mr. McSwat as he stood, hat in hand, waiting for her, "are you going out walking with that bicycling dress on?"

"This is my rainy-day skirt," replied Mrs. McSwat, "and I certainly am going out walking in it."

"Then wait a minute," he said, "and I will turn up my trousers."—Chicago Tribune.

SING A SONG.

If you'll sing a song as you go along,
In the face of the real or the fancied wrong;
In spite of the doubt if you'll fight it out,
And show a heart that is brave and stout;
If you laugh at the jeers and refuse the tears,
You'll force the ever reluctant cheers
That the world denies when a coward cries,
To give to the man who bravely tries;
And you'll win success with a little song—
If you'll sing the song as you go along!

If you'll sing a song as you plod along,
You'll find that the busy rushing throng
Will catch the strain of the glad refrain;
That the sun will follow the blinding rain;
That the clouds will fly from the blackened sky;
That the stars will come out by and by;
And you'll make new friends, till hope descends
From where the placid rainbow bends;
And all because of a little song—
If you'll sing a song as you plod along!

If you'll sing a song as you trudge along,
You'll see that the singing will make you strong;
And the heavy load and the rugged road,
And the sting and the strips of the tortuous goad
Will soar with the note that you set afloat;
That the beam will change to a trifling mote;
That the world is bad when you are sad,
And bright and beautiful when glad;
That all you need is a little song—
If you'll sing the song as you trudge along!
—Sunshine.

Mr. Jobson Gets Dinner

WHEN Mr. Jobson got home from his office at five o'clock the other afternoon he found the front door locked. Concluding that the catch had accidentally dropped, he got out his latch key and opened the door. He was surprised to find the vestibule door locked, too. Mumbling something about the inefficacy and imbecility of modern patent locks, he used his latch key on the vestibule door also, and entered his abode. He had hung his coat and hat on the rack before he noticed the queer, lonesome silence that broods over a house the occupants of which are all out. Mr. Jobson was visibly ratfled.

"Jane!" he called to his wife, somewhat commandingly from the bottom of the stairs, at the same time muttering something about women who stay upstairs primping all the afternoon. But there was no reply. Mr. Jobson went to the head of the basement stairs.

"Lily!" he called to the black servant. Lily replied not.

"Well, here's a deuced pretty note!" ejaculated Mr. Jobson, spreading his legs out in the hall and looking savage. "What's the meaning of it, I'd like to know? Man comes home from toil and drudgery at his regular daily hour and finds his home as deserted as a northwestern boom town church. Wife gadding the streets, servant off attending some five o'clock tea and parlor social, and no more sign of dinner than of elephant tracks! And I'm so hungry that I could eat a burro stuffed with firecrackers! Now, this is the worst yet. I'm willing to do as much and to stand as much as the next man for the sake of peace and a quiet life, and to keep my home together, but I'll be eternally flibbertgibbeted if this isn't too—"

The situation bore so heavily upon Mr. Jobson's spirits that he couldn't finish the sentence. He set to work thinking out schemes whereby he could exhibit his displeasure. He was in two minds as to whether he would receive Mrs. Jobson upon her return with fiery and sarcastic allusions, or greet her with solemn, martyr-like dignity, displaying evidences of grief and disappointment too profound for adequate expression. Mr. Jobson felt very much abused. He looked around to see if there was any note of explanation tacked to the top of the bureau, or resting on the mantel, or stuck in an easel on the piano. There was no note.

"Nope," mused Mr. Jobson, when he had finished his search, "there's not even a line of explanation. Just a plain case of heartless, callous indifference. And after the way I have toiled and moiled—"

The thought was almost too much for Mr. Jobson's composure. He collected himself, however, with a great effort, and decided upon a course to pursue. At first he reflected that it would be a good scheme for him to write a short, jerky note addressed to Mrs. Jobson, stick it up in some prominent place, and then depart for a wild, tumultuous time of it downtown, returning at three o'clock in the morning in a night-liner and an aggressive frame of mind. But he remembered that the last time he had chosen this method of exhibiting his displeasure over a fancied grievance he had hardly been able to drag himself around for a week afterward.

"Too much of a boomerang that way," thought Mr. Jobson, deciding not to have recourse to the tumultuous plan.

"I know just what I'll do!" he suddenly thought, and he proceeded immediately to put his scheme into operation. He took off his coat and elaborately rolled up his sleeves. Then he descended to the basement kitchen. He lighted all the burners in the gas range, coming perilously close to blowing himself to eternity in the operation, and started in to cook dinner for himself. First he dumped about half a pound of coffee into the pot, and, filling it up to the top with water, put it on to boil. Then he dug around for materials wherewith to make himself some corn bread. He ranged all the materials about him on the kitchen table, and within five minutes he was in corn meal, molasses and other things up to his elbows. He put a great many ingredients in the corn meal, and even looked at the Worcestershire sauce and the cayenne pepper. He managed to get the pan into the oven after 30 minutes of exhausting labor, by which time he was a sight, as, in fact, was the whole kitchen. Then Mr. Jobson carefully sharpened the bread knife and hunted up the bacon. He cut off three half-inch-thick slices of the bacon with the bread knife, incidentally gashing his left forefinger pretty badly. After going upstairs and binding up his slithered finger, he doggedly returned to the job of getting his dinner.

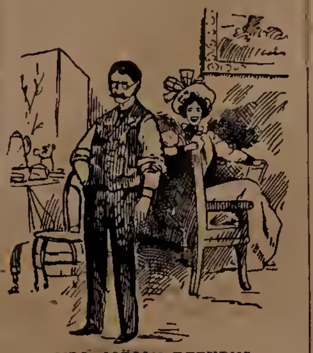
"Might as well learn now as any other time," he growled to himself. "I can see how things are going in this camp, and the sooner I learn how to bustle for myself, why—"

Then Mr. Jobson searched around for ten minutes for the eggs before he concluded to look for them in the ice box. (He hadn't put any eggs in the corn bread). Then he got the hugest pan he could lay his hands to, put it on the range, dropped about a quarter of a pound of butter in it, threw the three half-inch-thick slices of bacon into the pan, and looked somewhat reassured when he heard the sizzling and saw the smoke. He cracked three eggs, breaking them all in the operation, and dumped them into the pan beside the bacon. Then he went upstairs to get another bandage for his cut finger. When he returned to the kitchen the coffee had boiled all over the range and floor, the kitchen was full of smoke, and the bacon and eggs were burned to a cinder. Mr. Jobson set his jaw down hard. He cut three more slices of bacon and broke three more eggs, and this time he watched the mess vigilantly. Then he set a place for himself at the dining-room table, and, in just one hour and forty minutes after he had started to get dinner for himself, he sat down in state, with his sleeves still rolled up to his elbows, and corn meal paste all over his face, although he didn't know this. When Mr. Jobson suddenly recollected the corn bread in the oven, by the way, and got it out, it was no more like corn bread than plantains are like onions. It was of about the same consistency as basalt. Mr. Jobson, however, set the pan beside him on the table, chopped into it with great exertion, and partook of it anyhow.

"I'm no quitter," said he to himself, doggedly, as he filed his teeth on the weird corn bread.

Mr. Jobson was wading into his butter-cooked bacon and eggs, his alleged corn bread, and his turbid coffee, when he heard the click of the latch key in the basement door. Mrs. Jobson had seen the light in the basement, and wondered greatly thereat.

When she stood in the frame of the dining-room door and saw Mr. Jobson, corn meal paste from his chin to his hair, solemnly partaking of his personally-conducted meal — and when Mr. Jobson saluted her in a sepulchral tone with a haughty "good evening, madam"—Mrs. Jobson reeled toward the dining-room couch and rolled on it in a burst of uncontrollable laughter, Mr. Jobson regarded her stiffly. Every time Mrs. Jobson raised her head from the couch pillows she broke into renewed laughter.



MRS. JOBSON RETURNS.

"Am I to suppose, madam," inquired Mr. Jobson, in his deepest and most impressive bass, "that you have been partaking of the stimulants of the season to such an extent that you're—"

The rest of it was drowned by another outburst of merry laughter from the couch.

"Mrs. Jobson," said Mr. Jobson, "I am, as you know, a just man, and before I take any steps in this matter I will permit you to vouchsafe an explanation of your conduct, if you can."

Mrs. Jobson found her handkerchief and dried the tears of laughter from her eyes.

"Why, you ridiculous old thing, you!" she said to Mr. Jobson.

"Ridic—Mrs. Jobson, I venture to advise you to have a care—have a care!" exclaimed Mr. Jobson, pushing away his plate and looking as ferocious as he could, considering the corn meal that adorned his face.

"I don't suppose we agreed at breakfast this morning," said Mrs. Jobson, as calmly as she could for the mirth that bubbled within her, "to meet downtown at half-past four this afternoon, purchase the new rugs for the parlor and sitting-room, look over the field with a view to Christmas gifts and then take dinner at a restaurant? You don't remember, of course, that we talked over the plan for ten minutes this morning?"

"Wha—wha—er—"

What Mr. Jobson was going to say will never be known. His incoherent remarks simply ended in a gurgle. But he gathered himself sufficiently to look at Mrs. Jobson with deep sorrow and reproach. Then he went upstairs to their bedroom, slammed the door after him and declined to show himself for the remainder of the evening.—Washington Star.

When a woman doesn't take any interest in her housework—
When the least exertion tires her—
When her back aches constantly—her head troubles her—limbs pain, and she feels generally miserable, it's a pretty sure indication that her kidneys are not doing their duty.
That backache is simply kidney ache—
The poison the kidneys should take out of the blood is left in, and is breeding all sorts of dire diseases—
But you can stop it—

Doan's Kidney Pills

Act directly on the kidneys—strengthen them, help them to do their duty.

Read what one grateful woman has to say about it.

Mrs. S. Lake, professional nurse, residing at 39 Temple street, Nashua, N. H., says:

"It afforded me great pleasure early in the spring of 1896 to testify to the wonderful value of Doan's Kidney Pills. I had suffered for four or five years with severe pain across the small of my back and had been unable to obtain any permanent relief until I took a course of their treatment. It affords me greater pleasure now, and it is nearly three years since I gave my original statement for publication, to say that my opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills has been strengthened instead of weakened by the lapse of time. Not only was the cure effected in my case permanent, but I know of many others in Nashua who have reason to be thankful for the existence of this remarkable preparation."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers, price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no substitute.

He Knew the Ropes.

"Now, Henry," said the thoughtful wife of a rural denizen, as he was about starting for a week's sojourn in the city, "be very careful about drinking too much ice water."

"Don't you be uneasy, Mary Ann," replied Henry, reassuringly, "I won't drink a drop of water while I'm gone."—Chicago Daily News.

Health and Wealth.

There was a man in our town
Invested all his health,
With madly avaricious aim,
To win the goal of wealth;
And when the same he had attained,
With all his might and main,
He vainly lavished all his wealth
To get his health again.

It is very hard to stand idly by and see our dear ones suffer while awaiting the arrival of the doctor. An Albany, (N. Y.) dairyman called at a drug store there for a doctor to come and see his child, then very sick with croup. Not finding the doctor in, he left word for him to come at once on his return. He also bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which he hoped would give some relief until the doctor should arrive. In a few hours he returned, saying the doctor need not come, as the child was much better. The druggist, Mr. Otto Scholz, says the family has since recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to their neighbors and friends until he has a constant demand for it from that part of the country. WRENTHAM.

The one topic of conversation in the village, excluding all else, was the discovery of the embezzlement of town funds by Tax Collector L. F. Mendell, who hung himself last week at his barn in Plainville. The selectmen are still at work on the book, and the exact sum cannot be definitely settled, but it will exceed $4,000.——The Republican caucus at Plainville held Thursday night nominated the same board of officers for the coming year, O. F. Goodspeed being nominated in place of the late L. W. Mendell.——There is a talk of a new line of electric cars from Walpole to this village.——Follett & Waite have leased the Bush factory and will commence work manufacturing building paper, having just received a $2,000 order from a Philadelphia firm.——Miss Annie M. Sullivan and Miss Helen A. Keller have been guests at Joseph E. Chamberlain.——Mrs. Benjamin Hawes died Sunday afternoon in her 87th year. She was a member of the Congregational church and much respected. She leaves two daughters, Misses Charlotte W. and Elizabeth J. Hawes, and four sons, Dr. Nathaniel W., Cornelius, Benj. Oliver and Horace J., the three latter being residents in California.

Comfort for Smokers.

The London Lancet says it is doubtful whether any nicotine ever reaches the mouth of the smoker except that present in the moistened tobacco which is in contact with the lips. The smoke products of tobacco do not contain any important quantity of nicotine, the chief toxic bodies before related to that interesting series of organic bases known to chemists as pyridines.

HUMAN BODY'S ODOR.

It Enables Animals to Trace Men Through the Densest Jungles.

The fact that certain animals, and especially the dog, will recognize the propinquity of their masters or friends although it may have been impossible for them to have seen them or heard their voices has long since suggested to physiologists and others the idea that every human being has a distinctive odor peculiar to himself, and which remains more or less constant. Otherwise, how would it be possible for the bloodhound, for instance, to take the trail of an individual and follow it for miles through crowded thoroughfares, as well as through open country, and unerringly pick out the individual from among hundreds of others?

This idea has recently received a signal verification, as we are told by Dr. Bett in the Archiv der Gesammten Physiologie. The doctor states that a friend of his, with bandaged eye and every precaution against collusion, was enabled by the sense of smell alone to recognize persons with whom he was acquainted, and to call their names the moment they came into the room and at the distance of several paces. The experiments were varied in a number of ways, but with the unerring faculty of the bloodhound, this man detected the identity of every individual presented. Other instances of a similar keenness are cited by Dr. Bett. According to the man who gave the exhibition, every family has a characteristic odor common to all the members thereof, but the intensity of which usually varies sufficiently among the various members to enable him to distinguish each individual.—Indian Lancet.

A New Arabic Notation.

There is a city magistrate living uptown who is possibly raising a mathematical prodigy in the person of his three or four-year-old daughter. She has only recently begun to attend the kindergarten, and yet meditates changes in the system of enumeration now in vogue, which, while startling, are certainly suggestive.

When asked the other day to count, she hesitated some, and then lisped:

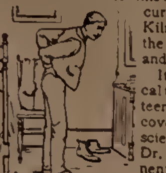
DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.



Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century, discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

Tapioca Cream.

Soak over night six tablespoonfuls of pearl tapioca, and in the morning stir into one quart of boiling milk; boil until clear (about an hour), then add the yolks of four eggs and one-half cupful of sugar, and boil ten minutes longer. When cool, flavor with one teaspoonful of vanilla and pour into a glass dish. Before serving beat the whites of eggs and add one-half pint of cream which has been previously whipped and two tablespoonfuls of fine sugar. Pour over the top.—Housekeeping.

THE EXPERT WITNESS.

His Abused Tendency to Befog a Simple Question in Technical Elucidation.

One of the besetting sins of the expert witness is the habit or tendency to use a lot of Latin words in describing an injury to the jury. In some exceptional cases, doubtless, this is done without affectation or for a purpose, but we have no hesitation in saying that in the majority of instances it is a very good index of the learning and capacity of the expert, on the assumption that the more words of this sort are used the more probability there is that they cover a deficiency of knowledge and thorough grounding on the part of the user. A really able man in his profession will always accommodate himself to circumstances, and, realizing the capacity of the average juror, use very different forms and methods of expression in testifying before court and jury than if he were making an address or delivering a paper on some scientific subject before an audience of his professional brethren.

A physician, for example, who, when upon the stand, he is asked to describe something to the jury, uses all the high-sounding terms and expressions he can muster, deserves to have very little attention paid to his testimony—and usually gets his deserts. An amusing example of this truth is given in the following account of an actual happening in an English court. It is from a little book entitled "Hints on Advocacy," published first in England:

"I discovered considerable ecchymosis under the left orbit, caused by extravasation of blood beneath the cuticle," said a young house surgeon, in a case of assault, at the assizes.

Baron Bramwell—I suppose you mean the man had a black eye?

Scientific Witness—Precisely, my lord.

"Perhaps, if you had said so in plain English, those gentlemen would better understand you."

"Precisely, my lord," answered the learned surgeon, evidently delighted that the judge understood his meaning.

This incident, which might be paralleled many times in court in this country, carries its own comment. What the jury wants is to be enlightened on disputed points, and the way to do this is not to use purely technical expressions, but to explain in plain, homely language. There is no danger that in doing this the expert will be liable to detract from the general estimate of his own abilities, but rather the reverse will be the case.—Albany Law Journal.

From What World Did They Come?

One of the most interesting discussions at the last meeting of the British association was on a paper by Prof. A. Renard concerning the origin of chondritic meteorites. He showed that certain of these fragments, which have come to our planet from the sky, present in their structure phenomena familiar to geologists in the case of rocks that have been submitted to crushing and shearing forces in the earth. The president of the geological section remarked that it is not often that the geologist can apply the principles of his science beyond the sphere he inhabits.—Youth's Companion.

Atmospheric Waves.

The atmospheric ocean surrounding the earth is frequently disturbed by gigantic waves, which are invisible except when they carry parts of the air charged with moisture up into a colder atmospheric stratum, where sudden condensation occurs. In this manner long, parallel lines of clouds sometimes make their appearance at a great height, making the crests of a ripple of air waves running miles above our heads.—Chicago Chronicle.

Athletic Exercise.

Watts—Since my wife has gone in for athletics life has been one round of excitement, out the culmination came last week.

Potts—What happened?

"Why, I was fool enough to show her one of those newspaper articles proving that housework is the best athletic exercise possible. And now she does nothing but sweep and dust all day long."—Indianapolis Press.

John I. Lamont has been promoted to spare night telegraph operator, and James Leonard takes his place as messenger.

Miss M. H. Vieta is in New York this week buying goods and copying French models for the Easter opening at Sanborn's store.

Rev. M. J. Lee expects to have his chapel in the new building fitted up by Easter Sunday, so that he can celebrate mass there on that day.

The solicitor for the Bell telephone is putting instruments into houses free till August. After that time it will be $25 a year. He is having good success.

E. Lovell Metcalf is confined to the house with a sprained ankle. His place as substitute on the Adams express team is being filled by George A. Avery.

Word was received from Mr. Koehne this morning that he will be here today. His first lecture will be given in the Congregational church tonight at 8 o'clock.

Rev. F. B. Sleeper at the Baptist church Sunday evening will give the fourth in his series of discourses on "The Prodigal Son." His theme will be "The Elder Son."

Owing to the prevalence of scarlet fever at Unionville the school there has been closed for the present. Miss Bertha Ellis, a teacher of the school, is one of the victims of the fever.

The contractors for the Franklin-Medway electric line went over the route this week and held a conference with the selectmen here. It is intended to begin the work of construction at an early date.

Hazel, daughter of Mrs. Delia McNamara, aged 2 years and 6 months, succumbed to an attack of scarlet fever at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bassott, School street, Monday night.

We quite agree with the Brockton Enterprise which thinks that when a child less than six years old is sent to school, the principal use of the school is to furnish it with nursery accommodations while its mother gets rid of caring for it.

One of the first recommendations of J. J. McCarthy at the meeting of the selectmen was that the sidewalk on Alpine street, adjoining Villa park, be repaired, and his sentiments will be in accord with the large number who travel that way.

Mrs. Mary E. Dawley passed away at the residence of her brother, George H. Gatchell, this morning at 10.30, after a long and painful sickness. Funeral services will be held at the Universalist church Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial private.

Norfolk lodge, No. 257, N. E. O. P., held its regular meeting on Wednesday evening. Twelve candidates were initiated, making a total of thirty-nine new members added to the lodge in thirty days' time. This just doubles the previous membership.

The funeral of Mrs. S. N. Small, wife of the well-known florist, of Foxboro, who died at the Mass. General hospital on Wednesday, occurred in Foxboro, at 2.30 o'clock today. She had many friends in this town who will be pained to hear of her demise.

The senior class of the Horace Mann high school will hold an entertainment in the school room Friday evening, March 23, when two bright plays entitled "A Rank Deception" and "A Chinese Dummy" will be presented, under the supervision of Miss Grace C. Whiting.

In our report last Tuesday of the recount of the votes for assessors it was stated that George W. Wiggin was present as the representative of William Rockwood. This was an error, as Mr. Rockwood had engaged no representative, neither was Mr. Wiggin present at the recount.

The last meeting of the King's Daughters was held at Miss Ferrer's with full attendance. At this meeting it was voted to give an entertainment some time in the near future, the proceeds to go to the Home for the Aged of Norfolk Conn tp, and to try to establish it in this town. The object is a worthy one, which all should bear in mind.

The Epworth league will hold a sale of fancy and useful articles, also sofa pillows, candy, ice cream and lemonade, at Odd Fellows' hall, today. A fine entertainment of home and out-of town talent has been provided, also twelve young people will tell "Why they were never married." Doors open at 3 o'clock; entertainment begins at 8.

Capt. A. F. Pendleton and his amiable wife yesterday celebrated not only their 37th wedding anniversary, but their birthday anniversary as well, each having first seen light in the Pine Tree state on the same date in the month of March—just how many years ago the captain saith not. The couple were congratulated by many friends during the day.

The first of cutting ice for summer consumption in this vicinity was made by Dr. Oliver Dean soon after he bought a part of the Emmons farm. The Rockwood sawmill at Unionville um- ber for the ice house, which was 12 feet square and located back of the farm house near the line of the present Emmons street. So says Uncle Silas, the historian.

There is one article at least in the town warrant that should receive unanimous approval next Monday evening, and that is the request for an electric light on Union street, at or near the cemetery gate. The many pedestrians who have occasion to pass this portion of the street at night time would hail this much-needed improvement with delight, and they are hoping for favorable action by voters when the matter comes up for action.

About twenty-five members of the Epworth league went to Holliston Wednesday evening by invitation, being guests of the Holliston league. Invitations had also been extended to the Milford, Ashland and West Medway chapters. A fine social and literary program had been prepared, and refreshments were served to visitors. About 200 were present altogether. A return visit to the Franklin chapter will doubtless be made in the near future.

If you want to have two hours of solid amusement and hearty laughter, go see "The Missouri Girl, at the Opera house next Thursday. Mr. Raymond carries a special electrician and two hundre pounds of electrical apparatus, which he uses in "The Missouri Girl. There are six people in "The Missouri Girl company who have starred in their own companies and been successful. Mr. Raymond certainly has an array of talent to be proud of.

The first accident since the electrics run on Main street happened last Saturday afternoon, when a car coming from Emmons street started a horse standing near Mason's drug store, not hitched, and the animal ran to Depot street, where the carriage struck a hydrant and the horse cleared himself, but was secured. A dog was in the carriage, and when the crash came he landed safely in the street. The damage was to the carriage and harness.

The Pussy-Will O supper at the Congregational church Wednesday evening, given by the Ladies' Benevolent society, proved a drawing attraction, fully 100 people partaking of the appetizing viands. The tables were decorated with branches of the fluffy harbinger of spring, pussy willows, and at each plate was a card on which were two wee "pussys," deftly supplied with heads and caudal appendages by a promising artist, accompanied by the query "Who will sing me to sleep tonight? Pussy Will O." Mrs. Duprez had charge of the entertainment in the parlors later in the evening, which consisted of selections from a gramophone, manipulated by Reuben Smith, readings by Miss Amy Briggs and Mrs. Duprez, piano solo by Miss Alice Nixon and an amusing original rhyme by Lucius Daniels.

Rev. F. A. Bisbee, D. D., of Boston preached last evening to a good audience at the Universalist Lenten service. Dr. Bisbee's theme was "Going On Unto Perfection." The main thought was that the progressive spirit in the churches, having torn down and cleared away many things which would have destroyed religion if they had not been themselves destroyed, it is now the business of all who have become enlightened to build up a new and an earnest and a consecrated spiritual life, and that only as we do so can we make even the preparatory work which has been done of any avail. The world needs saving, and if we have not wrought out better means for the work we have accomplished nothing. But great changes are coming about and coming fast, and the world is realizing its need of religion to help and restrain, and the men who are enlightened and consecrated have a great opportunity and responsibility.

Instructive and Interesting.

At the meeting of the Alden club on Monday evening Mrs. Ray greeted the members most pleasantly after her absence of several weeks. She spoke of Mrs. Murphy's postponed recital and urged all members to assist in making it a financial success on April 9 at Dean academy. Miss King gave an interesting report of the meeting of the State Federation at Charlestown, at which she represented the Alden club. The subject of the National Federation tax was discussed, and it was voted to collect the amount due ($11.30) by individual subscriptions of ten cents each, members of the club to act as collectors. An executive board meeting was appointed for Tuesday, March 13, at 4 o'clock, at the home of Miss King.

Miss Laura Blake then took charge of the program and called for current events, to which Mrs. Winsor responded with a bright story of Queen Victoria's true hospitality, shown in the manner of her entertaining a large council of women whom she received at Windsor Castle. Miss Blake opened her subject of "Banks and Banking" with several bright anecdotes illustrative of women's business sagacity. She spoke briefly of the origin of banks and their development from simple money repositories to the complicated banking system of the present day. She then made her talk most practical and instructive by telling of the four kinds of banks in Massachusetts, Trust, Co operative, Savings and National banks, giving a short description of trust banks and their management. Mrs. Doe read a short paper upon co operative banks, and Mrs. Stewart described savings banks and their workings.

Miss Blake then spoke of national banks, giving a remarkably clear explanation of the way in which they are conducted. She also explained the different kinds of money used in this country and presented many useful and interesting facts in a pleasing and entertaining manner.

The subject of the next lecture on March 26, by Prof. Lewis of Tufts college, will be "Musical Taste: Its Present State and Future Development." The meeting was then adjourned.

Half-Hour Trips.

The Woonsocket electrics will run on Saturday at half-hour intervals, commencing at 8.15 a. m. and continuing till 11.15 p. m., when the last car will leave Woonsocket for the car barn. On Sunday the cars will also leave on half-hour time, commencing at 12.15 p. m. This will accommodate the public as the pleasanter days come on.

Mrs. Charles Rand is meeting with excellent success in selling the "Life of Moody, the Chapman edition. Before this was published Mr. Moody's son wrote Mr, Chapman that he considered him just the man to write of his father, as they had been associated so long. Although the son has also written a book his relations with Mr. Chapman are still cordial and pleasant. Mrs. Rand, will call and show the book if you desire.

Dr. John T. Stetson Gone.

Dr. John Thorndyke Stetson, the well-known and popular dentist for many years, died Sunday at the Whedden hospital in Everett, aged 62 years. Dr. Stetson was a native of Lincolnville, Me., coming to Boston when a young man. He learned his profession in the office of Dr. Miller, and at the Harvard Medical school. He developed unusual skill in his vocation, and was among the earliest to demonstrate the practicability and value of the crown and bridge work now in universal use. For many years he had offices in Concord and Franklin, in connection with his Boston office. His practice was extensive, and his clients among the first rank of intelligent people. His love for his native state, her woods and waters, was unbounded. Several weeks each year found him an ardent sportsman among her rugged hills, where he sought and found relief from the exacting cares of his profession. He was prominently connected with the Megantic club, the Mass. Fish and Game Protective association and kindred organizations. His modesty, loyalty and simplicity of character endeared him to a large circle of friends. His wife, Clara Simmonds, died in April, 1880. She was a sister-in-law of ex-Governor George D. Robinson. One brother was killed in a railroad accident a number of years ago. One sister lives in Melrose. His aged mother is now living in Seattle, Wash., with his sister, Mrs. A. C. Thompson. Four brothers are living also in Seattle, Wash.

The death of Dr. Stetson was not unexpected to those who knew him intimately. The relentless disease with which he battled so manfully never released its hold, nor paused in its destructive march. For over thirty years he had been thoroughly identified with the best life of Franklin. With his marvellous skill the firm bond between himself and patients yearly increased in strength. Faith in his sterling integrity and rugged manhood grew with the years. The entire community of Franklin felt a just pride of ownership in the magnificent type which he represented. Loving appreciation ever followed his footsteps in our midst. With aching hearts his loyal friends unwillingly noted the declining vigor, the wearied brain [illegible] faltering hand until the instruments of precision were ready to fall from his nerveless grasp! His wish seemed to be to fall in the ranks with armor on. Unflinching from pain, disaster or impending doom he went his way uncomplainingly to the last, and when the inevitable hour was marked upon his dial of life he surveyed his surroundings with the same philosophy that had ever been characteristic of the man.

His warmest friends were indeed a host. Firm faith in his skill and integrity was unshaken. The ravages of disease were forgotten, the lapses of memory overlooked, unquestioning belief in his ultimate recovery was kept alive and alert by wishes that were parent to a groundless hope. The fragrant memory of Dr. John Thorndyke Stetson will linger years in the annals of Franklin. By the side of his youthful wife he sleeps in Lexington's hallowed ground.

A large number of prominent Boston people attended the funeral services Wednesday at the Unitarian church in Lexington. Rev. A. St. John Chambre of Lowell officiated, and the music was by the Ruggles Street quartet. The pall bearers were Hon. A. E. Pillsbury, G. W. Wiggin, Charles J. McKenzie, W. B. Hastings, J. Russell Reed and P. H. Conney. Large delegations were present from the Massachusetts Fish and Game Protective Association, Megantic Club, Tibonet Club and the Excelsior Lodge of Masons at Lexington, in all of which organizations he was an active member. The following representatives of the Masonic Lodge here, were present: George W. Wiggin, Esq., E. P. Chapman, H. R. Jenks, W.A.Wyckoff. Others present were Dr. M. E. Pond, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. McKenzie, Mrs. George W. Wiggin, Charles Stewart and A. D. Thayer.

Perfecting the Work.

The experiments in the line of working flax fibre into cloth, which have been going on here for some time, are claimed to have proved entirely satisfactory and the success of the enterprise assured. The plan of operations is to have the fibre separated from the core at or near the flax fields in the west and the fibre shipped to the east for linen production. This part will be the new work of the mills at Slatersville.

Some of the machinery which was made or fitted in the east and sent west some months ago, it is said, did not come up to expectations in the work, but since changes have been made which fill the need. The next step in the enterprise will be to invent a way to utilize the core or remaining part of the flax plant, and it is believed that this can be done and the material converted into paper stock.

IN THE WAKE OF THE SWALLOWS.

The Saratoga of North Carolina—A Mountain Park at Hot Springs.

Mountain Park Hotel,
Hot Springs, N. C.,
March 10, 1900.

It is but a run of forty miles from here to Asheville, but it is an hour spent amid some of the most picturesque scenery to be found in the Southern states. The railway runs upon a narrow ledge cut from the solid rock the whole distance, following the hundred curves and bends of the French Broad river, which widens and deepens, leaps and dashes itself impetuously over its rocky bed down hill at the rate of fifteen hundred feet drop to the distance.

First on one side of the car and then the other, as we sweep across bridges and bring the flowing stream to right or left, the overhanging pinnaces and rugged crags seem about to touch the window, or seen across the foaming rapids rise from one hundred to four hundred feet in height masses of solitary and wild castellated steeps, enriched with firs whose greenery contrasts with the mighty giants of gray or fawn into which they have struck their iron roots. The singular impetuosity of the river, full to the brim and frothing over natural dams of rock, roaring in deep, sylvan organ-tones of nature's harmony, awe the being into stillness, and only the "rush of civilization" in the still swifter train breaks the silence of our watching.

In summer these stupendous hills are masses of bloom, so sweet and luxuriant that the vast gorge formed by the river is a tunnel of delicate odors from huge grape vines as large as a ship's cable and long enough to tie ten war ships together. Rhododendron mountain is one great pyramid of those magnificent blooms with which we so carefully decorate our northern parks, and the roots of the shrub are so large and the wood so susceptible of fine polish that the natives fashion them into large yellow vases, embossed by nature with intricate patterns and embroideries. Here, too, grows the ginseng, a beautiful plant closely resembling the sarsaparilla. Even fifty years ago forty thousand dollars' worth of the roots were exported each year to the far away empire of the Chinese Mikado. His people are about the only nation that has any use for it, but for centuries to them it has been essential. The "Heathen Chinee" is nothing if not superstitious, and this ginseng has been an article of commerce with him from time immemorial. Why? Because it is a lucky plant. Formerly it was obtained exclusively from Tartary, and the Tartars were in the habit of saying that they could never find it except by shooting a magic arrow, which fell invariably where the plant was abundant. The Chinese call it the "food of immortality," and they declare it to be a remedy for every inherited evil, wholesome for the frail in body, refreshing for the memory, calming the wild passions and bestowing inexpressible delight. And here, on the mountain that frowns down on my window, thousands of pounds are produced, and at about sixty cents a pound prove indeed lucky to the exporter.

The tiny town of Hot Springs is a veritable surprise. As if emerging from a tunnel, we suddenly slip out of the great canon behind and come upon an open plateau of some thousands of acres, flat as a table, surrounded by river and creek

New Appointments.

The selectmen made the following appointments of town officers after organizing last Saturday night: Special policemen, Charles R. Gowen, William G. Cody, Kervin R. Jewett, George Bourbeau, Joseph T. Hutchinson, Fred L. Davis, Edmund J. Rockwood, William Redpath, Charles Badger; surveyors of lumber, William Rockwood, Clarence H. Woodward, Elmer M. Wadsworth, Walter M. Fisher; measurers of wood and bark, William Rockwood, T. Jefferson Daniels, Norman B. Stone, Clarence H. Woodward, Alexander H. Haggart, K. R. Jewett, Wilton A. Pond, Elmer M. Wadsworth, T. B. Allen, Edward St. John; measurers of grain, Frank D. Metcalf, Elmer M. Wadsworth, James F. Ray, Clarence H. Woodward, Nathan B. Arnold, William Rookwood; weighers of coal and hay, Joseph E. Clark, Nathan B. Arnold, Clarence H. Woodward, Kervin R. Jewett, Alexander M. Haggart, James F. Ray, Elmer M. Wadsworth; sealer of weights and measures, Fred L. Davis; inspector of kerosene oil, Fred L. Davis; agents for burial of soldiers, Edwin A. Mason, Walter M. Fisher; keeper of the lockup, Fred L. Davis; auctioneers, Lewis R. Whitaker, David W. Corson. The appointments of night officer, liquor officer and superintendent of streets will probably go over until after the adjourned town meeting.

Richardson's Market.

Recently we advertised a sale of roast beef and cleaned up every pound. The public got good worth for their money. This week our line of chickens, fowls, turkeys, meats, vegetables, etc., has been selected with unusual care, the price being as low as the lowest and the quality as high as the highest. We can't be beaten on canned goods. Try our butter. Finest coffee in town, 25, 30 and 35 cts; Budlong's famous pickles, plain and mixed, 10c; farmers' fresh eggs only 20c.

COMMUNICATIONS.

[The editor assumes no responsibility for matter under this caption. This column is entirely at the disposal of the public, avoiding, as far a possible, trivial and controversial matter.]

The parents of more than 500 towns and cities of the United States, moved by the tragedies of juvenile crime, have recently ordained—acting co-operatively through their town and city councils—that their children shall come home at night at the signal of a so-called curfew bell, which usually rings at 8 o'clock in winter, at 9 in summer.

Those who argue against the revival of the "curfew" as a return to medievalism show ignorance of history or lack of poetry. The ancient curfew applied to old and young alike. The modern curfew has only the poetic resemblance of being an evening bell. As well object to modern uses of the words "chivalry" and "crusade," because these words in medieval times meant war. Those who argue that parents should regulate this matter, forget that government is but the co-operative act of parents, who need to act together in cities and villages. Nowhere can curfew be established except at the request of parents expressed in ballots and petitions. The law no more interferes with parental rights and personal liberty than kindred laws on compulsory education and child labor, now fully established in the most enlightened commonwealths. The school and the curfew bell are equally justified as necessary safeguards of public morals and prospective citizenship. Laws forbidding the sale of liquors, tobacco and corrupt literature to [illegible] have long since illustrated the [illegible] of the state to protect immature you[illegible] Gladstone's great saying that it is the chief purpose of law to make it as hard as possible to do wrong and as easy as possible to do right, applies pre-eminently to laws to protect minors. Will any intelligent view of personal liberty justify turning infants loose to play with poisons and razors?—Selected by E. D. Daniels.

Don't Miss It.

"The Missouri Girl" is the best comedy you will have a chance to witness this season. The date is Thursday evening, March 22. One of the brightest things that has cropped out of late is Fred Raymond's domestic play, "The Missouri Girl," which depicts principally the country life in southwest Missouri during the exciting times when lead and zinc ore was being discovered in large quantities in nearly every farmer's door yard or corn field. Mr. Raymond has discovered an entire new set of stage characters that are out of the ordinary run of those usually found in plays of this class. The plot is interesting and keeps the audience spellbound from start to finish. The comedy is natural and not forced and is excruciatingly funny. A number of original ideas are brought out in such a way as to bring forth an immense amount of laughter. The scenery used in the production was reproduced from photographs taken in the picturesque Ozark mountains, the principal lead and zinc mining district of the world.

At the Head.

In cycle construction each year brings out some new feature to add to the comfort of the wheelmen. This year it is the coaster break. To meet this demand the Waltham Manufacturing company have just brought out the "Orient Morrow" model. This model is equipped with the Morrow coaster break, which is acknowledged by all to be the best of the many coaster devices now on the market. If you are to buy a wheel this season be sure and see the "Orient Morrow" before closing your bargain. Sample now in stock at the Orient Cycle Agency, 72 Union street, Franklin, Mass.

FRIDAY, MARCH 16, 1900

REV. CHARLES SHELDON'S Topeka Capital is out, and, despite all criticism urged against it, in one respect it is a success. Mr. Sheldon endeavors to show what is his idea of a newspaper conducted upon the lines that Jesus would approve. No one who knows him can truthfully assert that he has done this for notoriety, but as a great moral lesson. As such it is a success. His opinion may differ from others; both may be partially wrong. Much of the criticism against the paper after its appearance can be traced to two motives: One is aimed by those who do not believe in Jesus; another is aimed by those whose professional jealousy permits them to overlook Mr. Sheldon's motive. The honest criticism, by a friend of Christianity, whose opinion differs from Mr Sheldon's will be welcomed by that gentleman in the spirit in which it is offered, and should the experiment ever be tried again, which is doubtful, would have weight with him, whomsoever should attempt it.

What the President Said.

THESE are the exact words of President McKinley, spoken only a couple of months ago before the politicians and trusts got after him, and any attempt now to disavow it, or throw the responsibility upon congress can but react upon him:

"It must be borne in mind that since the cession of Porto Rico she has been denied the principal markets she had long enjoyed, and our tariff has been continued against her products as when she was under Spanish sovereignty.

"The markets of Spain are closed to her products except upon terms to which the commerce of all nations is subjected. The island of Cuba, which used to buy her cattle and tobacco without customs duties, now imposes the same duties on these products as from any other country entering her ports.

"She has, therefore, lost her free intercourse with Spain and Cuba without any compensating benefits in this market. The markets of the United States should be opened up to her products. Our plain duty is to abolish all customs tariffs between the United States and Porto Rico and give her products free access to our markets

One Reason Why.

"I'm not surprised," remarked the debonair dry goods drummer, "that those people down in Kentucky don't drink any more water than they do. I have just heard from a customer of mine in Eminence, a pleasant town not far from Louisville, that a well-known citizen there, who has been troubled for a long time with a hacking cough had a severe spell of coughing the other day and raised two square blocks of some kind of hard substance. His son sent them down to a Louisville chemist, who reported that they were blocks of limestone, caused by the limestone water the cougher had been drinking. I may add that the cough doesn't trouble him any more, but just think of the liability a man is subjected to down there of having his bronchial tubes and his alimentary canal macadamized from Dan to Beersheeba. I'd rather drink moonshine than run such a risk as that. I shore would."—Washington Star.

Over Twenty Uses for Corn.

The Indian corn propaganda at the Paris exposition and the conventions recently held in the west, in the interest of corn producers have brought out the fact that over 20 important products are now manufactured from corn. One of the most important products is distilled spirits, the demand for which has increased greatly since the invention of smokeless powder, in the manufacture of which the spirits are largely used. Among the other products made from corn are mixing glucose, crystal glucose, grape sugar, anhydrous grape sugar, special sugar, pearl starch, powdered starch, refined grits, flourine, dextrine, British gum, granulated gum, gum paste, corn oil, corn oil cake, rubber substitute, gluten feed, chop feed, gluten meal and corn germ. With the present economical methods of manufacture not a particle of corn is wasted. There is no refuse.—California Vineyardist.

Game in South Africa.

The South African game animals have, in recent years, been quickly disappearing on account of sportsmen, disease and other causes more or less due to the advance of civilization. In the case of many species the numbers have dwindled from immense herds to only a scattered few preserved in a semiwild state on the farms of some of the natives and settlers. There can be little doubt that the present war will still further diminish the numbers of large animals, and some of them probably, as the whitetailed gnu, will be entirely exterminated, for the Boers, not having proper commissariat arrangements, will undoubtedly slaughter the gnu and other animals fit for food.—N. Y. Herald.

In the Australian Bush.

Dr. Semon started from Jena with the intention of spending two years in the Australian bush, studying the life history of those extraordinary animals, the ornithorhynchus, or water mole, the echidna and the lung-fish, or ceratodus. He has just published the results in an interesting book of science and adventure. The water mole, as the colonists term it, when feeding rakes up the mud with its duck like beak and stows away worms, snails and mussels in its cheek-pouches for further consumption. Its thick, horny jaws take the place of teeth and are well adapted for cracking shellfish. The ceratodus confines itself to fresh water and in general habits resembles a newt.—Chicago Tribune.

IN THE WAKE OF THE SWALLOWS.

like an island, and holding in its midst the great house which is sought by travelers from one year's end to the other. For, springing out of the earth, geyser-like, for untold centuries have come two streams, one hot, one cold, side by side, which are "for the healing of the nations," like the leaves of the Tree of Life. Almost the counterpart of the waters at Aix les Bains, they contain no sulphur with its nauseating odors nor are much tinged by color, but have the softest, soapiest feeling, as if our good earth-mother had spared nothing to cleanse suffering humanity of its varied ills.

The temperature is from 96 to 110 degrees, and in marble tanks for swimming, in "packs" for inducing perspiration, reducing flesh, soothing pain, and finally curing such ills as gout, rheumatism, sciatica, nervous prostration and insomnia. The guests regularly file into the bath rooms and luxuriate in a daily and sometimes three times daily bath.

Our table companion, a gentleman whose vigorous personality attracted our admiration, exclaimed, "But you should have seen me when I arrived a week ago! I only weigh 180 now! I have taken three baths a day and lost two pounds every bath. I feel like a new creature!" He looked like one!

The Wana-Luna Golf club is located here and has a jolly little Swiss chalet of a club house on the grounds, the links extending along the margins of the streams all around the house. Here we find fully an eighth of a mile of glass-faced piazza, while certainly another eighth is open to the winds and sunshine. Everything is huge, like the hills above and around; big, luxurious rooms for games, reading or writing; great fireplaces with logs ablaze, and such has been the constant popularity and attraction of the thermal waters for 100 years that huge buildings have been required to accommodate the visitors to this region. Even in the old house, many years ago, the ball-room was 230 feet long, and music, flirting, dancing, riding, fishing, bowling, bathing, flower-hunting, view climbing and hunting make up the varied pleasures and employments of both sexes.

The narrow ravine containing the French Broad will only permit just room enough for the railroad and one wagon road. The latter, in former days being the only means of communication, was busy with loads of merchandise, people on horseback, country wagons with produce and family carriages. Colonel Rumbough, one of the old residents, tells me that he has seen from 40,000 to 50,000 hogs in one drove, stretching along the river road in strings, for forty miles. Now, of course, much of this traffic has ceased and we see rather the elegant equipage conveying a party to the famous Painted Rocks, which, six miles below, situated directly on the Tennessee line, are a brotherhood of perpendicular cliffs, so remarkable and beautiful that few fail to visit them.

They are of limestone, and rise from the margin of the French Broad to the height of two, three and four hundred feet. They are of a yellowish cast, owing to the drippings of a mineral water, and in form as irregular and fantastic as can well be imagined. They extend along the river nearly a mile and at every step present new phases of beauty and grandeur. Taken separately, it requires but a trifling effort of the fancy to find among them towers, ramparts and moats, steeples and domes in abundance; but when taken as a whole, and viewed from the opposite bank of the river, they present the appearance of a once magnificent city in ruins.

The whole vicinage of Hot Springs is full of deep interest to the geologist, the botanist, the scientist, the invalid and the general tourist. It has been called, and I think not in exaggeration, "The Switzerland of America." Although the peaks of the Great Smokies are seldom mantled with snow, they resemble in contour the more picturesque ranges of Europe, and if one could but enter into the life of the strange people living among them we doubtless should find those peculiarities and traits of character which only belong to hardy mountaineers.

STAGE KISSES ARE GENUINE.

The Theater-Going Public Demands Realism Even in Stage Love-Making.

Embraces and kisses are rehearsed with the extremest care. They must have an impulsive manner. They must look sufficiently fervid. It is a curious sight that of two players who are to express the ardent love which Shakespeare has written for his "Romeo and Juliet," but who at rehearsal, in modern clothes and no accessories of glamour, practice a kiss as mechanically and unfeelingly as though it were—as it is then—utterly devoid of sentiment. There must be no hesitation nor clumsiness. Romeo is not permitted to decide whether to throw both arms around his sweetheart or only one, or which. Nor may Juliet be shy or forward, yielding or resisting, as she chooses. The director will place their arms for them if they do not themselves make a picturesque exhibit of tenderness. And the kiss? Shall it be delivered by the wooer on the lips of the woman, or on brow, or cheek? That question is considered and settled. Are kisses on the stage genuine? Well, not at rehearsals, except, maybe, once or twice in order to show the effect fully. An actress would resent a real kiss at a rehearsal except when necessary. For the satisfaction of natural curiosity on that point it may be told right here that most of the kisses in the public performances of plays are actual kisses.—Franklin Fyles, in Ladies' Home Journal.

A Life and Death Fight.

Mr. W. A. Hines of Manchester, Ia., writing of his almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles induced serious lung trouble, which ended in consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed night and day. All my doctors said I must soon die. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, which completely cured me. I would not be without it even if it cost me $5.00 a bottle. Hundreds have used it on my recommendation and say it never fails to cure throat, chest and lung troubles." Regular size 50c and $1.00. Beer Barrel Marks.

The crosses of Xs on a barrel of beer signify degrees of quality nowadays. But originally they were put on by those ancient monks as a sort of trademark. NOVEL INSURANCE SCHEMES.

One in Holland That Does Not Encourage the Girls to Rush into Matrimony.

"Why marry when you can get a good pension at the age of 40 by remaining single?" Such is the startling and enticing notice exhibited in Holland. The object of this company is to provide a pension for females who have been able to withstand, up to that time of life, the alluring offers of the opposite sex. Only young girls are admitted as members.

Each member pays a small sum yearly, beginning at the age of 13. Should a member so far forget herself as to contract a matrimonial alliance, she immediately forfeits all her rights. Should she, on the other hand, remain single up to 40 years of age, she gets her pension. Many take advantage of this system and remain single until the time limit has expired, draw their pension and then marry.

The owner of an extensive bathing machine business at a well-known resort this summer hit upon a novel insurance scheme. He had a large number of coupons printed and offered them to his customers at one pence each; the coupon entitled the purchaser's heir to the sum of $1,250 should the holder of the ticket lose his life by drowning while using one of the proprietor's bathing machines. The tickets were available for one day only.

The novel and original method of insuring a person's life "caught on," nearly every customer purchased a ticket, and as the man's connection was a very large one, the sale of insurance tickets amounted daily to some hundreds, and at the same time it helped largely to increase his circle of patrons. Not one claim up to the present time has been paid, and it does not seem as if any casualty is likely to take place, seeing that two or three men in boats are always on the scene in case of an emergency.—N. Y. Times.

Dangerous Ground.

"What's this?" asked the German emperor.

"A century plant," answered the royal botanist. "It is on record that it bloomed at the beginning of the nineteenth century. So of course it will bloom again at the beginning of the twentieth century."

"H'm! Well, it wants to look out. If it doesn't get a bud on itself and blossom before 1901 it's liable to get into jail for lese majeste."—Washington Star.

A Primitive Barometer.

A curious barometer is said to be used by the remnant of the Araucarian race, which inhabit the southernmost province of Chili. It consists of the cast-off shell of a crab. The dead shell is white in fair, dry weather, but, indicating the approach of a moist atmosphere by small red spots, as the moisture of the air increases it becomes entirely red and remains so throughout the rainy season.—N. Y. Herald.

The "High School" Horse.

A great deal of trouble is expended in educating the showy, high-stepping horse. He is trained to step high and act showily by being driven along a path whereon rails are set crosswise. He steps high to avoid stumbling, and in time always steps high.—N. Y. World.

GONDOLA'S EXPERIENCES

By George Ade.

"GONDOLA" WILSON was not a tramp, because he knew a trade and he had been known to work. He was a tramp in this, however, that he consistently refused to pay railway fares. Hence his name. "Gondola" is submerged tenth for "flat car."

He was a journeyman of the restless kind. When he had been three weeks in Milwaukee, then St. Paul seemed a more desirable place of residence. When in St. Paul he had a tired hankering to see the Narcissus lodging house in Chicago. After he had arrived at the Narcissus he began to watch the trains starting for Cincinnati and longed to curl himself on a truck and jolt away to where the muddy stream fronts the sloping warehouses.

Once he was away from the Narcissus for a whole year. During his absence he had been "put away." To be "put away" is to be held prisoner in a penal or reformatory institution.

The purpose of this story is to relate how "Gondola" Wilson, having no criminal intent, became a criminal under circumstances which are not usual.

On the day of his return to the Narcissus (the prison pallor on his face and his head cropped to show the white scars) six inmates were sitting near the windows reading a morning newspaper. They had torn the paper into sheets and divided it. The man who had drawn the small "ads" was discontented. He could find nothing on his sheet except "Help Wanted." He lowered his paper, and before him sat "Gondola" Wilson, seeming yellow in the filtered light.

"Where's the committee?" asked "Gondola." "Where's the triumphal arch: 'Welcome Home?' "

"You're alive, then?"

"Alive an' kickin.' "

"If you're alive, it follows that you're kickin'. How long has it been?"

"A year—next month."

"We missed you when it come to the round-up last fall. Nobody'd seen you. You've been under a roof, ain't you? Hospital?"

"Put away—a year."

"You had to go crooked at last, did you?"

"Well, that's what they called it. I'm lucky they didn't hang me. Some of 'em wanted to."

"Tell me what you done. I ain't the court."

"Say, listen, an' see if ever you heard the likes before. It wuz in October—a year ago last October. I'd walked from Loueyville over to Terry Hut with a nigger that played the mouth harp. We hid in the yards at Terry Hut an' got into an empty stock that we thought wuz headed for Danville. Some time in the night a brakeman seen us an' fired us out. I'd been asleep, an' the first thing I remember was fallin' out o' the car an' lightin' hard, with the coon comin' after me. We didn't know where we wuz, but could make out a side track an' a chute for loadin' hogs. About a mile off we could see some lights, an' we judged we wuz near a purty good-sized town. Me an' the coon started to walk toward the town, an' then I stopped him an' says: 'Here, if we go to-drillin' around town at this time o' night an' one o' them country coppers gets a peek at us, he'll shoot us first an' then ask us our names afterward. Let's crawl in somewheres an' sleep till mornin' an' then we'll go in town an' try to round up a hand-out.' Well, just as I wuz sayin' this, we happened to be walkin' along past a tall fence. I looked through the cracks an' could see one or two lights quite a distance off, an' right near us wuz a long buildin' that looked somethin' like a barn. It wuz gettin' chilly an' I said to this pardner of mine: 'Coon, gi' me a boost over this fence an' I think we can find a warm place here.' So we skinned over the fence an' come to this buildin'. It wuz big an' I still thought it wuz a barn. We walked around, lookin' for a door or window, so't we could crawl in. At last this pardner of mine—his name 'uz Jeff an' I'll kill him if ever I lay eyes on him again—Jeff found a little door that wuzn't locked, an' we went in, feelin' our way along, thinkin', you know, that we might find some hay or straw to sleep on. Purty soon Jeff fell over somethin' an' I landed on top of him. We felt around us an' discovered that we'd run into a lot o' watermelons layin' on the floor. I s'pose the coon was sorry to meet them melons, wuzn't he? The first thing I knew he'd split one of 'em open, an' I could hear him chompin' in the dark. Well, I got up an' felt my way along, an' purty soon I reached out an' what do you s'pose I took holt of there in the pitch dark? A plate with about a dozen biscuits on it. Now, I ain't no crook an' I never broke into a house to steal anything, but I'll leave this to you. If you hadn't had anything to eat for 18 hours an' should happen to crawl into a barn at night an' reach out into the dark an' find a dozen light biscuits, would you eat 'em or throw 'em away?"

"I'd prob'ly eat 'em," was the reply.

"That's what I done, except what I give to Jeff. He found a match in his cloze an' struck it, an' we saw in front of us a wooden shelf covered with pies an' cakes, an' all kinds o' cooked stuff. The match only burned for a minute, but we made out that much. Jeff found a plate o' butter, an' we et the biscuit with butter, an' I ain't tasted anything like it since I ran away from home in Lowell 30 years ago. Then Jeff broke a cake in two an' give me half of it. It wuz kind o' dry eatin', but we put lots of butter on it. I s'pose I ought to have stopped an' remembered that all this provender belonged to somebody, but I was so blamed hungry I didn't wait to think of nothin'. An' I must say I never seen anybody eat the way that coon did. I didn't exactly see him eat, neither, but I could hear him all right. After he et all the cakes an' pies an biscuits he could lay his hands on he went back to watermelon, an' I could hear him sloshin' an' gulpin' there in the dark. I started to feel around for a soft place to lay down, an' what do you guess? I run into a lot of bed close strung on lines."

"Say, what kind of a pipe is this?" asked the listener, with a sidewise turn in his chair, indicating skepticism.

"It's the truth, every word of it. There must a' been a dozen quilts. I pulled 'em down an' me an' Jeff rolled ourselves up in 'em an' went to sleep. We'd et a lot an' it wuz a cold night, an' under them warm covers we slept like a couple o' logs. Well, the next thing I remember somebody was shakin' me good an' hard, an' I looked up at a fellow that had a tin star on his coat an' a broomstick in his hand. I kin'o' remembered what had happened an' looked around. It wuz broad daylight. We laid there in the infernalest mess of eatables you ever see. People wuz pilin' through the doors to get a look at us. I don't s'pose you've figured out what we'd done, so I'll tell you. This place we'd got into wuz what they call floral hall at the county fair. All the stuff we'd been eatin' wuz the exhibitions of the best biscuits, the best watermelons, the best cake, the best butter, an' so on, of the whole county. You know the quilt I had around me. It wuz made out of about a million little pieces o' silk. The woman that made it put in 15 years on it, an' it wuz supposed to be worth $200. That all come out at the trial."

HE COULD FIND NOTHING BUT "HELP WANTED."

"Well, there must a' been a sore crowd o' grangers around there," suggested the listener, after he had leaned back and laughed joyfully.

"Honest, it's a wonder they didn't kill us. We come mighty near bustin' up the whole show by eatin' them exhibitions. When they led us out o' the grounds an' took us in town to the jail there wuz a big crowd followed us an' hollered: 'Lynch 'em!' 'String 'em up!' an' a few more remarks like that. That wuz the one time I wuz in a hurry to be in jail. Do you know what they made of it when it came to a trial? Burglary! An' do you know what Jeff done? He got up an' swore that I'd hypnotized him. He testified that he didn't want to go into this buildin' at all, but I made him by threatenin' to cast a spell over him. You never heard such lyin' in your life. They sent him back to jail for three months an' put me over the road for a year. They bleached me just about right, ain't they? That's all right. Look here."

He put his hand into a raveled side pocket and brought out a copy of Henry George's "Progress and Poverty." He made a deeper reach and found a brass "knucks" with a blunt head and three staring finger-holds.

"I'm savin' that for the coon," he said.—Chicago Daily Record.

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA

will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

Finding Thackeray Out.

In Mr. Lewis Melville's recent life of Thackeray there is a diverting description of the first meeting of the great novelist and Charlotte Bronte. She had formed an ideal and expected him to live up to it, and, austere little genius that she was, was inclined to be angry with her favorites if their conversation or conduct fell below her ideal. "Behold, a lion cometh out of the north!" she whispered, as he entered the room. "O Lord!" said Thackeray, when this was repeated to him, "and I'm nothing but a poor devil of an Englishman, ravenous for my dinner!" She sat opposite to him at table. "I had," he says, "the miserable humiliation of seeing her ideal of me disappearing down my own throat, as everything went into my mouth and nothing came out of it. At last, as I took my fifth potato, she leaned across, with clasped hands and tears in her eyes, and breathed imploringly: 'O Mr. Thackeray! Don't!' "—Youth's Companion.

ECONOMY OF FUEL.

The Range Should First of All Be In Perfect Order—How to Put on Coal.

To kindle any fire small sticks should be laid across each other, basket fashion, with paper below. See that the drafts and dampers are all open, the upper front check closed, and apply the match before a bit of coal is put upon the wood. When it has begun to burn well, put on one shovelful, allowing the air to pass through unchecked so as to kindle that. In a short time more may be added, then more, and when the coal begins to glow red shut one draft, then another.

Turn out of doors the first person who dares to dream of using kerosene to help start a fire, and severely admonish her who persists in filling the firebox to the top of stove or range. That is the way to burn out or crack the stove and to destroy the firebrick. Besides, it chokes the draft, causing less heat to be given out. A hot fire is a clear fire, with the draft coming unchecked through the bottom damper. The persons who boil their tea are the same that fill the range as full as it will hold, and when it fails, as it then must, to give out the needed heat, take off the cover and punch and poke it down from above, thus crowding the coal into a still more compact mass. Such a housekeeper has her range speedily filled with clinkers and wastes much fuel.

A neglected range implies ignorance and indifference. How many there are who complain of a poor oven, yet allow soot to accumulate above and below it, no census has estimated. Neglect means poor cooking and waste. Clinkers, too, should be watched for in the firebox and broken off as soon as they appear. It is a too common fashion to fill the range, leave the dampers all open, and let the fire burn as it will till reduced to debris. Then dump in more coal and throw in some kindlings first and continue as before. On the contrary, the fire should be watched and a little coal added at a time, with the dampers only opened before meal time. In this way alone can a good fire be economically maintained. For a young housekeeper it is needful to note these things. Otherwise the ashes will be half coal, to the detriment of the household exchequer.—Boston Budget.

SUGAR FOR SOLDIERS.

Some Experiments Made in Germany Prove Its Value as a Strength-Imparting Ration.

A paper was read recently at Metz, Germany, by Dr. Leitensdorfer, at a meeting of the local Army Surgeons' society, on the subject of the use of sugar as food in the army. The lecturer based his remarks upon personal observations. In three companies of soldiers ten men without means and of weak constitution were used for the tests, and ten stronger men to control the same. Before the experiments began, the weight, pulse at rest and pulse at work, and respiration were taken for each individual. The stronger man having a pulse at rest of 80 or less showed an increase of 8 to 15 beats at work; the weaker ones, when subjected to the identical exercise, showed an increase as high as 30 beats above 90 or over.

The sugar men received seven, and later on ten to twelve lumps of sugar a day, each lump being equal to five grammes. In some cases the amount was increased up to 27 grammes a day. The result of the experiemnt was the following: In scientific sense a favorable influence upon the capacity of the individual was shown at 50 to 60 grammes a day, added to the regular ration, the pulse and respiration being lower while at work than with those not fed on sugar, and then the men fed on sugar showing an increase of weight greater than those who did not eat the sugar. The favorable influence of the sugar upon the muscles and the heart exhibited itself in greater endurance. From a practical point of view it was determined: 1. That men like sugar and it agrees with them. 2. That sugar satisfies both hunger and thirst. 3. That sugar gives quick relief in case of hunger, faintness and exhaustion, owing to the fact that it is easily absorbed.

The Agricultural Society of France on March 3, at the instance of its president, M. S. Tetard, resolved to request the government to allow a more important place to sugar in the army rations. The request has led to an order by the minister of war to the corps commanders to make experiments for the purpose of determining if, and to what extent, the addition of sugar to the ration would be profitable in the field.—Beet Sugar Gazette.

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile of Washita, I. T. He writes "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by A. C. Mason & Co., druggists. Guaranteed.

Degeneration.

A saying credited to a daughter of a cabinet minister is going the rounds these days. It relates to an actress who recently played an engagement here, and it was made, I am told, at a dinner party one evening. The topic of conversation was the play and the actress.

"I didn't care for her," said somebody. "I think she has grown too stout. She doesn't act nearly so well as she used. Don't you think she has lost ground?" this to the cabinet minister's daughter.

"Yes," answered she, "growing stout hasn't improved her work. She seems to be suffering, in fact, from fatty degeneration of her art."—Washington Post.

Frost Flowers.

The phenomenon called "frost flowers" was discussed before the Biological society in Washington recently by Dr. L. H. Dewey. The so-called flowers are composed of ice which forms on frosty mornings in autumn and early winter on certain plants. The peculiar thing to be explained is that frost flowers do not form on all plants, but only on about 26 species, as far as yet known. Among these are frost weed, dittany, marsh fleabanes and cultivated heliotrope. The phenomenon is apparently due to capillary movement of water in the plant, but a wholly satisfactory explanation is lacking.—Youth's Companion.

An Author in Embryo.

The art of writing a short story must seem to be easy to many people, and they never realize its difficulty until they try. In a southern school the teacher, as an educational experiment, assigned each pupil the task of writing an original story.

On the day when the stories were read a bright little towhead arose and started in as follows:

"On the green slope of a mountain stood a first-class Jersey cow, with three legs."

"That won't do, Johnnie," interrupted the teacher, "you are one leg short."

"No, I ain't," replied the future author. "You don't wait to get my plot, which is that a railroad train cut off one leg, and the owner of the cow got $3,000 damages, and moved his whole family to Paris in time for the exposition, where the girls will be married to rich Frenchmen and die happy ever afterward!"—Golden Days.

PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin and all other persons interested in the estate of Nancy J. Roper, late of Medway, in said county, deceased:

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said court for probate by James A. Snow of Medway, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, without giving a surety on his official bond,

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham, in said county of Norfolk, on the twenty-first day of March, A. D. 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper published in Franklin, the last publication to be one day at least before said court, and by mailing, postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate seven days at least before said court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esq., Judge of said Court, this 26th day of February, in the year one thousand nine hundred.

Paul Pieri is the manager of the team and his address is Box 340, Franklin.

Miss Jane D. Fisher, who lives in the Butman building in Central square, while at work in the dining room yesterday afternoon tripped as she was walking across the floor and fell, sustaining severe injury to her left hip. Dr. A. J. Gallison was summoned and found that her hip had been broken. Miss Fisher is nearly 70 years of age and has been in poor health for some time.

The rain Friday has made a serious loss to some farmers in the washing away of the enriched soil. There are fields where many loads of the loam have washed down into the highways or into adjoining fields and many such cases, all where the property is owned by different proprietors. While one may gain a substantial richness in his field it is at the expense of his neighbor.

Funeral services of the late Mrs. Mary E. Dawley were held in the Universalist church Sunday afternoon, Rev. D. M. Hodge officiating. The flowers consisted of a wreath of English violets from the Ladies' Sewing circle, seventy-one white pinks from the Y. P. C. U., large piece of calla lilies from D. of R., basket of violets from Mr. and Mrs. J. Gatchell, East Blackstone; wreath of ivy leaves from friends in Pawtucket, R. I., bouquets, Miss Lucy Tower and Mrs. D. O. Corbin, calla lilies, Mr. Mrs. E. F. Crooks.

Harry W. Forbes takes the place as teacher at the academy made vacant by L. W. Arnold's resignation. Mr. Forbes graduated at St. Lawrence university, Canton, N. Y., at the age of eighteen and took a second degree at Harvard the next year. Since then he has been teaching in the High school at Gouverneur, N. Y. He is the son of Prof. Forbes of the college at Canton and his scholarship and teaching ability are spoken of with the highest commendation by all who have known his work.

The work of building the electric line between Franklin and Medway is now in the hands of contractors, and the latter have already begun to lay out the work before them. It is given out by the company that no time will be lost in constructing the line once the weather will permit the commencement of work. The company hopes to have the cars running between Franklin and Medway by Memorial day, and those interested in the enterprise say they see no obstacle at this time to the fulfillment of this plan.

A surprise party was tendered Mrs. Thomas Killilea at her home on Hutchinson street Friday evening by about twenty of her friends. After presenting the hostess with a valuable jardinere, all present derived much pleasure from a number of vocal and instrumental selections and readings. Miss Mary Gibson gave an interesting reading, the Misses Sarah and Agnes Sullivan rendered vocal selections and Miss Mary Connolly of Milford entertained with a violin number. Others present were heard, and after refreshments had been served the merry party dispersed for their homes.

Michael J. McClellan, who has been a sufferer with cancer of the throat for a year past, died at his home in Bullock place at midnight Saturday. He was 47 years of age, and when in health had been in the employ of the N. Y., N. H. & H. railroad as a bridge carpenter. He was respected by a large circle of friends and was a popular member of Griffin court, M. C. O. F. The wife of Mr. McClellan died about four years ago and eight children, three sons and five daughters, survive. A funeral mass, which was attended by a large number of friends and relatives of the deceased, as well as a delegation from Griffin court, was celebrated at St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock this morning.

Rev. John B. Koehne of Chicago delivered his first lecture on Friday evening in the Congregational church. The audience was larger than anticipated because of other entertainments in town. The closest attention was given to the speaker, who moves along in his address with the rapidity of a Phillipe Brooks. He spoke upon "The Preparation for Christianity Through Judaism." It was a masterpiece of eloquence, enthusiasm and convincing argument. It was interspersed with humor and with practical suggestions. In a marvelous and skillful manner he contrasted the Jewish, Greek and Roman genius. He reviewed the Old Testament history from Genesis to Malachi, and with each step pointed out the "upward" movement, the tendency to righteousness and the Messianic spirit looking toward the Christ. The next lecture will be given on Friday evening, March 23, upon "The Preparations Through the Gentile Religions." All will want to hear him upon this scholarly and interesting theme.

Adjourned Town Meeting.

There was a slightly decreased attendance last evening, and an almost perfect unanimity of action. In fact, it was "anybody's meeting," and happy was he who wanted a measure to go through, as it "went." Evidently it was felt that the committee had taken sufficient time to carefully investigate each article and in most instances its judgment was relied upon, though with exceptions.

One thing, however, should be said just here. The town has a right to congratulate itself on a few points. The first is the strong sentiment for no-license; the increased interest in and appropriation for roads; the care of the common; the improvement of the cemetery; starting out right in the tree warden matter; its stand on the sewer question; the adoption of the curfew ordinance. Everyone of these means a step forward, and with the better times which greet the town on every hand the prospects are unusually encouraging.

Moderator Burrington called the meeting to order promptly at 7.30, when the meeting acted upon the remaining articles in the warrant as follows:

Article 3, choosing Dr. Hodge as tree warden for the ensuing year; article 4, choosing the following additional town officers: Fence viewers, A. P. Woodward, W. A. Pond, J. O. Chilson; field drivers, Thomas F. McDermott, Frank Hawkins, A. P. Winchenback; pound keeper, Norman B. Stone; article 5, to hereafter choose a tree warden by official ballot; article 6, fixing the compensation of the collector of taxes at one per cent. and vesting him with the same power and authority that the treasurer has; article 7, accepting the report of the several town officers (with the exception of the report of E. D. Daniels, school superintendent); article 8, selecting the yard at the almshouse as the pound for the ensuing year; article 9, accepting the list of jurors as printed by the selectmen; article 10, authorizing the treasurer, under the direction of the selectmen, to borrow necessary sums of money in anticipation of taxes for current year; article 11, instructing the selectmen to suppress the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors for the current year; article 12, appropriating the following sums for the purposes named: For repair of roads, bridges and sidewalks, and the purchase of a stone crusher, $8,700; support of schools, including salary of superintendent, transportation of scholars, repairing school houses, school books, etc., $14,200; support of poor, $5,000; fire department, $3,200; water supply, including sum of $350 for possible extension of service to Unionville, $4,300; street lights, $3,800; town debt and interest, $3,400; payment of town officers, $1,600; abatement and collection of taxes, $950; printing and stationery, $550; suppression of illegal liquor traffic and payment of police, $1,700; state and military aid, $500; soldiers' relief, $500; support of the library of the Franklin Library association, $700; decoration of soldiers' graves, $100; miscellaneous town expenses, including insurance and forest fires, $1,100; and authorizing the assessors to publish in the next town report the valuation of the town and a list of all abatements of taxes and the reasons therefor; article 13, appropriating $400 for construction of concrete sidewalks, abutters to contribute like amount; articles 14 and 31, relating to repair and erection of guideboards, adopted jointly; article 15, authorizing school committee to employ secretary at salary not exceeding $50; article 16, charging seven per cent. on all taxes unpaid after Dec. 1 next; article 17, requiring school committee to employ superintendent; article 18, adopting report of committee appointed at last town meeting in reference to construction of sewers; article 19, voting not to sell the engine on Pleasant street; article 20, appropriating $250 for repairing the furnace in William M. Thayer school house; article 21, to appropriate $100 for lettering Horace Mann and William M. Thayer school houses, indefinitely postponed; article 22, to see if the town would sell the South Franklin and Northwest school houses, indefinitely postponed; article 23, accepting report of committee on curfew and adopting by-law in reference to same; article 24, appropriating $50 for the care and planting of shade trees, to be expended under the direction of tree warden; article 25, relating to establishment of incandescent or arc light at Oak and Church streets, indefinitely postponed; article 26, appropriating $100 for the purchase of a working set of weights and measures; article 27, relating to the establishment of an arc light at cemetery gate on Union street, indefinitely postponed; article 28, relating to exchange of lands with George C. Dauphinee in rear of school house at Four Corners, referred to selectmen, with power; article 29, relating to the entertaining of a proposition to allow the extension of the water supply of the Franklin Water company to Unionville, indefinitely postponed; article 30, appropriating $100 to improve the common; article 32, appropriating $600 to grade and improve that part of the Franklin cemetery owned by the town, near the corner of Central and Union streets; article 33, ratifying the sale of the Williams gravel pit as made by the selectmen.

It was also voted to instruct the auditor not to approve and the treasurer not to pay bill of any board after amount of appropriation had been expended; and it was also voted that the overseers of the poor and the school committee be allowed to expend the receipts of their respective boards from other sources than said appropriations, in addition to the same.

The meeting adjourned at 9.20.

The Scarlet Fever Matter.

Elsewhere may be seen the article by the Board of Health. Realizing the amount of talk that this epidemic has aroused, they wish to impress upon all the wisdom of exercising just at present more than the usual care in regard to the further spread of the disease, which thus far has been confined largely to mild forms of scarletina. Cases are cropping up here and there which proper care would have prevented. The SENTINEL desires to allay the fears as far as possible, urging at the same time all wise and necessary precautions.

At the Head.

In cycle construction each year brings out some new feature to add to the comfort of the wheelmen. This year it is the coaster break. To meet this demand the Waltham Manufacturing company have just brought out the "Orient Morrow" model. This model is equipped with the Morrow coaster break, which is acknowledged by all to be the best of the many coaster devices now on the market. If you are to buy a wheel this season be sure and see the "Orient Morrow" before closing your bargain. Sample now in stock at the Orient Cycle Agency, 72 Union street, Franklin, Mass.

Watch the windows of A. C. Mason's drug store for the Orient Morrow Cycle, which will be on exhibition within a few days.

The Chicago of Tennessee—Prosperity Everywhere.

READ HOUSE, CHATTANOOGA, TENN., March 16, 1900.

Of all the enterprising, hurrying, busy centers that we have seen since leaving the snow clad hills of New England, this bustling little city takes the prize! There is more business done here in a day than in some of the cities of similar population in Massachusetts in a week!

Hundreds of railroad tracks with continual tootings of engines, trains coming in and out, electric cars rushing in every direction, supplemented by rapid transit lines that go like a shot; the streets full of people, the theatres crammed, Paderewski's performance last night—such an ovation that the manager of the Grand Opera house was pale with excitement and said he never handled such a crowd before; this house running over with seventy to eighty new arrivals per day—after the sylvan charms of Hot Springs and the quiet grandeur of the mountains at Asheville, we seem to have struck a brilliant, gay, prosperous current of civilization which appropriately represents the whole state.

The terminus of the Southern railroad in one direction, the point where we turn directly south for New Orleans, all travelers naturally make a stop here, not only for convenience, but to see a city made so historic by the civil war, and

An Important Discourse.

Rev. F. B. Sleeper gave the last sermon of his series on "The Prodigal Son" Sunday evening at the Baptist church. His theme was "The Elder Son." He emphasized the thought that selfish righteousness is one of the greatest sins. We must always remember the evil environment in which men are placed. There are poor unfortunates in the world having a nature all out of harmony with God and integrity. They are to be both blamed and pitied. Certainly evil habits may have come to them from previous generations. Their conflict in life is bitter and continuous. And he who wraps himself in the garments of his selfish morality and turns the cold shoulder to those who need and seek his aid is as much a sinner as the one whom he despises.

The elder son had no love whatever for his prodigal brother. It filled him with wrath that the wanderer had repented and returned. He was so angry that he would not enter the house, even when his father came out and entreated him. He experienced no thrill of joy that the dead was alive again and the lost was found. He gloried in the privilege of hating and despising the prodigal forever. He would have driven him back to the far off country to the detestable employment of feeding swine and to starvation. Little did he realize that his heartless soul was as wicked in God's sight as any evil that his fallen brother had committed.

Christ taught and manifested the principle of the broadest love and helpfulness. The sick need the physician, not those who are well. And the Christian who ignores his duty toward the lost is false to his holy obligations. If we scorn the weak brother who desires to repent and reform, and kick him down his blood will be upon our skirts. The great demand upon the church is for pure brave heartedness. The world is lost in sin and needs a friend as tender as Christ, as persevering as fate and as noble as God. It is the crowning privilege of the saints to do heaven's exalted work on the earth and to offer salvation freely to all men.

The Missouri Girl.

The above play is not new to our theatre goers. It has been here before and given the best satisfaction, even to our severest critics. Our people are always glad to welcome Fred and Sadie Raymond in any play, but almost everyone prefers to see them in "The Missouri Girl." The fact that the play has been re-written and enlarged will be of interest to the many friends of the Raymonds; they have had five years of uninterrupted success in this play, and its drawing power is stronger each succeeding year. The business being done by this company is something wonderful; houses packed to the doors at nearly every performance. They will be with us next Thursday evening.

The American Band orchestra of nine pieces are engaged for "The Missouri Girl." They have some new music and their playing will be a fine feature of the entertainment. The best seats fifty cents.

Card of Thanks.

To the Daughters of Rebekah, the Ladies' Sewing circle, the Y. P. C. U., and to the choir of the Universalist church, and to one and all we wish to extend our most sincere thanks for kind assistance and floral gifts during the long sickness and at the death and funeral of our beloved sister.

Is Hoag to Compete with Lake Pearl?

For some time Hoag's pond in South Bellingham has been spoken of as an outing place, and now it has been purchased by Edgar K. Ray of the Woonsocket street railway and the Milford, Attleboro & Woonsocket Railway companies. Mr. Ray is confined to his home by illness and could not be seen to learn his plans, but it is known that the pond and the beautiful grove near it have been purchased by him.

As soon as spring begins workmen will be set to work preparing the place for a model inland summer resort. Boathouses will be built and a supply of light boats installed. Other buildings will be erected, including a large dance hall, a place were refreshments will be served and other buildings generally found at places like which it is intended to make the pond.

Hoag's pond is about half way between Woonsocket and Franklin, directly on the M., A. & W. electric line, and without a doubt will become a popular place. The ride in the electrics either from Franklin or Woonsocket to the pond is a beautiful one, and the pond being half way between the two places can draw from both places.

New Telephones.

Sixteen new telephones have just been subscribed for to go into residences, and this list will doubtless be quite largely increased shortly. Then will follow as a matter of course more telephones in the stores. We trust that by June the Franklin exchange will number at least seventy-five subscribers.

We have repeatedly stated that a little personal work would do this, and it has proven true. The solicitor, R. E. Healey, has proven himself a most courteous and successful representative. He is obliged to leave the field for about ten days, when he will return and finish up the work. Those who have just subscribed are as follows: Charles J. McKenzie, Dr. A. J. Gallison, Rev. Dr. Hodge, Dr. J. M. Crowley, Dr. Solon Abbott, Charles F. Nye, Supt. E. D. Daniels, W. A. Wyckoff, F. P. Chapman, Charles L. Stewart, J. E. Clarke, A. D. Thayer, Clarence Quilter, W. Dinsmore, Mrs. W. F. Ray, Miss Lydia P. Ray.

Notice.

The board of health of Franklin calls attention to the following statutes:

Public statutes 80. Section 76. When such disease (infectious) is found to exist in a town, the selectmen and board of health shall use all possible care to prevent the spreading of the infection, and to give public notice to travellers, by displaying red flags at proper distances, and by all means which in their judgment shall be most effectual for the common safety. And whoever obstructs the selectmen, board of health or its agent, in using such means to prevent the spreading of the infection, or wilfully removes, obliterates, defaces, or handles the red flags or other signals so displayed, shall forfeit for each offence not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars.

Section 75 provides that when any person ill with infectious disease remains in his dwelling, "the house or place where he remains shall be considered as a hospital, and all persons residing in or in any way concerned within the same shall be subject to the regulations of the board as before provided."

These statutes will be strictly enforced in this town.

IN THE WAKE OF THE SWALLOWS.

which contains so many places of interest within its borders. But the feeling of good luck and general success begins long before you arrive here. All the way from Hot Springs to Morristown you are enthralled by the beauty and magnificence of the mountain scenery, still continuing that wild and picturesque gorge along which the French Broad river winds to the Tennessee. But after we leave Knoxville begins a long cultivated garden ground, which even in winter shows the care, the culture, the system employed upon the huge farms that flank the way.

Astonishing fields of wheat, green as a leek, border the track for miles upon miles with hardly a break, while other red-brown uplands show the recent furrows of the plow. But what surprises is the sparseness of the population, for the question constantly arises: "Who does this labor? Who accomplishes all this?" for as far as can be seen only a small house scattered lonesomely here and there gives evidence of human hands which must have sown these enormous stretches.

As we cross the Tennessee into Chattanooga the splendid heights of Lookout mountain frown down upon us, and Mount Cameron looms to the right above a very long and graceful bridge, which spans the river at a point where the gray and the blue thought it necessary to bang away at each other some years back, but who now live in warm neighborly fashion side by side, the very best of friends. Out there is Valambrosa, a suburb, of the city reached by electrics which wind high in air until a fine view can be had, and the silence of hill and forest feel in contrast.

Standing high on an eminence in the very center of the city is the Grant and Chattanooga university, a building of which any vicinage might be proud, and surrounding it are others of rich stone, churches of great cost and beauty and long streets thoroughly modern in architecture. In the distance is the National cemetery, where a fine stone arch guards the entrance, on which is inscribed: "Here rest in peace 12,959 citizens who gave their lives for their country from 1861 to 1865," and in that dignified and beautiful home of the dead, white stones, each like the other except for the name and number of the regiment, representing very many states, we see green fields set in rows and circles, streets and avenues, where passion and pain are over and life is not—but where dwells forever the promise of immortality.

The ascent of old Lookout is, I fancy, in places steeper than that of Mt. Washington, but the run is short and we arrive in the midst of sunlight and blue sky like a bird lighting on the top most bough. Then what a glorious view. The far ranges of the Appalachians dimly figure themselves as dull blue clouds. Nearer ranges surround the valley where lies the city and its suburbs. The great stream of the Tennessee, in the horse shoe circle of "Moccasin Bend," rolls calmly on to join the Mississippi, and over there Mission Ridge, with its two observation towers, strikes a note set on a bar of beautiful white road, where is the fashionable drive and where the wheelman finds his joy.

Turning again, while standing on Point Lookout—a crag that stands out sheer from the mountain like a shelf—we view the Chickamauga National Military park, which consists of 5,000 acres cared for by the government, and is one of the most attractive outings for visitors. On going to Valambrosa we pass Gen. Garfield's headquarters, as also the house occupied by Gen. Rosecrans, and Forts Negley and Wood are both points which will interest the veteran, the student of history and the patriot.

On "Orchard Knob" also is the still more interesting spot, the headquarters of Gen. Grant, and at all these places are to be found the man who will "tell you all about it," give you every detail and chuckle over some incident of the war which has pleased his memory for thirty reminiscent years. No more attractive place for a hotel can be imagined than the top of this mountain, and we greatly regretted that Lookout Inn was closed, for its beauty as a building and its unrivalled view would instantly decide the choice of the tourist.

But some interesting things right in the heart of Chattanooga, in fact passing our windows, which, by the way, are built upon the old historic site of the Crutchfield house, occupied my feminine attention. We are in the South and the thermometer registers 74, but the ladies (and they are "mighty stylish" ladies here) are wearing high fur collars, thick cloaks, muffs, velvet and felt hats and heavy walking skirts, as if they were promenading Broadway in a northeaster. I found this adherence to winter fashions in days when the thermometer showed 80 degrees last year all over Florida and while we Northerners were getting into nets and organdies, the "natives" will persist in recognizing old Boreas.

The mule in all his glory, the colored "gemman" in all his bravery flourish in this town. Rope reins, an old barrel for a seat, a yellow waterproof coat, a big grin and a respectful bow make up the paraphernalia of four out of ten teams that go by. There will flash by a smart carriage with magnificent thoroughbreds from Kentucky, the whole affair at the tip of the style, and the women—delightful.

Very fine residences, placed discriminatingly a little out of town on foothills of the mountains, speak of the wealth and culture of this Chicago of Tennessee and to its wholesome and growing activities, its undoubted future of increasing importance and standing, may safely be added the prediction of its artistic and educational pre eminence.

"A Miss is As Good as a Mile."

If you are not entirely well, you are ill. Illness does not mean death's door. It is a sense of weariness, a "tired feeling," a life filled with nameless pains and suffering. In 90% of cases the blood is to blame. Hood's Sarsaparilla is Nature's corrective for disorders of the blood. Remember

Capella as a Binary Star.

One of the most beautiful objects overhead in winter evenings is the bright white star Capella, in the constellation Auriga. Prof. Campbell, of the Lick observatory, announces that he has found decisive evidence that Capella is a binary star, whose components are too close to be separated by the telescope, although the spectroscope reveals their existence through their revolution about their common center. He even suspects that Capella may consist of three stars, all very close together. The principal pair revolve around one another in about one hour less than four days. The wonder increases when it is recollected that these are suns, each more brilliant than our sun.—Youth's Companion.

The Oldest Tree in the World.

The town of Kos, the capital of the small Turkish island of that name lying off the coast of Asia Minor, possesses the oldest tree in the world. Under its shade Hippocrates inculcated his disciples in his methods and views concerning the healing art 2,000 years ago. Tradition carries the age of the tree back to the time of Aesculapius (of whom Hippocrates was a lineal descendant), which would add some 400 years to its age. A great part of the trunk is built round, and there is a fountain known as Hippocrates' fountain. The circumference of the trunk is 30 feet, and there are two main lower branches, which are supported by masonry columns.—Albany Argus.

Her Knowledge of It.

The young woman had been typewriter to the chairman of the finance committee for about a month and had made a mistake in one of his circular letters.

"Here," he said, angrily, "don't you know anything about the money question at all?"

"I know this much," she responded with asperity, "I was to get six dollars a week in this office, and I've been working four weeks and haven't had a cent yet."—Detroit Free Press.

Corn Shipping Ports.

New York has dropped from first to second place in the shipment of corn abroad, Baltimore standing first with an exportation of 46,000,000 bushels in 1899. Philadelphia takes third place, with New Orleans fourth. In the exportation of cereals the gulf ports have made great gains of late years. In wheat exportation New York is still first, but the shipments are declining, while Galveston, Tex., is second, with shipments rapidly increasing.—Chicago Chronicle.

An Unusual Feat.

Kaiser Wilhelm presented to the Ziethen hussars as a New Year's gift a copy of the Dutch naval flag taken by the regiment in 1787. It then accomplished the unusual feat for a cavalry regiment of capturing a man of war. A ten-gun Dutch brig ran ashore in trying to break down the dikes and the hussars managed to board her.—N. Y. Sun.

Curious South American Poison.

The Indians of South America use a curious poison, which is called ezcal. A grain of it has the effect of starting an irresistible desire for exertion. The victim begins walking briskly round and round in small circles till he drops dead in his tracks. There is no pain, but much excitement.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

No Wonder.

"Mary!" yelled the poet.

"What is it, dear?" asked the patient wife.

"Why don't you keep that kid quiet? What on earth's the matter with it?"

"I don't know, dear; I'm singing one of your lullabies to the poor little darling."—Philadelphia Press.

Not Hurt, But Mad.

The way in which native logic triumphs over inculcated dogmas is neatly illustrated by a true story I have heard. A little child between three and four years of age whose parents were firm believers in Christian science had become a good deal imbued with the doctrine of that sect. One day she was left with her aunt, a non-believer. Meeting with a fall and evidently a good deal hurt, she cried bitterly. Her aunt, having in mind her training, said to her: "Are you hurt?" "No, I am not hurt," she replied, somewhat petulently. "Then why do you cry?" "I am crying because I am mad." "What are you mad at?" "I am mad because I can't feel that I ain't hurt!"—Boston Transcript.

Watching for State Papers.

Foreign embassies are always on the sharp watch for the deaths of prominent subjects of their respective countries who may possess interesting correspondence of more or less value to the state. Thus, when Countess Di Castiglione died in Paris, at the request of the Italian embassy the French authorities placed its seal on every cupboard and drawer in her house. It is suspected that she had many interesting letters from Victor Emmanuel and Cavour, in whose employ she was during a part of the second empire, and the Italian government does not intend to let these fall into irresponsible hands.—N. Y. Sun.

Not Dazzled by Youth.

"Yes," said a rich Oklahoma farmer to G. Lowell Miller, "I am proud of my girls, and would like to see them comfortably married, and as I have made a little money, they will not go to their husbands penniless. There's Mary, 25 years, and a real good girl. I shall give her $5,000 when she is married. Then comes Bet, who won't see 35 again, and I shall give her $10,000; and the man who takes Eliza, who is 40, will have $15,000 with her." G. Lowell; reflecting a moment or so, then inquired: "You haven't one about 50, have you?"—Oklahoma State Capital.

Youthful Precocity.

A little girl who had just entered school lately jubilantly announced to her father that she did better than all the girls above her in the arithmetic class and went to the top.

"That was smart of you," said he, encouragingly. "How was it?"

"Well, you see, Miss Maggie asked the girl at the top how much was 8 and 5, and she didn't know, and said 12; then the next girl said 9, and the next one said 11, and the next 14. Such silly answers! Then Miss Maggie asked me, and I said 13, and Miss Maggie told me to go up top. 'Course it was 13."

"That was nice," said the father. "I didn't know you could add so well. How did you know it was 13?"

"Why, I guessed it! Nobody said 13."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

For a Parcels Post.

A movement is on foot to have congress pass a law admitting parcels of merchandise to the mail at a very low rate of postage. Among the arguments used is the fact that in Great Britain the postage on parcels is six per cent. for the first pound and two cents for each additional pound, up to 11 pounds, which is the limit, thus making the cost of sending an 11-pound package 36 cents. The postal service of the United States has a deficit now of $6,000,000 a year for operating expenses, and that deficit would be two or three times larger if such a law was enacted, and the people would pay the shortage. An exchange thinks this a scheme of the big department stores of the larger cities to ruin the trade of the country merchants.

THY WILL BE DONE.

"Thy will be done," a child's voice said,
As bending low at mother's knee
She lisped the prayer of infancy.
Those words so soft and sweet to hear.
All meaningless fell on her ear:
Her own strong will yet sleeping lay,
Like serpent 'neath the flowers of May.

"Thy will be done," a maiden prayed,
With gentle love her heart was stirred,
And yet she faltered on that word.
The world's path shone with dazzling light;
The path of duty seemed less bright;
Conflicting doubts her faith o'ercast,
Oh! could she trust Him to the last?

"Thy will be done," a woman prayed.
She stood beside a lowly grave,
And saw the long grass o'er it wave.
With radiant face and steadfast eyes
She looked beyond the distant skies;
With faith triumphant, vict'ry won,
Her heart cried out: "Thy will be done."
—Anna Nell Gilmore, in United Presbyterian.

THE LAST ACT

Fifille Beautencourt danced on the table before 50 of her dearest friends, and they drank to her with great acclaim.

"But you haven't let us in the secret yet, Fifille," said they. "What does this farewell mean? Is there to be a succession of them? Or are you, by a possibility, about to be married? You, who have been so obdurate? You who have refused five millions in your time, speaking by the aggregate? Come, Fifille, it is impossible for a woman to retire when she is making more money with her feet than the cleverest make with their heads! Maybe you have developed a conscience—eh? Is it that you are about to enter a convent? Are you going to be penitential—in black tights? Tut! Fifille, it is childish of you to be saying farewell without giving any reason for it!" So went the composite speech of many companions.

Fifille smiled gravely. Then she took her tiny lace handkerchief, and moistening a bit of it, rubbed at the rouge on her cheek. She held up the incarnadined muslin to the contemplation of her guests.

"I shall never put any paint on my face again as long as I live," said she. "But the reason for it you would hardly understand. It is not remorse, for I have nothing of which to repent, save venal sins, of course. And those I have confessed. It is not love, for I let that go by a long time ago. It is not age, for, as you see, youth has not yet forsaken me."

The diaphanous snowy petticoats fluttered like a humming bird's wing, and about the svelte body drifted a scarf light and wayward as a morning cloud.

"I, who am not suspected of philosophy, leave the life I know for philosophic reasons. I wish to observe for myself how real people live—not mimic people like ourselves. None of you has ever discovered it, but as a matter of fact I am not stupid. I do not propose to remain here till you pity me. I am not going to hear any of you saying: 'Poor old Fifille!' when I get too stiff in the joints for this."

She poised like a butterfly on a flower, and it seemed as if she were about to disappear through the beflowered ceiling of the room.

"Brava! Brava! Exquisite! Encore!"

But the famous dancer bowed somewhat sadly, and, excusing herself, she quitted the room for a short time. When she reentered she was clad in a severe brown traveling suit. A plain toque covered her straight brown hair—her own hair. There was neither red nor white upon her face which nature had not placed there. In her hand was a little traveling bag.

"Adieu, adieu!" she cried. She ran from one to the other, shaking them by the hand and kissing them. She wept, too, and gave little reminders of old times now to this one and now to that. Before they could realize it she was gone. They never any of them saw her again. They never solved the mystery of her disappearance. It was a nine years' wonder. It was a thing to talk about at matutinal suppers—those weary, noisy meals that ended with the dawn. But out of the many guesses hazarded no one guessed the truth—and it never occurred to anyone to believe what the danseuse had told them.

Up in Maine there is a certain coast town that looks down from bluffs upon the sea and across sloping meadows to a wide and wayward river. The fields are old and have been worked too long. The wharves are rich in old tales, but the vessels that tie up at them now are comparatively few. Everybody knows everybody else, and the people have so married and intermarried that when a family party is given it is difficult to avoid inviting the whole village.

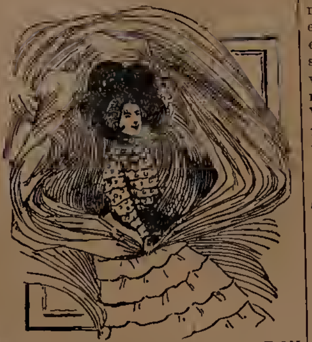
Into this community there came one day a woman whom nobody knew. In spite of the modesty of her bearing and the quietness of her attire she had obviously the manner of cities about her. She bought a cottage for herself and furnished it with simplicity. The ladies who called could find no fault with the few pieces of china nor with the moderation of the decorations. Everything was in good taste. Everything betokened a comfortable condition of the purse. Nothing spoke of opulence or extravagance. At first the callers talked of themselves—the town, the social life, the old traditions, the historic spots. They were frank and confidential. Then they exacted a return. They endeavored to probe the mystery of this woman's life and to find why she had come among them. They were prepared for some concealment. It had been agreed on all hands that the woman was a mystery and was likely to remain such. But they met with a surprise. There was no concealment. The premiere danseuse told them her story from beginning to end and made them sympathize with it, too.

There was, indeed, a covert envy in the attitude of some of these women toward her. The easy manners, the charming address, the inimitable grace of movement—they had never seen the like, and they coveted the lady these possessions. It would not be true to say that they felt perfect confidence in her. They felt a deep interest in her; she fascinated everyone she met; that had been her custom from time immemorial. It had, in fact, been her profession. But the good ladies waited with some apprehension for the time when the dancer would give them a disagreeable surprise. She was sure, they felt, to outrage the conventions some time. They were not prepared to say that they would blame her; it was a thing to be expected.

But the months went by quietly. Fifille Beautencourt went her way without untoward demonstration of any sort. Sunday morning, garmented in black, she knelt at early mass at the church upon the hill—the church with the holy cross upon its steeple. She invited the neighbors to dine with her on that day and walked abroad in the afternoon with little children, or read by her pine fire, or beneath the shade of her veranda. Week days she arose early, directed her small domestic affairs and then busied herself with the unpretentious charities she had started. One was a small day nursery for the children of the women who worked in the fish packing houses. Another was a home for the widows of sailors. Another was a circulating public library—an enterprise of which the community thought so well that it presently gave her its assistance. She had calls to make, too. She soon accumulated a number of friends and she interested herself closely in their doings. She had a genius for remembering birthdays, and lost no opportunity of making a festa. Particularly when the boys and girls were home from school at the holidays did she make merry. The town had never had so many gayeties—had never enjoyed itself so much. In fact, much talent was discovered among those who had hitherto been looked upon as commonplace. It appeared to be Fifille Beautencourt's especial talent to develop others. She discovered them to themselves.

She sent one boy away to Rome to study picture making, and it was her pleasure to instruct a number of aspiring young girls in French and to give them talks about Paris—historical Paris, not the Paris the coryphee knew in the days of her artistic novitiate.

One day she died. Then the town realized that it had lost its most liberal-minded and picturesque personage. No one else in that self-satisfied community stood ready to do the generous thing regardless of consequences. No one else took the sentimental view of things—rejoiced openly with young lovers, made merry at weddings, delighted in christenings and had dances at the coming to age of the young men.



SHE POISED LIKE A BUTTERFLY ON A FLOWER.

The spirit of joy seemed to have departed. All her tenderness and tolerance were remembered, all her simple, affectionate, almost humble ways. And with her death rumors of her former greatness began to reach the little town. Then it was realized what a celebrity had been entertained unknowingly all those quiet years.

So in gratitude for the joy she had given them and for the good will she had shown all her life among them they gave her a public funeral. The sons and daughters of Puritans went, and the French people who had moved down from the north, and the old people, forgetting ancient prejudices. They buried her on a high hill overlooking the sea. It was bleak there, and there was only a plain white cross to mark her resting place. Nothing could have been more out of keeping with the Fifille Beautencourt of the old days, she who had been compacted of emotion and laughter, of color and music and joy. But the people who laid her there loved her well, and the story they told of her life among them was the prettiest of all the stories that were told of the old port.—Chicago Tribune.

NO MAKESHIFT.

In This Case the Work was Properly Done.

Any reader who has had backache and found relief by rubbing the back with liniments and lotions, understands that the relief obtained was but a makeshift, for the ache returns. There's a way to do it so the ache will not come back. Read how it's done.

Mr. Fred A. Wood, of 103 Thurbers avenue, Providence, R. I., messenger for the Earle and Prews Express Co., says: "In the winter of 1897 I became so enthusiastic an admirer of Doan's Kidney Pills, after they cured me of kidney trouble, I wrote to the agents unsolicited, telling them about my cure and stating that if my recommendation would help the preparation along I would be only too pleased to furnish it. It has appeared in our Providence newspapers since, and now in the month of May, 1899, I emphatically state there is not one word I wish to retract. On the other hand, I am only too pleased to re-endorse a preparation which acts so faithfully to the representations made for it as Doan's Kidney Pills."

TATTOOING IN OLD TIMES.

It Was a Common Custom Among the Indians of Early Days of Louisiana.

Tattooing was a universal custom among the Indians of old Louisiana with both sexes. Among the men it possessed a significance attaching to their career as warriors, and their tattoo marks were testimonials of distinction; with the women it seems to have been merely a matter of adornment. From their girlhood the women caused themselves to be tattoed on the face. Sometimes it was a line of tattooing across the top of the nose, sometimes the line was up and down the chin, and not unfrequently the entire upper part of the body was thus marked.

The young men of the nation also subjected themselves to the tattooing process by being tattooed first on the nose, like the women, and not until they had given evidence of their courage were they privileged to receive tattoo marks on any other part of the body. This testimony of their merit as warriors was reserved for them when they had distinguished themselves in war by killing an enemy in battle or by bringing with them from the field of carnage the scalp of an enemy taken in the fight. When they had thus given evidence of their worthiness to be ranked among the warriors they had the right to tattoo their bodies with emblems and figures illustrative and commemorative of the incident in which they had proved their valor.

Every man and woman among the Indians yielded to the arbitrary custom of tattooing, but the warriors, above all, were carried away by this sort of vanity, and not one of that class by any chance allowed his opportunity to receive this patent of knighthood to pass by neglected. One of the ordinary methods adopted by a warrior to commemorate a heroic deed in battle, in which he possibly had killed or in some way overcome an enemy, was to cause a tomahawk to be tattooed upon his right shoulder, and under it the hieroglyphical sign of the nation to which belonged the conquered man.

The operation of tattooing required considerable fortitude to be borne without so much as wincing. A design was first drawn on the skin, and this design was then pricked with six needles, firmly fastened on a line in a flat piece of wood. After this finely powdered charcoal was rubbed into the punctures made by the needles, leaving an ineffacable print of the design. The operation caused much inflammation, and sometimes fever, which brought on severe sickness in case the patient was neglected while the swelling lasted. While the sickness remained the only food given was Indian corn, and water was the only drink.—N. O. Picayune.

Good Clock.

A lady visiting in the south was told a story of an old colored man, who came to a watchmaker with the two hands of a clock.

"I want yer to fix up dese hands. Dey ain't kept no correct time for mo' den six munfs."

"Well, where is the clock?" responded the watchmaker.

"Out at my house."

"But I must have the clock."

"Didn' I tell yer dar's nuffin de matter wid de clock 'cepting de han's? An' here dey be. You jest want de clock so you kin tinker wid it, and charge me a big price. Gimme back dem hands." And so saying, he started off to find an honest watchmaker.—Youth's Companion.

"Taps."

A young recruit, having returned to his native town from camp at Montauk, was being entertained by some friends. He was very willing to tell all he knew. "What do you mean by 'taps?'" asked one of a group of girls. "They play taps every night on the bugle. It means 'lights out.' They play it over the bodies of dead soldiers." The girl was puzzled. At last she asked: "Well, what do they do if they haven't any dead soldier?"—Youth's Companion.

It is very hard to stand idly by and see our dear ones suffer while awaiting the arrival of the doctor. An Albany, (N. Y.) dairyman called at a drug store there for a doctor to come and see his child, then very sick with croup. Not finding the doctor in, he left word for him to come at once on his return. He also bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which he hoped would give some relief until the doctor should arrive. In a few hours he returned, saying the doctor need not come, as the child was much better. The druggist, Mr. Otto Scholz, says the family has since recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to their neighbors and friends until he has a constant demand for it from that part of the country. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

KEEP YOUR BLOOD CLEAN

In After Years.

"Why, what's the matter, Nellie?" asked her maiden aunt.

"Oh, auntie," replied the bride of a month, "it's too provoking for anything. Tom treats me just as if I were a child."

"Well, don't mind a little thing like that, my dear," said the old lady; "when you get to be my age you will remember it with pleasure."—N. Y. World.

Welcome Visitor.

"Let me help you to keep the wolf from the door?" said the warm-hearted stranger, as he shook the snow from his arctic cap.

"For the love of goodness, don't!" roared the semi-famished gold seeker. "Why, if a wolf nosed aroun' my door, I'd just drop him with a bullet. Then thar'd be fresh meat fer two weeks."—Chicago Evening News.

A Precaution.

"Why do you insist on your son's becoming a lawyer?" asked the friend.

"I've made a will leaving him all my money," was the answer. "It seems to me that if he is a lawyer himself he will stand a better chance of getting some of it."—Washington Star.

Natural Inference.

"I tell you, sir," said the man from the provinces, "the policy of this government is all wrong. It is making a grievous mistake."

"Ah," returned the city friend, "so you didn't get the postmastership of your town after all."—Chicago Post.

WRENTHAM.

The town report is out and contains many interesting facts. There were 29 marriages, 25 births and 26 deaths, 10 of those who died being over 70 and two over 85 years of age.——Mrs. Thomas Jollie died at her residence Saturday after a short illness. She leaves a husband, four sons and one daughter. Last year Mr. and Mrs. Jollie celebrated the 50th anniversary of their wedding. She was an excellent woman in the community and charitable by word and deed with all unfortunates.——Percy Blatchford spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. George W. Blatchford.——Mrs. Joseph E. Chamberlain and Walter S. Dodd are both ill with the grip.——Mrs. Robert Bamberry is at the point of death.——Mrs. Richard Dimond, who has been ill with pneumonia, is improving.——Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Snow and their children are sick with the grip.——Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Dunbar and son of Attleboro spent Sunday in town with friends.——Wampum lodge, I. O. O. F., will work the second degree on six candidates from Walpole and Foxboro this evening.——Addison McGew has filled his two large ice houses with clear ice.——Charles E Brown spent a portion of the week in New York.——Mrs. F. A. Shepard and son Howell are in Milford, where Mr. Field, father of Mrs. Shepard, is critically ill.

The Next Question.

"What is your occupation, my good woman?" said the examining attorney to the witness for the defendant.

"Oi'm a washerwoman, sorr."

"Where do you hang out?"—Judge.

A Good Substitute.

Clara—So that Gotrox girl didn't succeed in capturing a lord after all?

Maude—No; but she married a baron, and they say he gets as drunk as a lord.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

HOOD'S PILLS

All Charming.

Man sweeps the strings to flatter;
When a girl is thin and long
He lisps of "willowy graces"
Through the measures of his song!
But when a girl is buxom,
Or, rather, when she's fat,
He sings of "witching plumpness,"
And claims to worship that.

The Eminent Kidney and Bladder Specialist.

The Discoverer of Swamp-Root at Work in His Laboratory.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Then the richness of the blood—the albumen—leaks out and the sufferer has Bright's Disease, the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root the new discovery is the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases, after all other efforts have failed. At druggists in fifty-cent and dollar sizes. A sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. and mention this paper.

NERVY BOER SPY.

Story of One Who Displayed Both Bravery and Cunning at Fort Clarence.

Here is the story of a Transvaal spy that well illustrates the shrewdness and pertinacity which have made the Boer such a tactful and able enemy in the present war. It was just before the erection of the Johannesburg forts. The spy was ordered to report on the defenses of Chatham.

While employed in collecting materials he came upon a certain secret subterranean passage conecting Fort Pitt with—somewhere. He tried hard to find out where that "somewhere" might be, but without avail. Rumor said it was Fort Clarence. But Fort Clarence was then—and is now, for that matter—used as a provost prison, and access to its interior was strictly prohibited.

One way of getting within the walls there was, and the spy took it. He committed a somewhat serious offense against military discipline, for which he was reduced to the ranks and imprisoned. As he had foreseen, he was consigned to Fort Clarence.

The provost sergeant in charge kept rabbits, which were shut up at night in a sort of underground passage that opened into the moat—at least, so the other prisoners affirmed. The spy ingratiated himself with the warders, and after a week or two he was taken off shot drill and promoted to the post of rabbit keeper in ordinary to the provost sergeant aforesaid. He looked carefully and conscientiously after his four-footed charges. In fact, he spent the greater part of his time cleaning out and whitewashing their underground apartment, with the result that, on his release, he was able to forward full plans and details to Pretoria.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Father — When I was your age I earned my own living. You ought to be ashamed to be an idler.

Son—Well, you see all the professions are so overcrowded that it seems to me that I ought to let those who need the money more than I do have a chance to make their livings.—N. Y. Journal.

On the Right Side.

In Jewish marriages the bride is always placed to the right of the bridegroom. With every other nation of the world her place in the ceremony is on the left.—N. Y. Journal.

The Sea Elephant.

A paper recently read before the Linnean society in London describes a species of seal, attaining enormous dimensions, to which the name of sea elephant has been given on account of a trunklike appendage on the forepart of the head. A specimen killed in the Falkland Islands was nearly 19 feet in length. The trunk is only a foot long. These seals are peculiar to the southern hemisphere.—Youth's Companion.

HUMOROUS.

Mr. Brush—"I wonder why Morton always speaks of his wife as a dream?" Mrs. Brush—"I suppose because she always goes by contraries." — Harlem Life.

"Henderson tells me he means to name his new boy George." "Old or new style?" "What do you mean?" "Washington or Dewey?"—Indianapolis Journal.

Hicks—"I understand that that new cold storage company is making a lot of money. You are in it on the ground floor, aren't you?" Wicks (mournfully)—"No; they froze me out."—Somerville Journal.

Caught. "Cousin Clara has just answered a letter I wrote her a year ago." "That's queer." "No, it isn't. You probably didn't mail it until you got out your winter overcoat this week."—Chicago Daily Record.

Economy.—"Mrs. Wiggs is the closest woman on the block." "What has she been doing?" "Why, she won't have her leaves raked up; she says they can be shoveled up with the first snow."—Detroit Free Press.

Artist—"My next picture at the academy will be entitled 'Driven to Drink.'" His Friend—"Ah, some powerful portrayal of baffled passion, I suppose?" Artist—"Oh, no; it's a cab approaching a water trough."—London Tit-Bits.

Wiggs—"Why does Bjones have that phonograph going all the time? It's awful." Waggs—"Well, you see, his wife's away, and when he has the phonograph going he says he doesn't miss her so much."—Philadelphia Record.

A Necessary Requisite.—Dorothy had never seen any pumpkin pie until her first visit to the country, and to her grandmother's asking her if she'd have a piece the little girl replied: "No, thank you. I never eat pie without a roof on it."—Judge.

"How much do one and one make, dad?" asked the boy. "Two, for you," replied the father; "but 11 on an election returning board." Which shows that the father wasn't an election officer in a river ward for nothing.—Philadelphia North American.

Marriage and Reformation.

"He's a bigamist!" we urged.

"I shall marry him to reform him!" replied the girl, steadfastly.

Here we burst into derisive laughter.

"Reform a bigamist by marrying him!" we exclaimed.

"A bigamist is as likely to be reformed that way as anybody!" said the girl, with quiet dignity.

Ah, perhaps she was right, after all.
—Detroit Journal.

Why, Indeed?

"That's a funny habit the ostrich has of sticking his bill in the sand," remarked the monkey.

"Yes," snickered the laughing hyena, "if he has sand enough to cover the bill, why doesn't he pay it?"—

SHERIFF'S SALE.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
NORFOLK, ss.

FRANKLIN, January 25, A. D. 1900.

Seized and taken on execution and will be sold at public auction on

at two o'clock in the afternoon, at my office in Morse block, in Franklin, in said county, all the right, title and interest that Lawrence McGinnis of Medway, in said county of Norfolk, had (not exempt from attachment on levy on execution) on the ninth day of September, 1899, at thirty minutes past eleven o'clock in the forenoon (being the time the same was attached on mesne process in suit of Samuel G. Clark vs. said Lawrence McGinnis), in and to the following real estate, to wit:

A certain tract of land situated in Medway, in said county of Norfolk, on the northerly side of Village street, with buildings thereon, and bounded as follows: Commencing at the southeasterly corner of the premises on said Village street, thence running northerly on land formerly of one Eaton, and known as the Eaton place, to land supposed to belong to one Wentworth, formerly of one Phillbrick; thence westerly on said Wentworth land to a stake and stone at the northerly end of a drain at land of William Schroeder; thence southerly along the line of said drain, and with said Schroeder land to said Village street; thence easterly with said Village street to the point of beginning, being the Phillip's place, so called, and a part of the Dr. Brown estate, so called.

A certain tract of land situated in Medway, in said county of Norfolk, on the southerly side of Village street, opposite the above described tract, and bounded northerly on said Village street, southwesterly by Charles River and easterly by land supposed to belong formerly to Mrs. A. H. Clark, and being the second parcel described in the mortgage of Lawrence McGinnis to Margaret H. Kenny, dated August 6, 1895, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, book 744, page 522.

Charles Stewart will give a sequel to his recent interesting talk at the meeting of the Universalist Y. P. C. U. Sunday at 6 o'clock.

The first rehearsal of Easter music by the chorus choir of the Universalist church will be held next Sunday afternoon at 4 30.

The first robin of spring was heard and seen yesterday morning at the town farm, and his tuneful note was a welcome harbinger of spring.

Nancy E. Guild died here on Wednesday, aged 79 years, 10 months and 11 days, a brother surviving her here. She formerly lived in Gibeon, Pa.

William Redpath has not assumed his duty as night watchman, and Officer Connor is still on the beat, although the change will probably be made soon.

Surveyors are at work on the Franklin-Medway electric route this week. The company will lay girder rails on Main street to Emmons street, the terminal here.

The car house at Unionville is now completed except a portion of the flooring, which will be finished this week. Four box cars and three open cars are at present in the house.

Work is progressing rapidly on St. Mary's new building. A number of the men employed on the cornice work and the ventilation have finished their work and returned to Boston.

The public library and reading room has been closed by order of the board of health, on account of the public health. It will probably reopen within a few weeks, although no definite time is stated.

The local weather prophet is authority for the statement that the coming May will be a cold one, because the 21st of March governs the weather conditions of that month, and it was a cold, raw day.

Do not fail to hear Mr. Koehne this evening upon the "Preparation for Christianity Thro' the Gentile Religions." He was greatly enjoyed on last Friday evening by those who heard him.

It has been suggested that in our report of the non-acceptance of Superintendent Daniels' report at the Town meeting, we made it too broad. We should have said that the report was accepted with the exception of one paragraph.

The N. E. O. P. and a goodly number of friends participated in a whist party and social dance at Red Men's hall last evening. There was an intermission for refreshments and the affair was a most pleasant for all taking part.

Norman B. Stone is to give up the charge of the town farm at the end of the month and the overseers are looking for a new superintendent of the farm. Mr. Stone has had charge for three years and has kept the place in good shape.

William Jillson, Alpine place, a brakesman on Conductor Smith's train, fell from a car this afternoon, but struck squarely upon his feet. He broke both bones of his right leg near the ankle. Dr. Martin was called and set the bones.

Edgar K. Ray is recovering slowly from the illness which has confined him to his room at Elm farm, Unionville, since last Friday. Wednesday he sat up for the first time since his illness, but was unable to leave his room. It is expected that he will be able to get out within a few days.

The town of Mansfield has decided to take legal action against the Mansfield & Easton, Mansfield & Norton and the Norfolk Southern Street Railway companies to compel them to complete their roads and pave their crossings, according to their franchises. We have no such trouble in this section.

The union temperance meeting for March will be observed in the Baptist church next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. The address will be given by Rev. A. H. Davis of Woonsocket on the important theme, "Town and City Problems." Rev. Mr. Davis is a fine speaker and has made this work a specialty in his own city. There will be fine singing and a large congregation is expected.

"A Rank Deception" and "A Chinese Dummy" will be given this evening by the senior class of the high school in the high school room. Much time and care have been spent on the plays. Miss Grace Whiting has directed the rehearsals, and when school closed last Friday Miss Whiting kindly consented to remain in town for this week so as to drill and stage the play for the pupils.

As the appropriations made at town meeting last year are larger than those made last year, unless there is a substantial increase in the valuation the people must expect a somewhat higher rate of tax this year. In addition there are a few hundred appropriated last fall at a special meeting which comes into the tax levy this year.

The next regular meeting of the Alden club will occur Monday evening next. It will be an open meeting. Lecture by Prof. Lewis of Tufts college; subject, "Musical Taste; Its Past and Future Development." Prof. Lewis is the instructor of the Tufts college glee club, which stands so high among the college clubs and which recently gave an entertainment at Dean.

"Dr. J. M. Driver, our pastor at Mankato, sails on the "Trave," of the North German Lloyd line, March 31, for Naples. He will be abroad until mid summer, visiting Spain, Italy, Switzerland, Austria, Germany, Bavaria, Bohemia, Belgium, Holland, the Paris Exposition, and the British Islands. Brethren of the conference will supply his pulpit during his absence.—Mankato (Minn.) Review.

The funeral of Michael J. McClellan occurred Tuesday morning, a funeral mass being celebrated at St. Mary's church, at 9 o'clock, by Rev. Father Lee. There were many mourning friends and relatives present and a delegation from Griffin court, M. C. O. F., also attended. The bearers were James H. Riordan, Thomas McKinnon, Frank Murphy, James Courtney, William Smiddy and Daniel Buckley. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Manager Enegren, at Lake Pearl, Wrentham, has begun to plan for improvements for the coming summer amusement season, and among the improvements is the overhauling of the natural amphitheatre for the better entertainment of the audience and a general brushing up all around the spacious grounds inside the high fence. Although it is doubtful if the street railway reaches the park before the opening for the summer, yet it is bound to point that way in the near future, and with this means of easy access to the place it is sure to add to the number of visitors, as well as the value of the property.

The Franklin street railway have been granted an increase of the company's capital stock to $500,000, and the issuance of bonds to an equal amount, the proceeds to be applied to extensions and other construction work, purchase of equipment. The total amount of such stock and bonds is not to exceed $30,000 per mile. A clause in the act gives the company the power to lease or purchase at any time the whole or a portion of the property or franchise of any other street railway in the towns of Mendon, Hopedale, Hopkinton or Westboro. Officials of the road have been in conference with some of those of the Milford, Holliston & Framingham company with reference to conditions which will arise after the completion of the former company's road from Franklin to Caryville and its junction there with the latter's line. It is understood that the Ray syndicate will complete the branch to Caryville just as soon as suitable weather arrives, and it now seems probable that Franklin people can go to Milford by electric cars via Caryville by Memorial day at the latest, and probably considerably before then.

The Curfew By-Law.

Owing to the unusual interest taken by the people in the curfew by-law passed at the adjourned town meeting on Monday evening, and for the benefit of parents and guardians, who have an especial interest in the matter, we publish the full text of the measure:

"Section 1. No person under sixteen years of age shall be in or remain in or upon any of the streets or public places of this town in the night time after nine o'clock p. m. unless accompanied by parent, guardian or other person having the proper custody of such minor person; or unless such minor person is in the performance of some duty directed by such parent, guardian or other person having the proper custody of such minor person; or is going to or coming from some dwelling or public place of amusement, entertainment or instruction.

"Section 2. No parent, guardian or other person having the legal care and custody of any person under sixteen years of age shall permit or allow such minor child, ward or other person under such age, while in such legal care or custody, to go or be in or upon the streets or public places of this town in the night time after nine o'clock p. m. unless there exists a reasonable cause or necessity therefor.

"Section 3. Whoever violates the provisions of either of the foregoing sections shall be punished by a fine not exceeding ten dollars for each offence."

Richardson's Market.

People seem to enjoy "roasts." We have secured one for our patrons for Saturday which will cost as before, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 cents. Of course we have finer cuts costing a little more. Then we have a nice line of turkeys, fowls and chicks, costing from 15 to 20 cents. All the vegetables to be found in Boston to go with our meats, including the famous White Cape turnips, and rhubarb at 12 cents per pound. Butter, canned goods, tea, coffee, etc.

Ocher, the barber, will call at the house to do shampooing. Drop a postal to box 210 or call at his shop.

Fresh cut flowers at Slade's.

Lenten Service.

At the Universalist Lenten service last evening Rev. Dr. Hodge preached the sermon. He had received at a late hour a letter from the wife of Rev Mr. Kimmell of Charlestown, who was to have preached, saying that Mr. Kimmell was ill and in bed. A curious incident was that Dr. Hodge awoke from a dream in the early hours of Thursday morning, in which dream he had been preaching a sermon. It seemed to him that there was some emergency and he had to preach at short notice. He dreamed that he was preaching a sermon under four heads, and on waking endeavored to impress these four heads upon his mind, so that he should not forget them. His sermon last evening was based upon these four points which came to him in his dream. They were treated in a way which made a number of his hearers say, "Please dream some more." His first point was that the religion of Christ is based upon events. It is not speculation, argument, thought merely. Something has happened. Jesus has lived. It is not a myth that is the basis of the Christian faith. It is reality, history.

The life of Christ, pure, high, self-sacrificing, has been lived. His church has been established. If the four gospels were blotted out the evidence to the life of Christ would remain. We should have it still in the records of St. Paul. Paul wrote to Christians in widely separated cities—Rome, Corinth, Galatia, Philippi. There were, then, people in all these cities drawn out of heathenism by the power of Christ. Even if the whole New Testament were lost we should lose that which is of inestimable value, but evidence of something of the very greatest moment having taken place in this world would still remain in the Christian church.

The second point was that the Christian religion is based upon great ideas, great thoughts, doctrines. Its great idea about God is that He is a Father, that He is love to men. Its idea of man is that He is a child of God and a brother to every other man; that there is in Him a certain divine element to be realized and perfected. The Christian religion is based upon duties, different under Christianity from what the duties of men are as taught by other religions.

Man is to help. He is not to live for himself, but for others, for the whole. This religion also has its hopes. It is not immortality which is the great word under Christianity, great as that hope is. It is eternal life. The hope of higher life, of completeness, of a realization of all aspiration, all noblest ideals, this is above all other hopes in the religion of Christ. For the elevation and blessing of all, for the realization of brotherhood, for the making of purity and a better life to abound the church Christ established here exists. It needs all who do truly desire to make men better and society cleaner.

Through Youthful Eyes.

By request we publish this contribution by a lad of twelve:

Philadelphia is a good old historical city, the city of William Penn, friend of the Indians. I started from Franklin in company with my mother about 8 o'clock one evening, reaching New York about 10 30 the next morning. We were three hours late in reaching New York on account of ice and strong winds. By being late we had an opportunity to see more than we could if we had reached there at the usual time. We sailed under Brooklyn bridge, which reaches across the East river from Brooklyn to New York; it is nearly two miles long, 85 feet wide and 135 feet above the water. The statue of liberty is at the entrance of New York harbor. It seems strange to see horse cars in New York instead of trolleys. We took the ferry boat at New York across the North river to the Jersey shore, then took the train and went to Philadelphia, reaching our destination about 2 o'clock p. m.

A day or two after we arrived we went sight seeing. We visited the grave of Ben Franklin and his wife. We also visited Christ church where they attended. I sat in his pew. There are people's graves under the floor of the church. The minister stands quite high above the people and there is a sounding board over him. He reaches the pulpit by winding stairs. We then went to Independence hall and saw a great many relics and saw the Liberty bell; it has a very big crack in the side of it. It was rung when independence was declared in the year 1776. We visited Independence chamber where declaration of Independence was adopted July 4, 1776. One room was full of pictures of great men. I saw the picture of the author of "Star Spangled Banner." What was his name? We visited the Betsy Ross house where the first flag was made; the room has not changed much of any since that time. The house is in the heart of the city. I joined the American Flag House and Betsy Ross Memorial association. Its object is to purchase the building so to preserve the birthplace of Old Glory. I am getting up a club and anyone can join it by giving ten cents. Each one receiving a diploma.

The Terms of the Franchise.

The franchise granted to the Medfield & Medway Street Railway company in Franklin provides that the location of the tracks and poles in the street is to be determined by the company, subject to the approval of the selectmen, and a plan showing the same shall be filed with and approved by the selectmen before this work of construction begins. The company shall use 60 feet T rails, weighing not less than 60 pounds to the yard, except Main street, where girder or T rails shall be used, as the selectmen elect. The ties shall be satisfactory to the selectmen; track shall be laid at existing grade of streets, and in case of change of grade the company relays to conform at its own expense; at street crossings between Emmons and Lincoln streets the said crossings are to be paved 18 inches each side and between the rails. If Main street, in the future, shall be paved, the company shall pave between tracks and 18 inches on the sides. All cross-walks shall be constructed of the same material as used by the town, and when the company fails to keep in repair the town can repair and charge to the company. Iron poles are to be used on Main street and chestnut in other places. all to be painted with two coats of dark green paint; the company agrees to the usual conditions to save the town harmless from damage from the construction or operation of the railway. Poles and wires are not to interfere with others belonging to the town, and trees are to be trimmed under the supervision of the selectmen or tree warden and expenses paid by the company. The usual provisions for water and gas pipes are made, and the order is not to abridge any rights possessed by the town in the streets. Necessary widenings of highways or bridges are to be at the expense of the company. The company is to run cars hourly from 6 a. m. to 11 p. m. and between 7 a. m. and 9.30 a. m. and 4 and 8 p. m. half hourly. The rate of fare is not to exceed five cents from any point on the line in Franklin to any point in Medway. School children and school teachers attending school have half fare, under certain conditions. The company is given until July, 1901, to construct the line.

Annual Parish Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Universalist church next Monday afternoon and evening. The meeting will be called to order at 5 o'clock, when the report of the treasurer will be read and the parish committee for the ensuing year chosen. A supper will be served at 6 o'clock by the members of the Young People's Christian Union. The supper will be of such a character as to meet a variety of tastes. After the supper further reports will be read, other elections made and the pews rented for the ensuing year. Two of the parish committee have died during the past few weeks and there are other vacancies in various offices to be filled at this meeting. The passing away of Mr. Ray necessitates the appointment of another custodian of the funds of the parish, and various measures for the work of the parish for the coming year are to be instituted. The meeting will be an interesting one, though necessarily one stirring some sad memories.

Notice.

The board of health of Franklin calls attention to the following statutes:

Public statutes 80 Section 76. When such disease (infectious) is found to exist in a town, the selectmen and board of health shall use all possible care to prevent the spreading of the infection, and to give public notice to travellers, by displaying red flags at proper distances, and by all means which in their judgment shall be most effectual for the common safety. And whoever obstructs the selectmen, board of health or its agent, in using such means to prevent the spreading of the infection, or wilfully removes, obliterates, defaces, or handles the red flags or other signals so displayed, shall forfeit for each offence not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars.

Section 75 provides that when any person ill with infectious disease remains in his dwelling, "the house or place where he remains shall be considered as a hospital, and all persons residing in or in any way concerned within the same shall be subject to the regulations of the board as before provided."

These statutes will be strictly enforced in this town.

Dental Notice.

I have, since the death of my associate, the late Dr. John T. Stetson, disposed of my Boston office. I will devote my entire time to Franklin patients of myself and the late Dr. Stetson. I extend sincere thanks to all who have for so many years held confidence in my ability, assuring them that renewed efforts will be made to merit a continuance of their patronage.

Dr. Metcalf E. Pond.

Who Is to Blame?

I desire to say that during the month of March thus far but fifteen cases of infectious disease has been reported to the School Board, as required by law.

Dr. A. J. Gallison, Chairman.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Mr. Editor:—As there has been some criticism in regard to the expense at the almshouse the past year I wish to state just what that expense was for. The overseers of the poor last year asked for an appropriation of $5,000 for the support of the poor for the ensuing year, which was granted. They then asked for an appropriation of $1,000 for making some improvements at the almshouse that were recommended by the agent of the State Board of Associated Charities at his annual inspection here. This was also granted—two separate appropriations for two separate purposes. If they had been kept separate and reported separate on the annual report everyone would have seen at a glance what the ordinary expenses of maintaining the almshouse were; that instead of $2,748.90 it would have been $1,748.90, which, with the deduction of $325.76 due from the almshouse, makes $1,423.14, which is correct, making a cost of $1.72 1-3 per week for each person supported at the almshouse, including superintendent's family, help and visitors.

The $1,000 appropriated for improvements were expended for that purpose and the overseers have told you in their report what those improvements were, and, of course, are an addition to the real estate and are in no way connected with the ordinary expense of the almshouse. This explanation is due the overseers of the poor and the superintendent.

N. B. Stone, Supt.

THE COMING ELECTION.

Our old friend, Wallace Ruthven Richardson, thus "dishes up" the ante-election situation in the local paper of his own town of Matteawan, N. Y.

The spring election now draws near,
When men of "prominence" appear.

All willing to take office, too,
If votes sufficient come to view.

Let this fact be borne in mind,
Officials should be wise and kind.

Of course it is understood
Republicans are always good.

Sometimes a Democrat is true,
And in the village will pull through.

Republican or Democrat,
Men and measures, more than that.

Integrity and common sense
Should rule the day and not pretence.

Let support be given hearty
To "good men" rather than the "party."

Be not beguiled or make a bet
For something you will never get,

But vote the best man for the place
In this our annual village race.

"Reuben."

Emerson's Market.

This is the week for "green stuff." We have spinach, lettuce, radishes, cucumbers, etc., Baldwin apples, choice cuts of meats of all kinds, fowls, chicks, fancy butter and canned goods. In addition we shall continue our special sale of roast beef from 8 cents up all day Saturday. We can't be beaten on this meat. Try it.

Advertising is business news. It tells the things which are of great daily importance. It is of more account to the frugal housewife to know where to get certain necessary commodities at a less price than usual than to know of the troubles in Siam and Alaska.

Spring Changes

are about due. You will want new picture frames to brighten up the freshened rooms, and you will want them up-to-date. The latest styles, in perfect taste, are simple and inexpensive. Many of my new spring mouldings are in and others coming.

FRIDAY, MARCH 23, 1900.

THE representative committee has decided against putting the telephone companies under state supervision. The Bell people wired that connection all right.

DEWEY crops up occasionally as a presidential candidate, this time the plea being that Mrs. Dewey desires it. Mrs. D. had better remain quiet and then she won't be disappointed.

"SAPHO" may now have a jury trial in New York, and there isn't one chance in a thousand that the authorities can get twelve men to say it should be prohibited. Vice will be the gainer.

REPRESENTATIVE REED of Taunton wants to know who is riding upon railroad passes. He will find his bill side-tracked" and he will be "switched off" onto more harmless questionings shortly.

THE Democrats of Kentucky now claim to have secured evidence as to the murderer of Goebel, and party feeling still runs high. The sooner the matter is cleared up in some way the better for the state.

HARRISON evidently gave the McKinley machine a few anxious moments recently, but no one who knows him thought for a moment he would take up the cares and duties again. He had nothing to gain.

THE Boers threaten to destroy Praetoria rather than prevent its falling into the hands of the British. How would that differ from the Russian treatment of Moscow, which was regarded as praiseworthy on their part?

ALWAYS seeking for victims the liquor interests asked the legislature to let them open the saloons on election day an hour after the voting was over. Rightly this was denied. Give these people a pinch and they'll take a handful.

HON. FRANK JONES of New Hampshire has seen a "great light" and is now full fledged Republican. Jones' ale will now have a less appetizing taste for his former political friends, perhaps, but his bar'l will count for his new friends.

OWING to the terrible mix up in police matters in New York city, where crime and vice have shown themselves to be so defiantly rampant, Croker has been importuned to hurry home from Europe, but refuses to do so. Will the authorities ever get up as "high" as he is?

WELLESLEY COLLEGE receives Rockefeller's donation of $100,000 with maiden shyness, and in return ought to replace the electric lights with kerosene throughout the institution, so that the poor man might get a portion of his money back in profits. That would be so reciprocal.

AS soon as the trusts are reached by law it wouldn't be at all strange if labor unions were declared illegal on the ground that they aim to control wages. What is the difference between a trust that makes one pay high for goods or high for labor? The shoe will pinch both sides

EX-CONGRESSMAN WALKER, after a clear defeat by Congressman Thayer, and due entirely to himself, is now out again after the place. Does Mr. Walker think that he is the "whole thing," and that there is no more congressional timber left in the district? One wouldn't have to go far into the woods to find good material?

IT looks now as if Senator Clark of Montana, who allowed the use of so many thousands of his money to "purify politics," as he termed it, would be allowed to take his seat. They say he is not a half-bad man, and his money may be of use later. Of course he can stay; there are no men wanted now a days in the senate if they haven't money

HON TIMOTHY WOODRUFF of New York still continues to take himself seriously as a vice presidential candidate, but when Mark Hanna gets after him his promising future will vanish into thin air, and he will have had the pleasure simply of having been "mentioned" for the place. Practical politics will settle upon the man when the time comes.

THIN HAIR

Lots of people have thin hair. Perhaps their parents had thin hair; perhaps their children have thin hair. But this does not make it necessary for them to have thin hair.

One thing you may rely upon—

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

makes the hair healthy and vigorous; makes it grow thick and long. It cures dandruff also.

It always restores color to gray hair,—all the dark, rich color of early life. There is no longer need of your looking old before your time.

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

"As a remedy for restoring color to the hair I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor has no equal. It has always given me perfect satisfaction in every way."

Farmers' Club.

Franklin Farmers' club met Monday evening with S. H. Metcalf, Sheldonville, Mr Metcalf read a paper on "Tree Fruit: Selection, Cultivation and Marketing." He said: "There are few kinds of fall apples worth cultivating and among them are the Gravenstein and Early Harvest. I think winter apples are the most profitable to cultivate, as the market is better and they will keep better, also the refuse apples will make cider for vinegar, which is always in demand. Peaches it is almost impossible to raise, and if they do grow it is very probable some one will want to help themselves to them On plums the curculeo is a pest, and the black knot is al most sure death. When buying trees it is not so essential to have the fruit as it is to get a good tree. If the tree does not produce the fruit wanted, graft it.

"Several years ago I was induced by a tree agent to invest in trees, so gave him an order for about $25 worth I set them out and all lived One, called a Porter, produced a little red apple that you wanted pincers to pull off; the Twenty Ounce Pippin had a little sweet apple for the fruit I grafted them Pears need the least care of any fruit. I have had only one serious trouble. Four years ago I discovered that they looked as though they had been sand papered for about half the surface, and the leaves were covered on the upper side with what looked like coal dust. I made a solution of strong soapsuds, putting about a pint of kerosene oil into a water pailful and gave them a thorough spraying. I have seen nothing of the kind since. The Bartlett is the standard pear and Clapp's Favorite is good if you take it in time."

A good number were present and enjoyed the evening, especially the after part and sociable.

She Had to Pay.

"Do you call those clothes?" said sternly a British customs official to a woman who had declared that there was nothing in her trunk but wearing apparel for herself and husband. And as he spoke he pointed to four bottles of old Highland whisky. "Yes," said she, softly, "those are his night-caps."—Ally Sloper.

Progressive Reformation.

"Snugworth is a queer genius. Three years ago he quit drinking. Exactly a year later he gave a large sum of money to a needy relative. Just a year ago he joined the church, and now he's gone to preaching."

"Don't you see? He's going to Heaven on the installment plan."—Chicago Tribune.

A Mere Trifle.

"We are lost!" exclaimed the politician. "The opposition to you has a clear majority!"

"Is that all?" queried the boss disgustedly. "From your manner I really feared for a moment that I was in danger of being defeated."—Brooklyn Life.

Always the Opposite.

Through Youthful Eyes.

We visited Carpenter's hall, where congress first met. You can see the library about the congress and the chairs which the men sat in at that time. Girard college was founded by Stephen Girard for poor orphan boys. Boys can enter the school between the ages of four and ten years. They have three suits—best suit, second suit and play suit. There are 1,500 boys. Every night after school, at 4 o'clock, they go to the chapel for fifteen minutes' service; after the chapel service they can go and play. Girard college contains ten or twelve buildings made of beautiful stone. Several of the buildings contain school rooms and dormitories; there is an infirmary, one large building for dining room, parlors, class rooms and dormitories. The grounds are laid out nicely; they are surrounded by a high, wide wall.

One cool breezy day we took the trolleys and rode up to Mount Airy to the Deaf and Dumb institute, a beautiful place. The scholars go to school in the forenoon and work in the afternoon. There are about 400 scholars. The girls learn to sew, trim hats and make parts of shoes; the boys make shoes, work at tailoring and printing. Most all the work is done by the scholars; they print the reports and a paper. There are several buildings on the grounds all of stone.

We visited the Zoological gardens, where you can see all kinds of animals, mostly wild; there are also birds and snakes. One nice, cold morning we visited the mint, where they make money, the only mint where pennies and nickels are coined. You can see them making money. At first the silver and gold is in bars; they are melted and then rolled out thin. There is copper in the gold and silver, so it will not wear out so quick. We saw trays of gold in bars worth $1,000 or more They sweep up the dust and burn it, so as to save all the gold, and when the workmen's clothes get too old to wear they burn all them to save the gold. In the last room we visited there were show cases on two sides of the room full of coins used by all nations of the world. Paper money is made in the mint at Washington. We saw the widow's mite, a black piece of money, which makes me think of sen-sen, only four times larger. The Chinese money has little square holes in the center. The little pieces are carried on a string around the neck; the other size is much larger and they are carried on a string around the waist.

Last but not least we visited the grounds of the Pennsylvania university where C E Abbott attends; they contain several handsome buildings of stone and brick. There were more places of interest I would liked to have visited, but time would not permit me to do so. Philadelphia is a very pretty city, with many pretty buildings. I do not think I saw over a dozen wooden buildings while I was there. City Hall is a beautiful building, covering sixteen to twenty acres, including the sidewalks There is a statue of William Penn on the tower and when illuminated it is a lovely sight.

The time came when we had to say good-bye. We started from New York about 5 p m. We were able to see the Brooklyn bridge illuminated; it was a pretty sight. We reached home about 9 o'clock the next morning after a pleasant visit, being away about a month.

Firmly Rooted.

The daughter of a Mississippian who has adopted Memphis as her home tells the following story on her father:

"Papa was relating to the family and some of his friends one day the experience he had gone through in having a tooth pulled. He said the dentist pulled so hard that he pulled him clear out of his chair. I was only a little girl at the time, but I mustered up courage to say, half musingly:

"'Well, papa, that must have hurt mighty bad.'

"'Well, I guess it did,' he replied. 'If you could have seen the two roots of that tooth that were wrapped around my backbone, you would know how it hurt without asking me.'

"I suppose he meant jawbone, but the laugh that followed was too loud for me to bear the correction, and I do not know to this day where the roots of that tooth had taken hold."—Memphis Scimitar.

"Opportunity Is the Cream of Time."

Now is your opportunity. There is no time when the system is so much in need of a good medicine, like Hood's Sarsaparilla, and no time when it is so susceptible to the benefits to be derived from such a medicine. By purifying, enriching and vitalizing the blood and toning up the system Hood's Sarsaparilla starts you right for a whole year of health.

Constipation is cured by Hood's Pills

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called Grain O? It is delicious and nourishing and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain O is made of pure grains and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about one fourth as much. All grocers sell it; 15 and 25c.

What Shall We Have for Dessert?

This question arises in the family every day. Let us answer it today. Try Jell-O, a delicious and healthful dessert. Prepared in two minutes. No baking! No baking! Simply add a little boiling water and set to cool. Flavors: Lemon, orange, raspberry and strawberry. Get a package at your grocers today. 10 cts.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH

President Hadley once held the running record at Yale in his student days.

One of the presbyteries in North Dakota is composed entirely of Indian churches.

The attendance at the political science school, Columbia university, is 118, compared with 81 last year.

Rev. Harry Wilson, rector of St. Augustine's church, London, raises and dispenses over $10,000 a year in charity.

There are 50 girls in one mission school in China who had been thrown away by their parents to die in their infancy.

The Gospel is preached in Spanish in Buenos Ayres by missionaries from the Methodist Episcopal church, from the Church of England, the Salvation Army and the French Baptists.

Prof. Robinson has been appointed to take charge of the new course in old and middle Irish at Harvard in addition to the course which he is giving in early Welsh. The Irish plan is a new departure, but is said to be drawing quite as well as could be expected.

The largest Bible class for men in Great Britain is at Bristol, England. The class was organized 19 years ago at the Old Market Wesleyan chapel, and nearly 10,000 persons have passed through it. The present membership is 800 and the managing staff consists of 100 officers.

A new scheme for evangelizing India on interdenominational lines has been advanced in England. This consists in selecting Eurasians in India and bringing them to England, where they are trained as missionaries, after which they return to India and become native missionaries, having much more influence than do the foreigners. For this purpose it is proposed to equip a house in London which will accommodate 18 or 20 persons to be so trained.

LIES vs. FACTS

No man wishes to buy a pig in a bag, and no one places confidence in the advertisements of Scale makers which SOUND improbable. "Something for nothing" can never be had, and when you see Scales advertised so indefinitely as to leave a BIG percentage for the imagination; investigate carefully.

Some people are fair-minded, and to them we refer the Scale question. Actions SPEAK louder than words, and when you find a genuine article made of good material FOR a fair price is it not better that the facts in the case should be looked into by fair-minded men for THEMSELVES before buying any kind of a Scale?

THE WEE ONE.

Down at our house is a wee one,
And nobody ever could see one
More sweet and complete from the tips of his feet
To the soft fluffy down on the top of his crown;
Oh, the hue of his eyes is the blue of the skies,
And the guile of his smile like the laugh of the day,
Merry and winning and gladsome and gay,
While his cheeks are like clover, with pink flushing over.
From the break of the dawn to the set of the sun,
There is nothing you'll see that is fairer than he,
Our own little, dear little wee one!

Two fat little fists has the wee one,
And he always can show you a free one
To tear at your hair and to make havoc there,
And a dimple he'll find you still further to bind you;
And he's two little teeth lately out from their sheath
That will bite with delight on your finger or knuckle,
Or make tiny dents on your watch or your buckle,
While his feet growing bolder will drum on your shoulder.
But who minds the scars when they're every one done
By that mischievous mite, that witching young wight,
Our own little, dear little wee one?

Ah, many a friend has the wee one,
And he knows if you happen to be one;
He'll gurgle and coo and he'll frolic with you,
Or stretch out his arms with his prettiest charms,
And fret when you wake him to get you to take him;
He'll hoax you and coax you and cut up his capers,
Toss over your treasures and tumble your papers;
You have to attend him, you have to befriend him.
But who can help loving that bundle of fun,
That giver of joy, that bright little boy,
God bless him, our dear little wee one!
—Martha Burr Banks, in Outlook.

How Mr. Jobson Did It.

IT happened that when Mr. Jobson remained at home one day last week for the purpose of coddling a cold the colored household servant remained away. Mrs. Jobson, therefore, answered all of the rings of the front and basement door bells. Mrs. Jobson is an adept in the gentle art of fanning door bell ringers who have a tale to unfold or something to purvey, but her work on this day didn't meet with Mr. Jobson's indorsement.

"Mr. Jobson," he said to her along toward the close of the afternoon, when she had attended the nineteenth whang at one or other of the bells, "permit me to inquire if you are always, year in and year out, such a good thing for the itinerant bunco artists who pull door bells as you have exhibited yourself to-day?"

"Well, you know," explained Mrs. Jobson, "it is really necessary to answer the rings. Supposing a telegram—"

"I have no complaint to make about the mere answering of the rings," interposed Mr. Jobson, oracularly, "but it's the gaff—if I may be allowed to relapse into a graphic phrase of slang by my own fireside—it's the gaff that you permit the whole bunch of bell jerkers to shoot into you that persuades me to fear for your reason. I observe that you spend about 20 minutes in talking to each and every one of 'em—"

"Why, how can you say such a—"

"Twenty minutes in conversing with each and every one of them," went on Mr. Jobson, "and at the wind-up they all win you, hands down, and, surrendering unconditionally, you produce the coin for whatever they have to sell, or, if they are simply grafting for rum money—probably having this house marked, all of 'em—you make good every time. Mrs. Jobson, it is a sorrowful thing for a man to be compelled to reflect that he has a mark for a wife. Now, I'm going to be at home to-morrow, while you're out plowing around for another servant, and if you could just employ somebody to take snap shots of the way I'll give the hot foot to the raft of gong sounders who'll repair to this household, under the impression that you're here, the pictures'll contain some instruction for you, Mrs. Jobson—that's all."

Mrs. Jobson set out immediately after breakfast the next morning to visit the employment agencies and Mr. Jobson planted himself in one of the front windows of the parlor with his newspaper and cigar. He heard the first prospective bell ringer ascending the front steps and he poked his head out of the window.

"Try the next house," said Mr. Jobson, shortly.

"Oh, I'll get along there all right, boss," said the man on the front steps, holding up a contrivance that looked something like a rat trap, "but you'll be missing something, honest, if you don't let me show you what a baby of an egg beater this thing I've got here is. Works this way, see?" and the man did a bit of rapid demonstrating.

"By jing, that does look like a pretty effective culinary tool," said Mr. Jobson, putting on his glasses. "Fellow that invented that must be worth a mint, eh? Let's see it."

Mr. Jobson reached out for the patent egg beater and toyed with it interestedly for a moment.

"How much are the things?" he inquired.

"Half a dollar," said the man on the steps, and Mr. Jobson dug into his silver pocket and produced the half. The man went down the steps with a grin. Four doors above Mr. Jobson's he sold one of the patent egg beaters for 15 cents.

Mr. Jobson was reading the election predictions and snorting over them about ten minutes later, when there came an apologetic sort of a ring at the basement door bell. Mr. Jobson stuck his head out of the parlor window and demanded: "Who's that?" A rusty looking specimen of a white man shambled into the areaway below.

"T'ought I'd ast ye if ye could let me have anny cold vittles, cap," said the hobo, looking up. "Hain't had a t'ing to put in me face f'r four days,' an'—

"Just wait a minute and I'll be down," said Mr. Jobson, pulling in his head and closing the window. "There's a dickens of a lot of tough luck in this world, for a fact," he mused on his way down the basement stairs. Then he dug into the refrigerator, took out about half a cold baked ham, a nice piece of cold roast beef that Mrs. Jobson was saving for breakfast hash and a bottle of beer. Then he took a whole loaf of Vienna bread from the bread box. He opened the basement door and handed the whole armful to the hobo, without apparently noticing that the latter's breath smelt like a copper-coiled still. The hobo sized Mr. Jobson up out of the tail of his eye, and departed with a grin. Mr. Jobson resumed his paper and cigar at the parlor window.

He was so immersed in his reading that he didn't hear the next man ascending the front steps, and the clang of the front bell aroused him. The bell ringer was within the vestibule, and so Mr. Jobson went to the front door.

"Want a nice feather duster to-day, boss?" asked a man with three or four dozen of the dusters strung all over him, holding one of them up. "Only got a few left, and want to get out of town to-day, so I'm almost givin' 'em away. How's this one for a dollar?"

"N-no," replied Mr. Jobson, "I believe my wife's pretty well provided with—"

"This one for 75 cents is dirt cheap cap," said the man in the vestibule, and Mr. Jobson took it and whisked it a bit.

"Oh, well, I guess a house can't have too many such things," he said, after a pause, and he dug up the 75 cents. Then he went back to his seat in the parlor, only to be jolted a few moments later by another ring at the basement bell. He found a shrewd-eyed youth who was selling eggs for 'nteen cents a dozen—"fresh-laid, boss, 'n right from the country, an' they're 30 a dozen in the stores"—and Mr. Jobson bought four dozen. Seven-eighths of them were subsequently discovered by Mrs. Jobson to be passe to the point of usefulness.

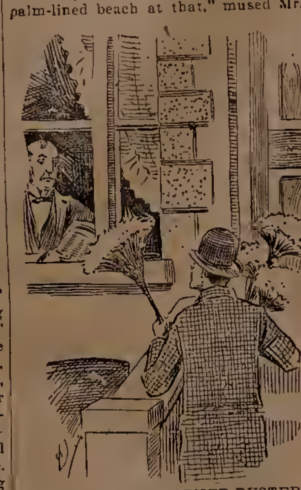
Ten minutes later Mr. Jobson looked up from his paper and saw a man loaded down with cheap framed water colors on the front steps.

"Nothing doing," said Mr. Jobson, hoisting the window. "Got too darned many pictures now."

The man held up a gorgeous tropical view.

"Last Philippine scene I've got, sir," he said, persuasively, to Mr. Jobson. "Sold one just like it down the street for $3.50, but you can have this for two dollars."

"Pretty nice representation of a palm-lined beach at that," mused Mr. Johson, stroking his chin. "Looks warm and balmy to have in the house in cold weather."



"WANT A NICE FEATHER DUSTER?"

And he took it.

When Mrs. Jobson came home she found Mr. Jobson with a smooth-looking man in the dining-room. The table was littered with sample copies of "The Beauties of the Yellowstone and the Yosemite," in 98 numbers, at a half dollar per number, one delivered each week. Mr. Jobson closed with the agent and paid for the first six numbers.

"An agent for the same series of views was here one day last week," said Mrs. Jobson to the man as the latter shoved the three dollars into his pocket.

"Agent for the same series here last week, eh?" said Mr. Jobson to her after the man had gone. "I suppose you think that hooks me? Well, it doesn't, Mrs. Jobson. It simply shows that you don't know a good thing when you see it, and that whatever artistic perception you may ever have had is badly blunted. And these views don't comprise the only bargain I've picked up this morning, either. If I had the opportunities that you have to pick up useful and necessary articles without moving from my own door step at about one-eighth what the daylight robbers in the stores charge for 'em, we'd be a heap more on velvet, Mrs. Jobson, than we are under your money-burning regime."—Washington Star.

Danger Signals!

Do you take cold with every change in the weather? Does your throat feel raw? And do sharp pains dart through your chest?

Don't you know these are danger signals which point to pneumonia, bronchitis, or consumption itself?

If you are ailing and have lost flesh lately, they are certainly danger signals. The question for you to decide is, "Have I the vitality to throw off these diseases?"

Don't wait to try SCOTT'S EMULSION "as a last resort." There is no remedy equal to it for fortifying the system. Prevention is easy.

Scott's Emulsion

prevents consumption and hosts of other diseases which attack the weak and those with poor blood.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is the one standard remedy for inflamed throats and lungs, for colds, bronchitis and consumption. It is a food medicine of remarkable power. A food, because it nourishes the body; and a medicine, because it corrects diseased conditions.

Spanish Traditions in Italy.

Spanish traditions still reign in several of the southern provinces of Italy. There are many little towns in the Neapolitan district, for instance, where the women of the upper and middle classes cannot go out on foot by themselves, no matter what their age may be. Failing a male escort—husband, brother or friend—they are followed by a duenna! These Castillian customs are dying out; but even the great centers of the south, where the habits and manners of modern life seem well established, they have left their traces, and where even a small modicum of liberty for women is still in dispute, how is the public mind to be persuaded to consider seriously a social transformation having for its obect the equality of the sexes? The young woman of today considers herself fairly well off when she remembers that her mother dared not walk alone in the streets of Naples. Enjoying her new independence, she never thinks of aspiring to the dignity of a vote, and her dreams are not troubled by any desire to see herself clad in the cap and gown of Portia.—Contemporary.

Where It Hits Him.

Trips of the Bobolinks.

It is said that the bobolinks which frequent the shores of Lake Winnipeg, Canada, during the breeding season, and which go to Cuba and Porto Rico each winter, twice every year traverse a distance exceeding 2,800 miles, or more than a fifth of the circumference of the earth.—Cleveland Plain Dealer

Military Tax in Switzerland.

To punish a man for nonpayment of a certain tax by forbidding him to enter a restaurant is in vogue in the canton of Berne. Every man in Switzerland must serve in the Swiss army if he be physically capable, and if he be not physically capable he must pay what is called the military exemption tax. The government says, if a man has money to spend for coffee, beer or liquors, he must also have money enough with which to pay his debt to the state. The law cannot prohibit a person from obtaining liquor through the intervention or help of a friend, but the privilege of dropping into favorite resorts and hobnobbing with friends—a custom which is dear to every Swiss—must be forgone.—N. Y. Sun.

A Hundred Year Lawsuit.

A lawsuit that has lasted over a century lately came to an end in Ireland. In 1797 Robert Smyth, a brewer of Smock Alley, Dublin, failed. A dividend was paid, but the assets did not realize 20 shillings in the pound. Four generations of creditors have in turn supplied grist to the legal mill, and it has been discovered that a small sum invested at the time by the court as too trifling for distribution has, by the accumulation of compound interest in a hundred odd years, developed into four figures, enough to pay off all the debts and leave a good sum besides for law costs. Strange to say, there is a claimant for every penny due in 1797.—London Chronicle.

Habitation 1,100 Years Old.

A great curiosity is a house 1,100 years of age, and yet fit for habitation. This old dwelling, the oldest inhabited house in England, was built in the time of King Offa of Mercia. It is octagonal in shape, the walls of its lower story being of great thickness. The upper part is of oak. At one time the house was fortified and known by the name of St. German's gate. It stands close to the river Ver, and only a few yards from St. Alban's abbey.—Chicago Chronicle.

Biggest Skyscraper of Them All.

The three champion skyscrapers of the United States are the Syndicate building on Park row, the Masonic Temple in Chicago and the Exchange building in Boston. These are to be reenforced by a monster structure to be built in Philadelphia by New York and Philadelphia capitalists, which will outshine all of them. It will occupy a whole block and be the largest office building in the world.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition; my skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying Electric Bitters, and to my great joy and surprise the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they saved my life and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them; only 50c. per bottle at A. C. Not What She Expected.

A young lady of the city who is somewhat noted for her conquetry was talking a few days ago to one of her numerous beaux.

"Oh," she said, in a most pitiful tone of voice, "nobody loves me."

As she paused for reply the young man said with that tenderness which always appeals to the feminine heart:

"I am quite sure that somebody does love you."

Her face brightened perceptibly as she said, with a great deal of interest:

"I wonder who on earth it can be. Do you know?"

"Oh, yes," he replied. "God and your mother."—Memphis Scimitar.

Not Many Bible Students.

Young men, before entering one of the principal medical schools of this country are examined as to their general knowledge. One of the questions given to the candidates for one of these schools last year was: "What are the names of the books of the Bible?" Of 120 answers, only five were correct. Among the names of the books were: "Philistines," "Marcus Aurelius" and "Epistle to the Filipinos."—Ladies' Home Journal.

They Marry Young.

The Boer youth weds extremely young. His education is over and he is considered a man of business when he is 16. His bride does not come to him portionless, but usually with a dowry of cows, goats and sheep, a span of oxen and a quiet riding horse. To each child that is born a well-to-do Boer likes to assign certain farm stock as a "nest egg" for a future dowry or as a start in life.—London Mail.

Satisfactorily Explained.

"Jane," said the mistress, just a trifle impatiently, "you were a long time coming up here. Didn't you hear me calling?"

"No, ma'am," replied Jane, "not till ye called th' third toime, ma'am."—Philadelphia Press.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Snodgrass spent Sunday with friends in Readville and Boston.

Frank D. Blake of South Framingham was a guest of his parents on Maple street Sunday.

The Dean base ball team will open the season here on April 14, with the English high school team.

The road department is to have additional horses, to replace the pair worn out in public service.

The electric cars run half-hourly Saturday afternoon, but the regular schedule was observed Sunday.

W. D. Huntoon of Norwood, a former well known Franklin resident, was a visitor in town Saturday.

The eldest son of John Collins, age 3 years, died today of scarlet fever, at his residence on Garfield street.

Misses Edna Holmes and Clara Nixon arrived home from Bridgewater normal school for the regular spring vacation, Friday.

Hon. Clark P. Harding has filed his bond as postmaster of Medway, and expects to assume his new position by April 1.

Miss Nellie Foran, in company with Miss Anna Allgier, of Providence, is spending a week's vacation with Miss Foran's parents on Summer street.

A party of friends from the Providence Athletic club surprised neighbor Thayer at his new bachelor quarters at the Whiting house on Sunday. They made the trip by electric.

Fidelity Lodge, A. O. U. W., whose lease of five years on Odd Fellows' hall recently expired, has again leased the hall for the same period for the holding of fortnightly meetings.

Saturday the overseers of the poor were busy attending the applications for superintendent of the town farm, personal and by letter. A large number of applications have been received.

Night Officer William Redpath, uniformed in regulation Metropolitan outfit, helmet and all, went on duty Saturday night for the first time since his appointment by the selectmen over a week ago.

The King's Daughters will meet this evening with Miss Amy P. Briggs at the Franklin House at 7.30. Several matters of importance are to be brought up and every member is expected to be present.

For some days past workmen have been engaged in stringing street railway wires between here and Wrentham. Two or three coils are used daily, and a coil has half a mile, and is said to weigh 1700 or 1800 pounds.

Mr Koehne's lecture upon "The Apostolic Church" will be given this evening in the Congregational church. The Cleveland Leader speaks of him as "A scholarly and eloquent defender of the Bible and Christianity," and this he certainly is.

Henry Bemis and his daughter, Mrs. Johnson, have both been sick at their residence on Main street Mr. Bemis was 90 years old last Christmas and has enjoyed remarkably good health. He is the oldest person in town.

Rev E. C. Bolles, D D., will preach at the Lenten service at the Universalist church Thursday evening. Those who remember Dr. Bolles' ingenious and interesting sermon last year will not wish to miss the opportunity of hearing him again.

The Metropolitan Insurance company on Saturday closed its office here and dispensed with the service of two of its agents, J. Kelly and A. Boyles. Hereafter all the company's business in this district will be done personally by Assistant Superintendent Dennis Fitzgerald.

Don't think of trying to do business without a standing advertisement in the SENTINEL When for a small sum you can tell many people every day just what you have to sell, you will make the biggest kind of a mistake if you don't avail yourself of such an opportunity.

The local board of health has put in a formaldehyde disinfecting apparatus in case of contagious disease. It is said to be the most satisfactory thing of the kind known and its use is strongly recommended by the state board of health. A member of the state board was in town last week and commended the strict quarantine of contagious cases.

The winter meetings of the Farmers' club close in April, meetings for April 2 and 9 being on the programme. During the winter the meetings have been well attended and the interest in the discussions has kept up. The discussions have included a wide range of subjects, all of interest to all citizens and many of them of special profit to the farmer.

The Medfield and Medway street railway company has a surveying party at work between here and Franklin staking out the extension of its line to that town, which officials state will be in operation in June. The line already in operation between Medfield and Millis will be opened up for traffic as far as Medway by April 20 and to Franklin by May 30

The selectmen on Friday evening settled the matter of filling the office of superintendent of streets by appointing Charles R. Gowen to the position in place of Frank S. Streeter. William H. Wales was drawn as juryman for the April term and the bond of Fred L. Davis as constable was approved. The matter of the appointment of a liquor officer was deferred for two weeks.

There is plenty of work laid out, if carried forward, to make the summer one of busy activity in this vicinity and relieve the army of unemployed of the stress of nothing to do. Building operations in the line of houses and railway construction and additional work on the highways is expected to make a busy summer, and later may give impetus to private improvements.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Rathbun entertained a number of friends at a whist party at their residence on Alpine street Saturday evening. A goodly number of guests were present from Woonsocket, making the trip in a special car. The affair was a pleasant social event and the guests were handsomely entertained by the hosts and hostess. The guests from Woonsocket returned at 11.30.

Norman B. Stone and wife have been engaged by the overseers of the poor of Medway as superintendent and matron respectively of the almshouse there, the salary of Mr. Stone, it is understood, being somewhat larger than the amount received here. He will conclude his labors at the Franklin town farm on March 31 and he and his wife will enter upon their new duties at Medway the day following.

The senior class of the High school were greeted by a good audience Friday evening at the Horace Mann building, the entertainment given by the pupils fully meriting the generous applause that was bestowed. The two pleasing comedies, "A Rank Deception" and a Chinese Dummy," were very cleverly presented and well worth witnessing. The plays were under the supervision of Miss Grace Whiting and excellent music was furnished by the High school orchestra.

The census of the United States, which is taken every ten years, is again in progress, and soon enumerators will be canvassing Franklin. In the past the enumerators were persons who had been recommended by either town or city councils. This year the plan is changed and a supervisor for the state has the appointment, and all those who wish to be enumerators must make special application to him. The supervisor will send the names to Washington for approval, and the names will then be returned. The canvass will commence in June.

Albert King is known to everybody in Franklin that has business with the post office, Mr. King being right hand man for Postmaster Conroy in the carrying of special delivery letters. Now it has been discovered that he was a schoolmate of Dr. J. C. Gallison in the 50's down in Maine, and the doctor has "writ" a little sketch about the good times they had down there throwing snow balls at the teacher from behind the school house and covering the top of the chimney when the pupils wanted a holiday, and other studious and brain wearing labor in which they were engaged.

Fire was discovered in the rear of F. A. Winchenbach's confectionery store in Opera House block at 11 o'clock last night and an alarm was sounded from box 8 at Central and Summer streets. The firemen were promptly on hand and soon had two streams on the flames, which were confined entirely t .e rear room, where candy is manufactured. The fire was under control 20 minutes after the department got to work. Little damage resulted from the blaze alone, but the stock in the store was ruined by smoke and water, which loss is understood to be covered by insurance.

During the winter in this vicinity hundreds of acres of woodland have been cleared in spite of the assertion often made that there was little except firewood to be found in this part of the country. The building of the street railways and telephone lines has greatly stimulated the demand for poles and sleepers, and in supplying this want a good deal of pine lumber for other purposes has been produced. The business has proved attractive enough to induce a number of men to engage in it either as a side issue of large proportions or the main industry of their time and energy. All that is needed for the permanent success of the industry is that the young sprouts grow rapidly enough to keep up the supply from year to year. While wood for fuel is secondary to securing lumber, the high price of coal has a good effect on that branch of the business.

Eugene O'Sullivan, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Sullivan, living on Alpine place, sustained probably fatal injuries by falling from a bridge at Webster on Friday night last while walking across the same with a companion. The distance from the bridge to the ground is 25 feet and the bottom is strewn with rocks. His companion, August Johnson, clambered below and remained with the injured man until help came. O'Sullivan was brought here to the home of his parents on Saturday afternoon and Drs. G. A. Martin and C. B. Hussey were called in to attend him. He was found to be suffering from a fractured skull, having evidently struck upon his head when he fell. His collar bone was also broken, there was an ugly wound in the forehead and he had sustained internal injuries. The injured man, who is about 22 years of age, had been working in a mill at Nasonville up to about a month ago, when he returned home, leaving again last week in search of employment. He had formerly been employed in the American (Ray) woolen mill here.

"Town and City Problems."

At the union temperance meeting, held in the Baptist church Sunday evening, Rev. A. H. Davis of Woonsocket spoke on "Town and City Problems" to an audience that completely filled the church. The speaker said that while the problems for settlement involved everything from license to election of petty officers, only three of the more important would be considered in the discourse. Principle should be put above party. The party boss, with his greed for power and money and underlings clamoring for office, has little respect for law, order or morality, and in order to retain party power caters to the lowest passions. Thus politics become a profession and the politician an adept in manipulating municipal matters. He has been able to do this in a great measure by the worship of party in the hearts of many citizens. Such a condition brings us face to face with the question of intemperance and moral reform.

The saloon is the prime agent for the increase of intemperance and is the vanguard of other evils inflicted upon the community. It is the hatching and fostering place of incarnate devilishness. Has it a right to exist when a majority say no? Shall men of indifferent morals, or no morals at all, fatten at the expense of their victims because of party politics? Let justice be done though the party falls. The saloon question is a perennial one and demands constant attention, because the laws governing it are too few or too weak and the laws protecting it are often loopholes of escape for the guilty. It is often protected by local politicians, and the saloon power and methods in many communities is a shame and a blot upon civilized government.

The second and third problems of the social evil and law enforcement follow the saloon question as a matter of course. To solve these problems and rid the commonwealth of their destructive effects we must have civic righteousness at the foundation. To have this we must have a fearless clergy, a faithful people, education and agitation among all good citizens and rigid and non-partisan law enforcement. Press on to victory in the name of God and home and native land.

IN THE WAKE OF THE SWALLOWS.

ST. CHARLES HOTEL.,
NEW ORLEANS, LA., March 23, 1900.

"Fat Tuesday," "Shrove Tuesday," or "Mardi Gras" in this great and busy Southern city came to a singular end. Just as the last lights were put out, the last float of the grand scenic parade of Comus disappeared from the eager view of the thousands still on the streets, just as the big bell boomed out midnight and the first moment of Lent began, Nature gave way to a sudden burst of passionate, penitential tears, and such a gust of rain, wind, thunder and lightning told of the end of rejoicing and incoming of forty days of penance, that cheeks paled and laughter fled from lips a moment ago rippling with mirth.

This season of gaiety and carnival has been as fine as summer, warm, sunny and delightful. Not a drop has spoiled the fine gowns of a hundred thousand women, or dotted the silk hat of a single gentleman. From the great night parades illustrating the "Story of King Arthur and His Court," as told by the dead laureate poet, Tennyson, to the "Fairy Tales of Our Childhood," "The Dances of Terpsichore" and the imposing "Mythological Stories" of the last evening, Momus and His Krewe, Nereus, Rex the King, the Krewe of Proteus and the oldest of the Carnival societies, the Mystic Krewe of Comus, the days and nights have been clear and brilliant as the gorgeous spectacles which have turned New Orleans into fairyland or an air castle city of dreams.

Grand balls, French opera, extra matinees, the races, driving and mingling in the dense throngs which fill every street and avenue have occupied the more than 100,000 strangers who have poured in on double and treble sectioned trains from every point of the compass. Among the visitors is one of the handsomest and most cultured scions of a noble house of old England. The Hon. Reginald Beresford of London reached the city yesterday and secured a suite at Hotel Grunewald for a week. He is the son of Lord William H. Beresford, a man of public prominence for the past quarter of a century, and a nephew of Sir Charles Beresford, the rear admiral of the British navy. Lord Beresford is a turf fancier of great repute, and it was for him that Tod Sloan, the American jockey, did his wonderful riding, a feat that caused the horse world of England to look on with surprise.

The like of bridal couples was never before known at a New Orleans carnival. The clerks say that every one seems to have waited for Mardi Gras to get married and then set out for New Orleans to spend the honeymoon. Late last night the hotel newly-married record stood 254 couples in all the best hotels and boarding houses. And all these have been in evidence during the whole festival, for soft gray dresses, delicate hats and plumes, pearl gloves and immaculate suites have given darlings away—for all the world loves a lover, and are not the newly wedded the very darlings of Cupid?

The merriment and the intention to be jolly that have flocked in with the visitors have been amply met everywhere by the gracious hosts who have received them. There is a holiday smile on the face of every citizen and a look of greeting and goodwill from every native of the Crescent City, whether black or white. Every house has its decoration of the national colors and its streamers of purple, yellow and green in honor of Rex, the jolly, and the electric illuminations on club houses, public buildings and hotels rival the splendor of the stars. On parade nights from every side street begin to flock to the avenues happy groups of families, from the grand sire with his stick to the babe in arms. Not a rude act is seen, not a drunken person, not an accident. All is good nature, courtesy, quiet and harmony. St. Charles avenue is so broad that when the processions appear there is no hustling or crowding. In spite of so many thousands every one can see well.

But nobody cheers; there is no demonstration, no applause. People stand silently watching or commenting as at a theatre, in low voices. The magnificent floats, of which we have seen sixty, go by on rubber-tired wheels on a perfectly smooth pavement of asphalt and seem to glide like visions to the music of the bands accompanying each. Red and green fires, torches hidden by mirrors which reflect all the light on to the picture and illuminate its every detail are burned about each group, and the richly comparisoned horses, led by costumed and glittering grooms, draw the cars containing the gods, nymphs, elves and the mythological characters so exquisitely illustrated by living models.

The gamut of fairyland has been run; the rhymes of childhood have been illustrated; the legends of the savage, the chronicles of the Viking, the traditions of the Orient, the stories of old Greece and a host of more or less weird and ancient subjects have found form in one or the other of the remarkable processions. There has been nothing like them in history, and even the barbaric splendor of Nero's march into Rome does not eclipse the golden pilgrimages of Comus, Proteus and Rex in this latter-day New Orleans.

All that paper mache, paint, tinsel, spangles, flowers, feathers, gauze, silk, satin, velvet, furs, jewels, lights and people can do to render scenes from Egypt, Turkey, Siam, the sea, the marshes, the corral-beds, thrones, ruins, bowers, dragons, birds, serpents, horses, swans, the Royal Bull (in this instance a superb living creature high on a float and decorated with wreaths and ribbons), the infernal regions and the angels in heaven a visible reality, a moving picture before the eyes, is done in these grotesque or beautiful studies in scenic art which educate, appeal direct to the senses and make an object lesson which can never be forgotten.

If the rising generation of this city grows up ignorant of the beauty, the charm, the taste and culture which belong to knowledge of poetry, art and mythology, it will not be the fault of these societies of public-minded citizens who bear the great expense of these annual carnivals For it must be born in mind that with the one exception of Rex all this care, thought, energy and expense is private and exclusive, flourishing and increasing yearly until now a whole week of festivity is given to the city and its visitors gratis—a free exhibition of genius, pure, elevated, educational and beautiful.

New Orleans itself is a study and an amusement which seem to be perennial show to the unaccustomed Northerner.

The real Southern darkey is here, the French creole, the Spaniard, the Mexican, a cosmopolitan population living in a cosmopolitan way. The French market is a picture all the morning of a foreign world of tropic color, smells and chatter. Stalls of fresh vegetables massed in richest combination, dewy from suburban fields and gardens, fish alive still, shrimps, lobsters, oysters, turtle, terrapin, meats and unspeakable, untranslatable things to eat that look tempting or disgusting—turbaned heads, great jingling gold earrings, long white aprons, voluble Frenchmen, crowing cocks, bound by a leg to a dozen others, rabbits split from head to tail—and fruit! "The Golden Apples of Hesperides" typified on one of the floats, could not hold a candle to it!

Then the old cemeteries, the queer French quarters, the fine monuments, the grand churches—it is unnecessary and unpatriotic to go abroad until one has come and lingered in this historical metropolis, where on Mardi Gras day ten thousand maskers rival the carnival at Rome for comicality and richness of costumes, dancing among the crowd like so many merry devils, or on a day of religious devotion, music as exquisite and perfect as in any foreign cathedral, lifts the soul to the plane of worship, or reminds the hearer that there is "another city" far surpassing the glories of this world.

Lenten Service Again Tonight.

Those who heard Rev. Mr. Koehne at the Congregational church last Friday evening enjoyed one of the finest treats of eloquence, theological and historical research and dramatic representation it has ever been their lot to listen to. Possessed of a gracious stage presence, a full and well directed voice, he poured forth his matchless eloquence to the delight of every listener. He swung his rhetorical pick with such astonishing vigor that the nuggets of thought which he uncovered were in immediate danger of being obscured by others of even more lustrous brilliancy.

Pages of history he condensed into a succession of sentences remarkable for their research and depth of thought. Facts through ages of time fell from his lips with historical accuracy and beauty. Why Buddha failed, wherein lay the weakness of Confucius, why the Greek religion lacked the divine principle of perpetuity were shown in a manner that all might understand. No dry theological discussion, no musty historical facts were given to weary the listener. Indeed, so keen was the mental strain imposed upon both speaker and auditors that a distinct laxation was noticeable after many of his eloquent perorations. So rapidly did he paint his vivid word pictures that they followed one another in almost bewildering succession. Those who fail to hear him tonight will miss the treat of their lives. Service commences at 8 o'clock and all the seats are free.

A Terrible Warning.

There was a man who was too stingy to subscribe for his home paper, so sent his little son to a neighbor to borrow one. As the boy was going home he fell down and broke his leg. The father heard his cries and ran out to see what was the matter, but slipped and fell, dislocating his knee. His wife ran to his assistance, leaving a two year-old baby on the floor. The baby crawled out and fell down the well, and while the mother was fishing the child out the house caught fire and was totally destroyed. Moral—Now is the time to subscribe.—New York Sun.

Notice.

The board of health of Franklin calls attention to the following statutes:

Public statutes 80, Section 76. When such disease (infectious) is found to exist in a town, the selectmen and board of health shall use all possible care to prevent the spreading of the infection, and to give public notice to travellers, by displaying red flags at proper distances, and by all means which in their judgment shall be most effectual for the common safety. And whoever obstructs the selectmen, board of health or its agent, in using such means to prevent the spreading of the infection, or wilfully removes, obliterates, defaces, or handles the red flags or other signals so displayed, shall forfeit for each offense not less than ten nor more than one hundred dollars.

Section 75 provides that when any person ill with infectious disease remains in his dwelling, "the house or place where he remains shall be considered as a hospital, and all persons residing in or in any way concerned within the same shall be subject to the regulations of the board as before provided."

These statutes will be strictly enforced in this town.

G. A. MARTIN,
DWIGHT M. HODGE,
MARSTON SANBORN,

In the matter of the above statute the Supreme Judicial court in the case of Spring vs. Hyde Park, 137 Mass. 554, made the following decision: "A member of the board of health of a town has no authority, against the consent of the owner or occupant, to take possession of a dwelling house in which a contagious disease exists, and of the furniture therein, to the exclusion of such owner or occupant, and to carry away and destroy portions of the furniture, or to station a person on the premises with instructions to prevent ingress to and egress from the same, except in the manner pointed out in the Pub. Statutes., chap. 80."

See case of Brown vs. Murdock, 140 Mass., 314, and Hersey vs. Chaplin, 162 Mass., 175: "Even where the condition of the sick person is such that he cannot be removed without danger to his health the board has no authority to establish the place where the sick person is as a hospital, without the consent of the owner thereof."

What a Doctor Says.

It's not the big accidents, bad colds, and the germs of disease which are in every human being which are responsible for the pain and sorrow in the world which follows in the track of illness, says a leading physician, but the crass foolishness of the ord'nary man. Now, nearly every one knows that when he crosses his legs he is inviting dyspepsia. Yet does he desist? You have a slight cough, and instead of trying to stop it you inflame your throat by coughing as hard as you can, although you have been told time and again that by so doing you are only aggravating it. To please your vanity you wear boots and shoes which do not fit you. Out of pure carelessness you sit in an unhealthy position at table and at your desk; you eat food which you know does not agree with you; you drink a large tumbler of water before a meal because, like a child, your reason is not stronger than your thirst; you go away from a hot fire into the night air, and then grumble at catching a cold; you smoke too much, stay indoors too much, or take too much exercise, and then come grumbling to us doctors to make a new man of you. I often feel when some man, whose physique I can see must have been perfect, comes to me a hopeless wreck that the best kind of physic would be the rod, served very hot.

J. W. Boyer, of Rock Hall, Md., who died at the age of 80 a few days ago, had, according to a local exchange, dispelled all possible doubt as to whether his coffin would suit and fit him. Anticipating an early taking-off, he went some time ago to a factory and selected heavy timber and had it sawed to make his coffin. When the burial case was finished, Mr. Boyer carefully stretched himself out in it to make sure that its dimensions would be all right, and, getting out and yawning with evident satisfaction, he exclaimed: "Yes, that'll do first rate!"

One of the largest reservoirs ever constructed is to be built by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad for the purpose of supplying its engines and shops with water. It will be located five miles southeast of Galesburg, a division point on the main line 163 miles from Chicago. The reservoir will be 2½ miles long, 1,500 feet wide and 20 feet deep, and will have a capacity of 445,000,000 gallons.

A member of congress, who shall be nameless, received some time ago a handsome pumpkin from one of his constituents. The gift was made in a spirit of irony, however, as the note accompanying it said: "I send you the best pumpkin in my garden. As it's got more brains than you've got, it may be some help to you this winter, and the Lord knows you need it."

The esteemed Boston Globe facetiously asks: "Can unhatched chicks be mortgaged?" and then quotes this paragraph from the Cleveland Plain Dealer: "In a Texas case Judge Dillard decides that a mortgage on an unplanted crop is wholly illegal and void." From which it would appear that the Globe editor has sadly confused the crop with the hatchway.

A Hoboken (N. Y.) citizen, who backed himself to eat more than a great Dane, beat the dog in gastronomy by four plates of frankfurters one night lately. He devoured ten to the dog's six. Thus, says an envious contemporary, does culture and the graces of life assert themselves in select Hoboken society.

Two ordinarily nice young women in a Massachusetts town were disciplined out of the church the other day for breaking into laughter at a solemn prayer meeting. This was certainly indecorous. But, when it is understood that a good brother had just arisen with the remark that he was "sitting on a thought when the settee struck him," their merriment was altogether pardonable.—Time and the Hour.

Hypnotized Bass with His Bait.

All summer long the lockkeeper says, fishing in the Perkiomen was practically monopolized by one man, a New York writer, who camped on the bank of the stream, wrote at a novel now and then and fished with blood worms for bait. The blood worm, says the lockkeeper, had never been used in the Perkiomen waters before, and simply hypnotized the fish. The New York man with his blood worms would catch a couple of baskets of bass when the fishermen all around him would be having no luck at all. He kept his bait a secret and it was by accident that the lockkeeper "got on to it."—Philadelphia Record.

It is said the state of New York will send to the Paris exposition of 1900 a forestry exhibit of 34 specimens of wood, all native to the state.

Easily Remembered.

"Is it the grip that ails me, doctor?"

"It's the grip. Take this powder three times a day. As soon as you go home have your wife mix you some hot whisky and lemon juice—wait a moment. I'll write it down."

"That won't be necessary, doctor. I can remember the hot whisky and lemon juice."—Chicago Tribune.

He Lost His Case.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said a blundering counsel, in an action about some pigs, "there were just 36 hogs in that drove; please to remember that fact—36 hogs—just exactly three times as many as there are in that jury box, gentlemen."

That counsel did not gain his case.—Tit-Bits.

THE REFORMATION OF EDGAR.

Little Edgar used to run off with the boys to swim,
What time his mother sat at home and worried over him;
She used to say, day after day: "Now, Eddie, dear, if you
Run off again I'll punish you, and tell your father, too!
And then the boys would come along and "holler" at him: "Say,
You goin' with us to the lake to have a swim to-day?"

Then there would steal over Edgar's face a wistful look and sad,
And he would think how cruel were the parents that he had!
And when his mother's back was turned her precious little son
Would sneak out through the creaking gate and break into a run,
Forgetting, as he sped away, the promise he had made,
And stealing humbly home at night, repentant and afraid.

Day after day he ran away and dove from logs and docks:
He risked his life a hundred times among the rafts and rocks:
His mother's blows he did not dread, her hand was soft and small;
He felt his father's lashings, but they did no good at all;
He promised nightly to reform—upon his knees he vowed—
And when the boys came by, next day, forgot, and joined the crowd.

One morning Edgar's father, who sometimes indulged in thought,
Said to his son: "I'm glad that you go swimming, as you ought;
And do not fail to go to-day, my precious little lad—
Go down and duck and dive and swim and make your parents glad!"
Thus daily Edgar's father spake, in earnest tones to him,
And lo! that urchin straightway ceased to care to go to swim.
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Times-Herald.

A Case for Investigation.

THERE was a letter in the senator's mail that made him frown as he read it. One of his constituents was worried about the new bill that was up before the senate, and he wished for assurance that the senator would vote against it. There were more than rumors that money was being freely used to secure the passage of the bill, "and, though," the constituent wrote, "we, knowing your record, are not afraid of any question of bribery, we would like, if you are willing to give it, a definite statement of your position in the matter."

The senator frowned agan, and then, taking up his pen—for this was the last letter he had come to in his mail—he set himself to answer it. The senator was a self-made man, and though he was, after all, only a state senator, he was rather proud of his product. His was a good record, he knew, and he wished it to remain, in all things above suspicion, "like Caesar's wife," he thought, with a half-amused and tolerant wonder who she was. He had written: "Dear Sir—I regret that it is necessary for me again to assure my constituents that I do not allow my vote to be influenced in any way other than by considerations for the good of the state—." So far, when he heard a slight noise, and looked up. An apparition confronted him—a very pretty girl; and he stared, for she had come in unannounced.

"Is this Senator Brown?" she asked. The senator, while he answered, noticed that not only had she a very pretty mouth, with delicate red lips, but that they were quivering a little. Nothing more was needed to make the senator uneasy, for he was unused to women, and, like all self-made men, imagined that they were weak creatures who seized every opportunity to burst into tears. He admitted, however, that he was Senator Brown.

She came to her point with a business-like directness that surprised him in so small and frail a person. "Have you the disposal of a clerkship in the supreme court office?" The senator was surprised into saying that he had.

She moved a little closer to him, and he could see, on a nearer view, that she was even prettier than he had thought. She smiled. "Mr.—I mean Senator," she said, "would you rather have me call you Mr. or Senator Brown?" He murmured something about whichever she preferred, and she went on: "Then I shall call you senator, for when a man is a senator, why not give him his name? All sorts of people can be Mr." The senator, not knowing what to say to that, said nothing. She continued: "Senator, I want you to recommend a friend of mine for that clerkship."

The senator collected himself. He had seen officeseekers before, and had faced them undaunted. "Who is your friend?" he asked, bluffly throwing out his chest.

"His name is Miller," she answered slowly. "Arthur Miller. He is—oh, he is a very good clerk."

"Miller, hey?" remarked the senator. "Why, there was one man by that name who applied. He didn't suit me."

"Yes," she said, and the senator could see that she was holding her lips together very firmly to keep them from quivering. He liked her for it; that was his way, too; "hold on to yourself" was his motto. "Yes," she went on "that was Arth—that was he."

The senator looked down again at his pen. "No," he reiterated, without gentleness, "he didn't suit. He was too slow. He didn't have gumption enough." The senator had a vague feeling that he was being brutal, but he suppressed it as unworthy of a self-made man.

She drew back a little. "Thank you," she said, proudly. "That—that is all, I think." And she turned away.

"Wait a minute," demanded the senator. "Here, have a chair." He got up himself and brought her one, and, after a shrinking hesitation, she took it. "Now, what is it?" asked the senator bluntly, but not unkindly.

"I think," she said, "that if Arth—if Mr. Miller had a chance—" She stopped and began again. "He—he said you rattled him."

"Rattled him!" repeated the senator in amazement.

She nodded positively. "He is not slow." She looked down. "At least—he is very sure." She looked up again.

"Why," said the senator—he was a little lacking in tact; "the man was afraid to say his soul was his own. What will he do when the people over there ask him questions?"

"Answer them," she replied.

"But he didn't answer mine—at least, he took all day to do it."

She favored the senator with a look that was so like a kiss, it almost made him blush—though he never guessed why. "That's very different," she answered.

"So you think he would make a good clerk, do you?" She looked at him again, but it was a smile of toleration for his ignorance, this time. "No, senator," she said. "I know it."

"Is there any reason why you know it?" demanded the senator. He felt himself giving ground under the bombardment, but he meant to stand to his guns.

"I know it because I know all about him," she responded.

The senator looked at her keenly, and she slowly, very slowly, turned a bright red under his gaze. "Is that so?" he remarked, and she answered, defiantly: "Yes, that's it."

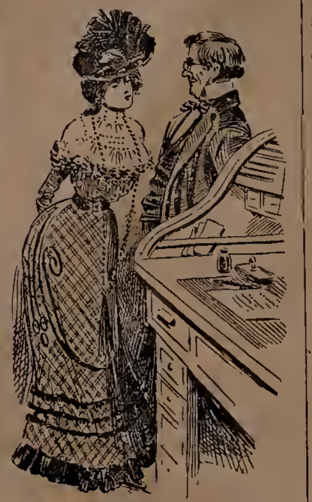
"Perhaps," said the senator, "I—ah—don't want to intrude, but perhaps, if Mr. Miller should get this position, you might—you and he might—"

"Yes," she helped him out, "we should."

The senator hesitated. She sat still and looked at him, and he noticed again that she was holding her lips together to keep them from quivering. He turned to his desk abruptly. "Did Miller send you here?" he demanded. He caught a bit of the look she gave him then and it sent a chill up and down his spine—the sturdy backbone he was so proud of. "I—I beg your pardon," he muttered. "Of course not." He wrote on a slip of paper and handed it to her. "There," he said. She got up and took it with shining eyes, and then she came nearer and nearer.

"I think I should like—I know I should like—" she breathed, "to kiss you."

"I'm so busy to-day," began the senator. Then he had the grace to blush



EVEN PRETTIER THAN HE HAD THOUGHT.

She came a little nearer still, and the senator reflected that after all he was an unmarried man. She was at his side, and he gave a swift but sneaking glance around. Then he stooped—

When she was gone, after a brilliant moment, the senator resumed his seat. "I remember that man Miller," he grumbled. "He had no gumption at all. Wade would be a much better man. Still," and the senator smiled grimly. Then he picked up his half-written letter and read it over:

"Dear Sir—I regret it is necessary for me again to assure my constituents that I do not allow my vote to be influenced in any way other than by considerations for the good of the state—"

He frowned at it, then he smiled at it. Then he tore it up and wrote:

"Dear Sir—You may assure whoever you wish that I shall vote against the bill.
"JAMES BROWN."

"I think perhaps," he remarked, to the blotter, "that is the safer way to put it."—Truth.

When a man is tortured with backache or lame back he doesn't want to experiment with new and untried remedies.

He realizes that the backache is kidney ache.

The lame back virtually means lame kidneys, and he knows that there's very serious trouble in store if he doesn't get his kidneys to do their duty. In his trouble he naturally turns to

Doan's Kidney Pills

Others all around him have been cured of kidney complaint by this wonderful little remedy. He has the testimony of others to guide him. He KNOWS that Doan's Kidney Pills WILL cure, no matter what form of kidney complaint he may have.

He learns this by reading emphatic evidence like the following:

Mr. H. J. Woodbury, carpenter, of 37 South Chestnut street, Augusta, Me., says:

"I was interviewed in the spring of 1896 by a gentleman who asked me for my experience with and opinions of Doan's Kidney Pills. I told him that I had been greatly annoyed by the action of my kidneys, that the slightest cold always settled there and produced intense suffering, and that Doan's Kidney Pills had cured me. It is now two years and a half since I was first interviewed, and I can conscientiously say, the longer and more fully you know Doan's Kidney Pills the greater faith you have in them. Everyone, as far as I have heard, speaks in the highest terms of their great value."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N.Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no substitute.

Rigid Test for Matrimony.

Both in the northern and western islands of Scotland the natives have some peculiar customs unfamiliar to the dwellers of the mainland. One of these, known as the "marriage test," is practiced in the island of St. Kilda, where the population barely exceeds a hundred. The desire among the islanders to increase this number does not seem to be exceptionally strong, and every man before he is deemed suitable for a husband has to perform an evolution with no little bodily risk. The St. Kildans are, of course, adept rock climbers, and the aspirant for matrimony is therefore subjected to the test of balancing himself on one leg on a narrow ledge overhanging a precipice, bending his body at the same time in order to hold the foot of his other leg in the hands. If found lacking in courage the maiden withdraws her betrothal, and should the man fall over the ledge it is presumed that, in his case, he will be disqualified.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Honor in "Pairing."

A curious incident, involving the question of honor in "pairing," is reported from North Adams, Mass. A citizen who desired to be out of town on election day arranged a pair with another citizen of opposite political faith, the latter pledging himself not to vote. Citizen No. 1 went on his journey, but citizen No. 2 violated his pair and voted for his candidate. For this he was summarily discharged from his position in a prominent manufacturing establishment, the proprietors saying that they had no desire to dictate to their employes how they should vote, but that they could not regard as worthy of trust or confidence any person who would dishonorably violate his solemn pledge. This so impressed the discharged employe that he made a public apology for his offense, saying that he did not at first realize its seriousness.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Poor Charity Plan.

The Danish scheme of state and communal gratuities, or pensions, to destitute males who have passed their sixtieth year and who have led reputable lives has not resulted in the good anticipated by its advocates and promoters. On the contrary, its workings have been demoralizing. The poor, so called, refuse to make, or even strive to make, provision for old age while it is in their power to do so, on the ground that support from pensions will come without effort. Children in flourishing circumstances refuse to assist their needy parents, money in savings banks has been withdrawn and squandered, and benefit associations to which employers have contributed have lapsed into bankruptcy. The scheme, in fact, has become a positive premium upon destitution, an incentive to improvidence and a foe to manly rectitude and self-respect.—Youth's Companion.

Tit for Tat.

A former commodore captain of a famous transatlantic line, while friendly and polite to his passengers when below, was very much the reverse if approached when on duty. As he happened to be on deck one fine afternoon, a lady, quite unaware of this peculiarity, accosting him with some trifling query as to the probable duration of the favorable weather, was both surprised and indignant to get curtly answered:

"Don't know, ma'am—don't know, Better go and ask the cook."

The lady, though taken somewhat aback, was quite equal to the occasion, and rejoined:

"Oh! I beg a thousand pardons. Excuse me, pray. I thought I was addressing the cook!"—Collier's Weekly.

Jupiter's Swift Moon.

Owing to an arithmetical mistake the distance traveled by Jupiter's fifth satellite in making the circuit of its orbit was stated, in this column on October 12, to be 353,250 miles. The figures should have been 706,500. The speed of the satellite is but little short of 1,000 miles per minute.—Youth's Companion.

If troubled with rheumatism, give Chamberlain's Pain-Balm a trial. It will not cost you a cent if it does no good. One application will relieve the pain. It also cures sprains and bruises in one-third the time required by any other treatment. Cuts, burns, frostbites, quinsy, pains in the side and chest, glandular and other swellings are quickly cured by applying it. Every bottle warranted. Price, 25 and 50 cts, at Albert C. Mason's, druggist.

Every family should have its household medicine chest, and the first bottle in it should be Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, nature's remedy for coughs and colds.

THE LADIES' GALLERY.

How Balloting for Seats in That Section of the House of Commons Is Done.

Whenever a session of parliament is about to open a number of wise legislators take time by the forelock and secure places for their friends weeks beforehand. Those who postpone making their requests till the last moment are disappointed. The ladies' gallery in the house of commons consists of two sections—two-thirds of it are given over to the members of the house; one-third, separated by a heavy partition from the other, is in the hands of the speaker's wife, or, if he has not a wife, in charge of the lady who is acting as the head of his household. In the portion of the gallery given over to the members of the house the applications for the seats, which are some 40 or so in number, are, of course, much more numerous than the seats, and, accordingly, there has to be a ballot.

When I first entered the house of commons this ballot used to take place every sitting just at the end of prayers, and in public. The member put his name on a piece of paper into a box, and then the sergeant-at-arms, with one or two of his attendants, used to take the names out, and the successful ones were entered in a book. This used to be one of the most enjoyable moments of the sitting. The spirit of schoolboyishness which is in every Englishman, used to reassert itself, and cheers, laughter, ironical compliments, all kinds of exclamations and running comments used to accompany the reading out of the names. For instance, if a member were particularly lucky in the ballot, and won two or three weeks in succession, there would rise a loud chorus of shocked "Ohs!" and "Ahs!" and sometimes a humorous cry of "Shame, shame!" Of course, if a member were a well-known man there would be some appropriate comment. But the old system has disappeared with a lot of the old usages which were in existence when I first entered the house. Balloting for the ladies' gallery no longer takes place in the open, and amid the tumultuous scenes I have described. A box is placed in one of the division lobbies; you put your name on a form prepared for the purpose, and then, at a certain hour, the box is withdrawn; in private the deputy assistant sergeant-at-arms draws the ballot, and then the names are posted in a book, and you get, if you are successful, a printed card telling you so.—T. Was a Successful Operation.

"You say the operation for appendicitis was successful?"

"Yes; eminently so."

"But did not the patient die? I understood that was the case."

"That is true. He had not sufficient strength to recover from the shock; but the operation itself was a beautiful one in every respect and eminently successful." — Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Power of the Mormon Church.

Beyond a doubt the Mormon church is, considered purely as a political economist's scheme, "to-day nearer to being a successful effort to inaugurate the brotherhood of man than anything ever tried." Here, then, is a social and political force to be reckoned with. Marvelous in its power over the individual, it is rapidly becoming an actual menace to the nation. Already it numbers a million adherents. It owns Utah. It holds the balance of power in Idaho, in Wyoming, in Colorado, in California and in Nevada. When Arizona and New Mexico are admitted to the union it will control them also.—R. L. Hartt, In Atlantic.

Coffin of William Penn.

During the removal of a dilapidated high back pew several hundred years old in the ancient parish church at Penn, in Buckinghamshire, England, the coffin of William Penn, buried there in 1718, was discovered lying within two feet of the floor. It is of oak, black with age and perfectly sound. It was left unopened and replaced after having been surrounded with a layer of cement by way of protection. There are still people in England drawing perpetual pensions from the British treasury as heirs of that William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania.—N. Y. Journal.

Love Their Animals.

The prince and princess of Wales show their affection for their horses in a curious way. When a favorite dies, its hoofs are cut off and polished and the horse's name is inscribed on each hoof. These are placed in one of the harness rooms at Sandringham. On the wall above are photographs of the horses that have died. The royal couple are also devoted to dogs, and have numerous favorites. Just back of the palace is a stone erected to a lost pet, inscribed: "To the memory of Rover—a true friend."—Golden Days.

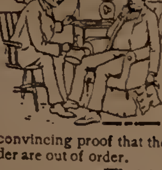
Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

How To Find Out.

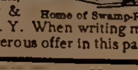
Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.



What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.



Home of Swamp-Root.

On a Slender Thread.

There is a man in Washington, who is a shining light in one of the prominent churches, who nearly lost his reputation the other night, all because of a child's innocent prattle. He called upon a friend who is handsomely "fixed" as to this world's goods, and who has a tiny golden-haired daughter of whom he is very fond. The friends adjourned to the smoking-room for a chat, and shortly afterward the daughter went to hunt them. She came down to her mother in the reception-room a little later and found her entertaining callers.

In a lull in the conversation the child volunteered the information that "papa and Mr. Blank were having lots of fun."

"What are they doing, dear?" asked one of the callers, idly.

"Playing poker," was the astounding answer.

"Poker!" exclaimed the astonished mother; "why, Jennie, your father never played a game of poker in his life."

"Well, mamma, they are in the room with the big green table, and papa pokes a little ball at Mr. Blank and he pokes it back again. Isn't that poker?"

Reputations often hang on just such a slender thread.—Washington Star.

THE CHATEAU D'IF.

Prison of Dumas' Famous Romance, "Count of Monte Cristo," as It Exists To-Day.

A correspondent of the Paris Temps, who attended the recent festival in Marseilles commemorating the twenty-five hundredth anniversary of the foundation of the city, visited the Chateau d'If, and made some interesting investigations of the prison where Dumas' Count of Monte Cristo was confined. A boat made three trips a day to the island—one indication of how widely Dumas is still read. The boat was full, and everybody maintained the serious demeanor proper on a pilgrimage. The trip takes about half an hour. The castle, situated on an islet about 800 yards in circumference, entirely surrounds it with its wall. It is a heavy structure, with short, thickset towers and a square donjon, yet there is a certain beauty in the color of its stones, even in its massive conformation. It was never used as anything but a state prison—a southern bastille. Francis I. in 1524 laid the first stone. He was through personal experience a connoisseur in prisons.

The cells open into a small, gloomy inside court. Many have no windows; some are merely low dungeons, below the level of the ground. Three larger and more cheerful ones on the second story have contained famous prisoners; the Man in the Iron Mask, who was transferred in 1686 to the Island of St. Marguerite; Philippe Egalite, father of Louis Philippe, who was beheaded on November 6, 1793, and Mirabeau, by virtue of a letter de cachet obtained by his father. But these places are not the ones that attract the crowds of visitors.

They all direct their steps first to a dungeon on the first floor, dreadful of appearance, with an iron-bound door, a grilled peephole, a bolt weighing a dozen pounds. Enter this door and you are in a chamber, dry, but gloomy, lighted by one little lamp. Written outside it are these words: "Cell of the Abbe Faris, expelled from Rome in 1811, confined in the Chateau d'If as a conspirator, died in 1829." It is nevertheless only an ante-chamber. Faria's cell is in a kind of recess, where a man can hardly stand, and where no ray of light penetrates. In this cell can be seen the hole dug by the abbe to communicate with Dantes! Yes, it really exists, this hole! What southern genius dug it? It is not known, but it is there, unfailing proof of the power of a popular book's illusion of reality. Through this hole Dantes' cell can be dimly seen, and in a glamour of mystery the more terrifying because the door has been walled up and no one can enter.

According to serious archaeological investigators, there were really prisoners confined in this dreadful hole, among them one named Bernadot, a rich merchant of Marseilles, arrested on a charge of speaking ill of Cardinal Richelieu, and left there to die of hunger. Jean Paul, a sailor who had struck his commanding officer, died there in the tower in 1779, after 31 years of captivity. It was doubtless the story of these men, literally buried alive, that inspired Dumas. To-day for the whole world the Chateau d'If is the prison of Faria and Dantes, and the inscriptions are there to certify to their existence. An Italian visitor some years ago kissed the stones of these dungeons and wept copiously.

The correspondent embarked for the mainland. The captain of the boat pointed out to him a tiny islet sticking up out of the sea—a mass of rocks, wave-beaten and tragic in aspect.

"Tiboulen," he said, "where Dantes first landed after his escape."—N. Y. Tribune.

Undoubtedly.

Here is a little actual conversation that was overheard a day or two ago by a local newspaper man:

"I see that 'suicide pier' has claimed another victim."

"So the papers state. Awful thing to suicide, isn't it?"

"Well, you can bet it's the last thing I'll ever do!"

And the speaker was quite unconscious of the humorous streak in his solemn observation.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Journeys Around the Earth.

The time required for a journey around the earth by a man walking day and night, without resting, would be 428 days; an express train, 40 days; sound, at a medium temperature, 32½ hours; a cannon ball, 21¾ hours; light, a little over one-tenth of a second, and electricity passing over a copper wire, a little under one-tenth of a second.—Chicago Tribune.

Early Church Music.

Barrel organs were formerly quite frequent in English churches, and one has recently been unearthed in a church near Rochester, England. It has six stops and six barrels, and is capable of grinding out 60 tunes in all. Among them are such archaic specimens as "Job," "Old 11th." The organ was operated by the sexton.—N. Y. Sun.

Walking On Peking's Walls.

It is unlawful for a Chinese woman to walk on the city walls of Peking, but it is an exercise in which the Americans and Europeans indulge without objection, upon days when they are open to the public.—Albany Argus.

Escape Living in Flats.

Quericus—Let's see; the married men all have better halves, don't they?

Cynicus—Yes.

"Then what do the bachelors have?"

"Better quarters."—Puck.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
NORFOLK, ss.

FRANKLIN, January 25, A. D. 1900.

Seized and taken on execution and will be sold at public auction on

FRIDAY, the TWENTIETH day of APRIL, A. D. 1900,

at two o'clock in the afternoon, at my office in Morse block, in Franklin, in said county, all the right, title and interest that Lawrence McGinnis of Medway, in said county of Norfolk, had (not exempt from attachment or levy on execution) on the ninth day of September, 1899, at thirty minutes past eleven o'clock in the forenoon (being the time the same was attached on mesne process in suit of Samuel G. Clark vs. said Lawrence McGinnis), in and to the following real estate, to wit:

A certain tract of land situated in Medway, in said county of Norfolk, on the northerly side of Village street, with buildings thereon, and bounded as follows: Commencing at the southeasterly corner of the premises on said Village street, thence running northerly on land formerly of one Eaton, and known as the Eaton place, to land supposed to belong to one Wentworth, formerly of one Phillbrick; thence westerly on said Wentworth land to a stake and stone at the northerly end of a drain at land of William Schroeder; thence southerly along the line of said drain, and with said Schroeder land to said Village street; thence easterly with said Village street to the point of beginning, being the Phillip's place, so called, and a part of the Dr. Brown estate, so called.

A certain tract of land situated in Medway, in said county of Norfolk, on the southerly side of Village street, opposite the above described tract, and bounded northerly on said Village street, southwesterly by Charles River and easterly by land supposed to belong formerly to Mrs. A. H. Clark, and being the second parcel described in the mortgage of Lawrence McGinnis to Margaret H. Kenny, dated August 6, 1895, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, book 744, page 523.

David Hunter of Central street has moved his family from Amos Woodward's cottage into the cottage owned by John Ford on the same street.

E. K. Ray attended the bank meeting Monday and the effort was too much for his strength, so that he has been feeling less like business since.

Miss Annie Briggs of Stoughton, a former Franklin girl, was in town Tuesday, making arrangments to continue her studies at Dean academy.

Oliver Gay, who removed from here to Putnam some time ago, has returned to town to reside and will be employed by John Stewart, the expressman.

The quarterly meeting of the board of trustees of the Benjamin Franklin Saving bank will be held in the banking rooms next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

A seven-ton and twelve-ton generator have arrived at Unionville for the railway power house. It will be something of a job to move them from the railway station.

Eugene O'Sullivan, who was seriously injured by falling from a bridge at Webster on Friday night last, still remains in a comatose state at the home of his parents on Alphine place.

The course of lectures by Rev. Mr. Koehne is proving itself a very attractive one. He presents in a masterly manner the historic basis and the undeniable divineness of Christianity.

While the office "devil" has not exactly been in charge this week, the office force, minus one sick member, have had the work to do, as the editor has not as yet been able to return to his duties.

Wilfred J. Gohielle has resigned the position of bootblack at the railway station to accept a place with the Boston Electrical company. Louis Lepage of Woonsocket succeeds him here.

The W. R. C. sale, to be held April 10 and 11, promises to be a very successful affair. Entertainments are being prepared for both nights, some out-of-town talent having been secured.

The ordinance of baptism will be administered at the Baptist church next Sunday evening. The pastor will give a short discourse on "The Conversion of Children." There will be excellent singing and the usual baptismal ritual.

This evening at 7.30 p. m., at the Methodist church, there will be a special service, to which all are invited. This will be the last week-night service of the present conference year. The pastor, Rev. S. A. Cook, will preach a short sermon; subject, "Wealth of promise." Mrs. C. L. Stewart will sing.

Rev. John B. Koehne will deliver the fourth lecture in his course of Lenten talks in the Congregational church this evening at 8 o'clock. A large audience listened to him on Tuesday evening upon "The Apostolic Church." This evening he will speak upon "The Church of the Reformation." All are welcome; seats free.

All the public schools will open again next Monday. During the vacation all the rooms have been thoroughly washed and the rooms where any of the pupils attending have had scarlet fever have been disinfected by both the janitors and the board of health. Every precaution is being used; a few books even have been burned.

About 35 Italians in the employ of S. Gore & Co., contractors of the Medway and Medfield street railway, commenced work Tuesday at the Medway end of the line, beginning to remove the large supply of pipe which connects the Cole, Senior & Co. mill and the Ray & Wilson Co. mill with the different hydrants in the center of the town.

The next regular meeting of the W. R. C. will occur on Monday evening next. Members are earnestly requested to be present. In loving memory and as a mark of our respect a memorial service will be held for Mrs. Annie G. Wittenmyer, past national president of the W. R. C. Color bearers are requested to make a special effort to be present.

The linen company at Unionville is putting in an artesian well near the factory. The well has gone down about fifty feet, mostly in ledge. It is reported that J. F. Ray will have a well drilled on his property on Emmons street at the center. There are several of these wells in town of varying depth and also varying in the amount of supply of water.

One more entertainment, entirely novel in its feature, will be given in the near future, under the auspices of the Horace Mann school, for art decorations. M. Kopayashi, a Japanese, with the assistance of several of our pupils, will give a lecture illustrating the habits, customs, beliefs, occupations and ideas of these very interesting people. There will be many curiosities direct from Japan.

For convenience of reference it may be well to paste in our hate the fact that the Republicans will meet in Philadelphia June 19; the Populists in Sioux Falls, S. D., May 9, and the Middle-of-the-Road Populists in Cincinnati also May 9; the Prohibitionists in Chicago June 27, and the Democrats in Kansas City July 4. That schedule comprises all the political national conventions up to date.

Here is a suggestion for our teachers: Every week the pupils of the Milford High school are questioned by the principal concerning the important points of the South African war; this keeps the scholars busy in reading up in order to be able to give a correct report of the progress of the contest. Thus they have learned some geographical facts. After the end of the war there will be a large demand for revised versions of the South African map.

An exchange says what the world needs is not a number of physically straight faced and morally loose-laced church members marching in solemn procession to church on Sundays, but more seven day in-the-week Christians, men and women who in their walks and talks with men in their individual spheres of life and action exercise more of that divine charity which "suffereth long and is kind," which "hopeth all things and thinketh no evil."

Professor Daniels has recently been engaged in the very interesting task, to him, of restoring an ancient and time-worn college diploma, the same having been conferred by Princeton, in 1755, on the great-grandfather of a Franklin resident. The ancient parchment is written in Latin, in old style characters, with a few Greek letters and words. It is now in the hands of the Heliographers, its present owner believing such old documents should be handed down to posterity.

Mrs. Emily Fisher died on Thursday evening after a brief illness at the home of her son, J. L. Fisher in City Mills, in the 87th year of her age. She leaves four children, Mr. John L. Fisher, Mr. Walter Fisher and two daughters. She has been for many years a member of the Congregational church in Franklin. The funeral will occur on Monday, at 2 p. m. at the house in City Mills. It is peculiarly trying to the two sons, who are both confined to their rooms at the present time by a severe attack of the grip.

The Heliotype base ball club has been organized for the approaching season as follows: Manager, Fred Lemeir; captain, Peter Embser; secretary, Joseph Query; treasurer, George Baker;. The nine will take the field as follows: Charles Knowlton, p.; R. Morrill, c.; P. Embser, 1b.; J. Shield, 2b.; H. Anderson, 3b.; F. Adams, s. s; G. Baker, r. f.; F. Lemeir, c. f.; J. Query, l. f.. The members are contemplating the purchase of new uniforms and intend to play ball on Saturday afternoons and holidays throughout the season.

Mr. Koehne's Lecture.

"It was the best lecture of the course" was the expression frequently heard on last Tuesday evening. It was certainly marvelous how Mr. Koehne analyzed and synthesized as he presented the account of the early Christian church and the argument for miracles. He most graphically pictured the conditions of the Roman Empire under the Cæsar's. Also the movement of the first great skeptics and the first Apologists. He most successfully presented the weaknesses of the ancient philosophies for spiritual ends, and the inherent worth of the Christian religion. As heretofore, Mr. Koehne was dramatic and eloquent and thrilled his listeners.

Tonight he will speak on "The Church of the Reformation," and will give estimates of the work of Luther, Calvin and Knox. It will prove exceedingly interesting to all.

Bassett—Applebee.

Miss. Elizabeth A. Bassett of Franklin, Mass. and Mr. Ira M. Applebee of Cambridge were joined in Wedlock in the Parlor of the Broadway St. Baptist church Cambridge, Tuesday evening, March 27th, at 8 o'clock. They were the recipients of many beautiful presents.

Mr. and Mrs. Applebee will reside at 67 Bristol street, Cambridge, where Mr. Applebee is employed as a Baker. Their many friends wish them much happiness.

Music Hall.

Free entertainment all next week commencing April 3rd. War views and moving pictures. Free.

We all want the old folks' home of Norfolk county in Franklin, come and help it along.

Universalist Parish Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Universalist society was held in the church last Monday, beginning at five o'clock. Hon. L. L. Burrington was made moderator and and George R. Winsor clerk. The report of treasurer F. H. Bartholomew showed that, although the expenditure for repairs, repainting parsonage, insurance, etc., had been heavier than usual, some of the insurance having been placed for five years instead of three, there was a balance of about thirty seven dollars in the treasury. The folling officers were elected:—Parish Committee,—Lester L. Burrington, James O. Chilson, Charles F. Nye, James F. Ray, Charles J. McKenzie, Edgar K. Ray, George, F. S. Singleton, Charles Stewart. Treasurer and Collector, Fred H. Bartholomew. Clerk, George R. Winsor. After the election the meeting adjourned to partake of the excellent supper provided by the Y. P. C. U. Upon reassembling Prof. Burrington, of the parish committee, read the committee's report.

Aside from the balance reported as above by the treasurer, the auxilliary organizations, the Sunday School Y. P. C. U., and Ladies society reported balances varying from fifteen dollars to over four hundred. The amount given for missions, charities, etc., was between four and five hundred dollars. The treasurer of the Dean and Ware funds having decreased, the report was read by the moderator and showed that the former had increased somewhat during the year, the latter remaining at the original figure. The entire financial exhibit for the year indicated the raising, from all sources, and expenditure, of about $4600. The following were appointed ushers for the ensuing year:—Fred L. Davis, Charles F. Frazer, George F. Grant, Leslie Merrifield, George H. Gatchell. Prof. A. W. Pierce, Mrs. James F. Ray, and Miss Carrie Mason were appointed music committee for the year. The reception and charities committees remain the same as last year. Marston Sanborn and Charles E. Walker were elected members of the parish.

Resolutions and minutes were read relative to the decease during the past year of Messrs. Aldrich and Ray, and were adopted by a rising vote. Votes were passed releasing certain property the title to which had been irregularly conveyed. After the business had been transacted, Mr. David W. Coreon acting as auctioneer, the pews were rented for the coming year. The highest premium paid for choice was $35 dollars, the entire amount of premiums and entire rental being about the same as the last few previous years. The society is to be congratulated on its showing for the year and especially on the amount raised for charities and missions. It is evident that the members of this society believe in doing good in the world.

Alden Club Meeting.

The last regular meeting of the Alden club was held on March 26. After the reading of the secretary's report and the election of Mrs. Whitaker as delegate to the State Federation meeting on April 20th at Newburyport the speaker of the evening was introduced, Prof. Lewis of Tufts college. Prof. Lewis gave a most interesting and suggestive talk on "Musical Taste: Its Present State and Future Development." He declared that among the fine arts all competent authorities placed music at the top as the supreme manifestations of art; and that it and language were the only arts entirely merited and developed by man. The lover of music therefore can obtain the richest and most varied of all experiences as music is the most universal as well as the most exalted of the arts. In spite of these facts, he added; music is thought but lightly of by the average American who has neither interest in, nor knowledge of good music, and think of it at best, as only a means of entertainment, for which he generally cares but little. He thinks the musicians are narrow minded, or artificial and dramatic, forgetting that it is the fault of the public which demands cleverness and clap-trap from their entertainers, and will not give to the earnest, self-respecting ardent musician oftentimes the means of a livelihood.

Prof. Lewis then made an earnest plea for the thoughtful, caretaking study of the best music by all who have the opportunity, declaring that it should be studied as a student would study Shakespeare or Browning, and so learn to think the thoughts expressed by the great masters of music, as well as experience the emotions. He added that music was the art which Americans most needed to cultivate, and the one that could most easily be cultivated, it should be studied with all earnestness in the schools as one of the noblest arts, so that children might learn early in life to know, to appreciate and love the work of the world's greatest masters.

After the lecture, the meeting adjourned to April 9, when there will be a most interesting recital by Mrs. Jeanette Robinson Murphy, at Dean academy.

OBSERVATIONS.

" To observations which ourselves we make We grow more partial for the Observer's sake."

That the curfew law may have more effect we suggest to the selectmen to have the whistle sound forth at 9 p. m.

It appears to the Observer and many others most unfortunate for the board of health and the school board to be quibbling over technicalities in a time of epidemic and when so many business men and others are patiently peaceful. 'Tend to business, gentlemen, and take care of our children.

It is a little singular that the academy and the public schools were closed on account of the epidemic; but the parochial school continues its work serenely. A reasonable explanation would prove interesting at this time.

An old resident of the town remarked to Observer that the cause of all this malaria and epidemic diseases may be found in the town water; that the refuse of the mills finds its way into the pond from which the water is taken. Did the special commissioner from the state board of health who was here recently upon a tour of inspection consider this phase of the matter?

Talking about malaria, we read the other day that "the sunflower is valuable for keeping off malarial fevers. The seeds also are splendid food for poultry, increasing the number of eggs." Observer suggests to "paint the town yellow" with sunflowers this year.

Observer has learned that there is a petition in circulation asking the board of selectmen to reappoint Mr. Nickerson liquor detective. There are those who feel that he has rendered most efficient service. There are others who declare the opposite. The Observer also learns that whoever is appointed may expect to be urged on to action, for there are certain individuals who are determined that some conditions must be changed in the town.

Observer rejoices at the sight of the Dean boys on the campus. Hurrah for base ball!

OBSERVER.

K. D. and S. Entertainment.

King's Daughters and Sons entertainment, Tuesday, April 3, at Odd Fellow's hall, at 8 o'clock p. m. Music and Reading by some of the best talent in town. "Mice at Play" by the children. Gibson pictures, illustrated. Charade, name to be guessed by the audience. The following is the cast of characters: Mr. Clay, Bessie's father, George Sneath; Bessie Clay, May Fales; Ethel Clay, Bessie's cousin, Alice Nixon; Mr. Simmons, Bessie's lover, Ray Wyckoff; Patty, Bessie's sister, Pearl Judd; Billy, Bessie's brother, George Nixon; Martha, servant, Linna Ferrer. Ice cream sherbet, lemonade, home-made candy and cake. Proceeds towards establishing "Home for the Aged" in Norfolk Co.

Church Rally.

Next Sunday, April 1, marks the close of another ecclesiastical year among the Methodists. There will be a rallying of all the members and friends of the church on that day. During the past year unusual prosperity has attended the faithful and earnest efforts of people and pastor. The conference year is coming to its close with songs of triumph and the shout of victory in the camp of Israel. "Praises be unto God from whom all blessings flow."

C.

Richardson's Market.

People seem to enjoy "roasts." We have secured one for our patrons for Saturday which will cost as before, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 cents. Of course we have finer cuts costing a little more. Then we have a nice line of turkeys, fowls and chicks, costing from 15 to 20 cents. All the vegetables to be found in Boston to go with our meats, including the famous White Cape turnips, and rhubarb at 12 cents per pound. Butter, canned goods, tea, coffee, etc.

Spring Changes

are about due. You will want new picture frames to brighten up the freshened rooms, and you will want them up-to-date. The latest styles, in perfect taste, are simple and inexpensive. Many of my new spring mouldings are in and others coming.

CALKIN, Depot St.

The admission to Odd Fellows' hall Tuesday evening is twenty-five cents, including entertainment, ice cream sherbet and cake. Home made candy and lemonade extra.

Biograph of moving pictures and war views at Music hall all next week, free to adults. April 3.

Advertising is business news. It tells the things which are of great daily importance. It is of more account to the frugal housewife to know where to get certain necessary commodities at a less price than usual than to know of the troubles in Siam and Alaska.

Farmers' Club.

Practical reform, with a big R, is a favorite with a good many people, and when it was announced that E. D. Daniels, superintendent of the public schools, would speak to the Farmers' club, on "Practical Reform in School Work," we knew that his experience warranted the expectation of gaining insight upon this very important matter. The meeting was held at Mr. Daniels' residence on Dean avenue, and after the announcement by president Morse, Mr. Daniels said substantially: "In school work there is no standing still; it must be backward or forward. Now the idea is to have the child teach himself; formerly the attempt was to cultivate the intellectual side only, but today the theory of public institutions includes, or at least should include, the physical and moral also. Mind development must come through the senses of hearing, feeling, tasting, etc. Advanced methods try to teach the use of the left as well as the right hand to make them equally proficient The kindergarten teaches from the sense of touch, sight, etc., a faculty of much importance, but often lacking in a large degree. The sense of touch is more important than sight. A child is naturally destructive, but can be taught to be constructive as well, and the manual training school leads in this direction.

"Temperance is an important subject, but money has been thrown away in books that are useless for the object desired; temperance training should be by example and precept, not by books telling of the effects of alcohol upon the physical system. Good cooking will prevent intemperance, and for that reason the state should establish cooking schools. The tendency of modern school work is for more schooling and less vacation time, upon the theory that Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do, especially with boys. Compulsory school age should be raised to 15 or 16 years. Another reform is the study of the beautiful, not for the beauty, but for the good. The Bible should be included in school studies as literature, not for dogmatic teaching."

Mr. Daniels was followed by Rev. I. W. Sneath, H. E. Ruggles and Monroe Morse. Mr. Morse pointed out that the parent had very little to do with the the schools under present laws, and that naturally the more his liberty in this respect was curtailed by the state the less would be his interest in the public school.

Mr. Daniels illustrated his remarks on manual training with products of the work of such schools, and at the conclusion of the formal discussion. Mrs. Daniels illustrated the subject of good cooking with an abundant and substantial lunch, which was practically discussed with the same interest that had previously been given to the intellectual part of the programme.

FRIDAY, MARCH 30, 1900.

Nearly to the hour of his death Mr. John I. Blair's faith remained strong in the great granary of the west. Having made much of his immense fortune in that region his advice to beginners was: "Put your money in the yaller corn belt." Be it understood that the "yaller corn belt" comprises Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska. In Iowa he owned over 2,0[illegible],000 acres of land, and in Nebraska 100,000. I don't know how large a part of Kansas he was proprietor of, says a New York Press man. Rough in manner, coarse in speech, yet kind-hearted withal when not imposed on, John I. Blair was said by bond brokers in the street to be the most efficient of men to negotiate a transaction with. If there is an exception it is R. T. Wilson. With both men it was always a case of grab everything. If a promoter shoved an enterprise at Mr. Blair the old man immediately appropriated 95 per cent. of it, locking up the remaining five as a guarantee of the promoter's good faith.

An exchange says a man fishing in a New Jersey lake tied his line to his wrist while rowing slowly. A 20-pound carp took the bait, drew the man overboard and dragged him a long distance in the water, but he finally got ashore and loosened the line. The fish ran away with it. One time the carp rose to the surface and the fisherman saw that it was two feet long and evidently weighed 20 pounds. The one who started that story might have made that fish a few pounds heavier and made his story weightier.

Otto Grantz, who recently discovered a very rich gold mine in South Dakota, is getting letters from people all over the country, suggesting uses for his wealth. One old lady said in her letter: "You have had the luck to find so much and I so little, just wish you could not sleep until you gave me some of it." It is not stated what Mr. Grantz did with that "touching" appeal, but it is safe to say he did not lose any sleep over it.

The wife of Gov. Lowndes, of Maryland, is curing the whooping cough very much as the king of England used to cure scrofula ("the king's evil"). It's a local notion that if the mother of twins butters a piece of bread for a child with that cough, the child will be relieved. Mrs. Lowndes has twin sons, and Annapolis is in an epidemic of whooping cough. Consequently she is kept pretty busy buttering bread.

From a western Colorado postmaster to the department at Washington: "Pleas except my resanation of p m of the government at this town i haf been alected j of the pease & school commisner said duties perventing me from bitin off more than i can chaw by trine to kill three birds with 1 ston. Yores respectably."

A ten-year-old Boston girl on her way to school turned to throw a kiss to her mother, who stood watching her in the doorway of the home the little one had just left. At that instant a beam, falling from the top of a building in course of construction, struck the child on the head, killing her at once.

Some of the Paris papers are excited to violent denunciation by the report that two American prize fighters are to meet in the ring in that city next year. They think the pugilists should "practice their brutal trade at home." In Paris you know they fight only with swords and pistols.

A woman in a New York divorce case has put on record the assertion that a woman who paints cannot be a lady. She can if she doesn't paint herself, or, in case she does, if she only uses iodine, suggests a facetious contemporary.

Coated

Look at your tongue. Is it coated?

Then you have a bad taste in your mouth every morning. Your appetite is poor, and food distresses you. You have frequent headaches and are often dizzy. Your stomach is weak and your bowels are always constipated.

There's an old and reliable cure:

Ayer's Pills

Don't take a cathartic dose and then stop. Better take a laxative dose each night, just enough to cause one good free movement the day following.

You feel better the very next day. Your appetite returns, your dyspepsia is cured, your headaches pass away, your tongue clears up, your liver acts well, and your bowels no longer give you trouble.

Price, 25 cents. All druggists.

"I have taken Ayer's Pills for 35 years, and I consider them the best made. One pill does me more good than half a box of any other kind I have ever tried."

Mrs. N. E. TALBOT,
March 30, 1899. Arrington, Kans.

In German.

Plumbers were at work in Marjorie's home, and they conversed in their native tongue.

"Mamma," questioned the four-year-old, "why can't I tell what those men are saying? I've listened and listened, and I can't make out a word!"

"Of course you can't," said mamma: "they are talking in German."

That evening Marjorie was drumming on the piano.

"What are you playing?" asked her brother.

"I'm playing 'Home Sweet Home.'"

"That isn't 'Home Sweet Home!'" he said, scornfully.

"Yes it is," was the reply; "I'm playing it in German!"—Town Topics.

No Reason to Specify.

They were dancing. The music was heavenly. The swish of her silken skirts was delightful. The fragrance of the roses upon her bosom was almost intoxicating.

"Ah," she said, looking up into his face and smiling sweetly, "you remind me of one of Whitman's poems."

A sudden dizziness seemed to seize him. It was as if he were floating along in a dream. When he could catch his breath to speak he asked:

"Which one?"

"Oh, any one," she replied. "The feet are all mixed up in all of them."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Benighted Superstition.

Mrs. Slimdiet—Well, that fellow Longhead, who talked about taking board here, is just about the most superstitious man I ever did hear of. He's actually afraid of ghosts.

Maid—Ghosts, is it?

Mrs. Slimdiet—Yes; he writes that he has changed his mind about coming, because he's been told that half a dozen people have starved to death here.—N. Y. Weekly.

The Retort Truthful.

The Vulture—It's hardly polite to read your paper at table, Mr. Hallroom.

The Victim—I know, Mrs. Skinnem, but it takes my mind off what I'm eating.—N. Y. Journal.

The Poet and the Maiden.

Dear maiden, you'd like to write poems
you say?
Ah, happy, young girl, if you knew,
Instead of to write them, could I have my way,
I'd much rather live them, like you.
—Harlem Life.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

Odd Items of Domestic Information for the Young Housewife.

In planning refreshments for the Halloween party, nuts, apples, crullers and sweet cider are considered the appropriate concomitants of the fateful night, while their service should be as simple and informal as possible. If the kitchen table serves as a buffet, its centerpiece may be a yellow pumpkin or pale green cabbage, hollowed out and filled with ruddy cheeked apples. The dishes used may be of the copper or tin kitchen utensils, scoured to their brightest.

Measles are most infectious in the early stages, scarlet fever and scarletina during the peeling of the skin. Typhoid is usually conveyed by germs from the excretions of the patient. No member of a family with an infectious disease should go to church or any other place where persons are congregated, should not borrow books from a library nor mix with other people more than can possibly be helped, as one person may be the means of spreading disease to numbers.

Holland shades may be washed and laundered so as to look nearly as well as new. Remove the fringe, cord and tassels and loosen from the roller. Wash in lukewarm suds, rubbing as little as possible, to prevent splitting. Rinse in cold water and starch in boiled starch. Iron with a cloth over it until nearly dry; then polish. Great care must be taken to iron always with the selvedge to stretch straight and to iron no creases in.

Steel firearms that are kept in good order should not require cleaning oftener than once a week, but they should be rubbed daily with a dry cloth. In the weekly cleaning they may be polished with bath brick scraped fine and mixed with oil, or rubbed with fine emery paper, then polish with the finest sand paper.

"Don't sprinkle your maiden-hair ferns on their foliage," say the florists to the women who are eagerly buying the dainty greening for dining table decoration. "Keep the earth moist all the time; but pour the water around the roots, not on the top."

In screwing a glass globe on to the gas fixture care should be taken not to screw it too tight, as when the gas is lighted the glass will expand, and if space is not allowed the globe will crack. Many mysterious breakages may be traced to this lack of foresight.

An easy way to steam house plants in winter is to set a large vessel of hot water under the plant stand and then drop into it a hot brick or iron.

The cheering teapot has lately found its way into Italy, and Italian signoras now chat over the tea cups and delight in all the dainty accessories of the tea table.

A paroxysm of coughing may often be arrested by a tablespoonful of glycerine in a glass of hot milk.

Stale crackers are improved by placing in a hot oven a few minutes before serving.—Washington Star.

DECORATION NOTES.

Points on Pretty Furnishings Suitable for the Parlor and Hallway.

Pillows add greatly to the decorative effect, as well as to the comfort of a divan, lounge, settee or sofa. The new canvas covers, which come in rich red for braiding or rich blue or black, and the black for braiding in red or orange, are very inexpensive and durable for pillow or cushion covers.

Coronation braid is very prettily applied to designs stamped on pillow covers; it shows with fine effect on bright red, blue or yellow canvas or linen cushion covers, but is especially pleasing on silver-green linen in association with flat braids.

A pretty border for an orange silk curtain for a hall window is made by turning up an inch-wide hem and heading it with herring-boning in heavy orange silk threaded with turquoise-blue beads. Larger beads of the same color sewed along the bottom of the hem add a very charming finish. Such a curtain illuminates a dark place like sudden sunshine.

No tea table or luncheon table is absolutely pretty that fails in flowers for decorative purposes. A few perfect flowers set in the filmy greenery of maiden hair ferns or in sprays of the soft asparagus vine, which veil the gay colors as gently as the mist.

The embroidered silk screen panels, sold in Japanese stores, make lovely hangings to place in the opening between parlors. A lovely pair made of slaty-gray silk, wrought with a design of airy bamboo trees in soft greens, with here and there a gay bird, was tastefully mounted on amber-colored momie cloth and finished at the bottom by a heavy fringe, showing subdued shades of the embroidery colors. This pair of hangings looked very artistic mounted on an ebonized pole by means of heavy brass rings.—Ladies' World.

Little Civilities.

If, as the old saying has it, civility costs nothing, it certainly gains much, both in the way of liking and of kindness; therefore it seems a great pity that so many people dispense with it in small matters of daily life. There are no doubt very few people who are actually and actively rude and uncivil, but there are, on the other hand, many who are, if we may use the term, passively impolite. They do not—that is, commit a downright rudeness, but they omit a vast number of little civilities.

If it is manners that "maketh man," it is most certainly woman who both makes and mars men's manners, for there is no man, however rough and uncouth in manner, who is not influenced and to some degree softened by contact with a courteous and gracious-mannered woman.—Detroit Free Press.

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

In stomach troubles, has a "magic touch," promptly relieves distress and all other dyspeptic symptoms. It makes rich, pure blood, gives strong, steady nerves.

CREATES AN APPETITE, AIDS DIGESTION.

The Question.

"Pa," said Willie, "may I ask you just one more question before I go to bed."

"Yes, my boy. What is it?"

"If I'd been your brother, would I have been my own uncle?"—Harper's Bazar.

Different Points of View.

Wife—I'm sorry you don't admire my new gown. Everybody else says it's just too lovely for anything.

Husband—Oh, it's easy for others to pay compliments, but I have to pay the bill.—Chicago Evening News.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female disease quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a Godsend to weak, sickly, run-down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by A. C. Mason & Co. druggists.

Does Coffee Agree With You?

If not, drink Grain-O, made from pure grains. A lady writes: "The first time I made Grain-O I did not like it but after using it for one week nothing would induce me to go back to coffee." The children can drink it freely with great benefit. It is a habit of Senator Cockrell, of Missouri, to read in the senate the name of every constituent who sends him a petition for presentation. This gets the names of his people in the Record in big black type, which they delight to see when he sends them marked copies with his compliments.

Senator Hanna has characteristic disregard for the conventionalities of polite society. A few evenings ago he shocked Washington society by appearing in public wearing a sack suit and a silk hat. He has been the recipient of several hints on this subject, but ignores them in his usual burly way.

An old interviewer of Washington pronounces Gen. Wheeler one of the hardest men to interview in this country. He says: "The general is even more shy than he has been represented. IN HIS OWN STRENGTH.

Sad, Untimely End of a Boy Who Spurned the Thought That He Needed Christ's Strength.

"Oh, yes, religion's all right for some people, but I don't need it! I'm strong enough to do what's right without being helped. Of course, for a fellow that's weak, religion's a good thing, and for some people it's the only thing that will keep them straight. But you needn't worry about me!"

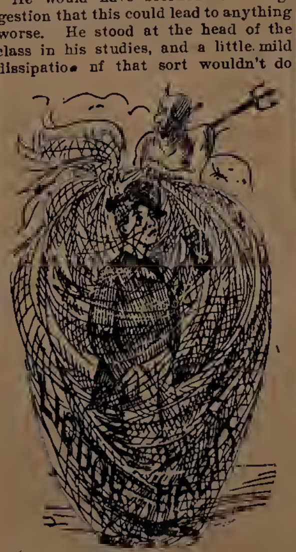
These words were spoken by a young man just at the outset of his college career. A friend had suggested to him his need of a strength beyond his own to help him resist the many temptations incident to college life. The friend sighed when he found his kindly remonstrance useless, and went home with a sad heart.

Let us follow the young man for a few years.

An exceptionally brilliant scholar, he soon won the regard of the faculty, while his social proclivities and unfailing good nature made him a favorite with his companions at school.

This was at first. As the months went by, the boy who didn't need help began to find the freedom of college life a different thing from the wholesome restraint of the life at home. He learned easily, so his studies did not occupy all his time, and he fell gradually into the habit of going "out with the other fellows" occasionally, and even drank an occasional glass of wine.

He would have scorned the suggestion that this could lead to anything worse. He stood at the head of the class in his studies, and a little mild dissipation of that sort wouldn't do any harm. He knew how to take care of himself!



THE NET WAS ALREADY DRAWING CLOSER ABOUT HIM.

The first year passed, and the young man had found no difficulty in keeping up with his work, and won most of the honors in his examinations. He came home loaded with congratulations from all sides. His friend, however, saw an almost imperceptible change in him. He asked whether he found himself still strong to resist temptation. The young man laughed carelessly and replied, with a superior air: "A fellow doesn't have to be a prude. I think I'm still capable of looking out for myself. You need not have any fear on my account!"

A year later, and the young man found he was not standing so well in his examinations as formerly. He was spending more of his time with the "other fellows," and often had a bad headache in the morning, and did not feel like studying. Still, his work was fairly creditable, and a fellow can't work all the time: he must have a little fun! When he came back in the fall he would brace up and do better again.

There was a hint of recklessness in the tone of the young man when he talked with his friend again on his return at the close of his sophomore year. Again the friend tried to show him that his only safeguard was to take Christ as his guide and resolve never to yield to the tempter, and never to touch a drop of strong drink. The young man listened with smiling incredulity, and laughed at the idea of there being any danger in an occasional glass of wine, or even stronger drink. "Thank you for the interest you take in me," he said, complacently, "but there really is no cause for alarm. I think I know enough not to go too far!"

Poor fellow, the net was already drawing closer about him, already the terrible habit had him in its power! Yet he went on, blindly but gayly, to his destruction. His mother was a widow, and her son was her idol. She was far from suspecting the truth. He seemed as frank and as affectionate as ever while with her.

Soon after his junior year began it became evident that something was amiss. The professors began to remonstrate with him kindly, for they all liked the boy. They saw all too clearly the danger he was incurring, but his reply was still the same: "There's no danger in it for me!" At last one wrote to the mother, and she came at once to have a talk with her son. When she saw him, however, his bright, frank manner entirely disarmed her, and—so does drink deaden the conscience—he assured her that there was nothing wrong, but that it was all a false report started by some of his competitors, who wished to injure his standing with the faculty!

The weak but adoring mother returned home with her mind at rest, and the young man tried for a time to do better, but the habit was too strong for him, and after a little, in spite of all warning, the "occasional glass" grew more and more frequent, till at the end of the third year the once brilliant and promising boy, who was so confident as to his future,, not only failed utterly in his examinations, but was suspended from school, and went home in disgrace!

Even then, so insidious is the growth of this terrible habit, he would not see his danger. Even then he insisted that it was not a fixed habit, but went on, alas! heedless alike of the warnings of friends and the pleadings of his widowed mother, until to-day, at less than 30 years of age, that young man is a physical and mental wreck—his once brilliant intellect clouded and his fine constitution undermined by late hours and dissipation, his mother heartbroken and his prospects for life ruined. And, strangest of all, to one who has not seen this phase of that terrible habit, he still insists that drink has never hurt him, and that he can stop it at any time! God pity him and all others who have fallen into the clutches of the terrible demon of drink, and may these pages from a life help every boy who reads them to decide, if he has not already done so, to take Christ as his friend and guide through life, and to abstain always and forever from touching a drop of strong drink, for nothing less than total abstinence is safe. But do not trust your own fancied strength.

"I can do all things through Christ, which strengtheneth me," but "without Me ye can do nothing."

It's Easy To Take

Thin, pale, anæmic girls need a fatty food to enrich their blood, give color to their cheeks and restore their health and strength. It is safe to say that they nearly all reject fat with their food.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES of LIME & SODA

is exactly what they require; it not only gives them the important element (cod-liver oil) in a palatable and easily digested form, but also the hypophosphites which are so valuable in nervous disorders that usually accompany anæmia.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is a fatty food that is more easily digested than any other form of fat. A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health. You can get it in this way.

We have known persons to gain a pound a day while taking it.

WAYS OF THE CANDY STORE.

Some Stores Let Clerks Eat What They Want—Men and Women Who Like Candy.

There is an old story to the effect that it is a custom in candy stores to tell the new clerk to eat all the candy she wants; the result being that she is soon surfeited and wants no more candy for a long time. The fact appears to be that, substantially, there is no rule or custom in candy stores regarding the eating of candy by the salespeople. It is, of course, required that they shall not eat candy in the presence of customers; it might be possible that a new clerk who developed an inordinate fondness for candy would require a gentle hint; but clerks are not told when they begin work that they may or may not eat candy; nothing is said about that at all; and they do as they please about it, and eat what they want; governing themselves it is to be presumed by discretion and common sense.

It is also the common testimony that people do not get tired of candy by being always in the midst of it; and this seems to apply alike to those engaged in the manufacture of candy and the handling of it by wholesale, and to the clerks engaged in the constant actual handling of candy in the sale of it at retail. Those who are fond of candy, men as well as women, are not surfeited by the sight of it in quantities constantly surrounding them; if it is good candy they keep on liking it just the same, and enjoy eating what they want of it.

As to whether men or women like candy better there was some difference in the expressed opinion. At some places it was said that men and women liked candy equally well; it was said, for instance, that in a little company of men and women eating candy, the men would eat as much as the women. At one place where the opinion was expressed that men, take them altogether, do not like candy so well as women do, it was said that if a man was fond of candy he was likely to be very fond of it, so that he might eat a quantity of it at a time. It was everywhere said that among children boys and girls are alike in their love for candy; but taking into account expressions of people outside the business as well as those in it, the weight of opinion seemed to be that among grown persons there are more women with a sweet tooth than men; that is to say that men are not so fond of candy as women.

While the customers in the candy shops in the shopping districts of the city are almost exclusively women, there may be found candy stores a very large proportion of whose many customers are men. These shops are found in the region devoted to trade and finance and occupations in which men are more commonly engaged and interested. These men, however, are buying mainly for home consumption, in city or suburbs; and in these later years there has been seen among the purchasers here an increasing percentage of women customers due to the increasing number of women employed in that part of the city.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

THE BOSS BARBER.

He Is Always Avoided by the Man Who Knows What His Peculiarities Are.

"You're next, sir," said the boss barber, indicating a fat man who was buried behind a newspaper. "I'll wait for awhile," replied the fat man. "I'm in no hurry." As another man climbed into the vacant chair the fat man leaned over to another customer who was waiting his turn and confided that he was in a hurry, a deuced hurry, but he would rather lose his turn than be shaved by the proprietor of the shop. "It isn't that I have any grievance against this particular barber," he went on, "but I shun all boss barbers as I would a plague. In the first place, he patronizes you, and in the second place he is invariably the worst barber in the shop. Then, too, it takes him about twice as long. He will lather one side of your face and then go over to the desk to make change for a customer who is going out, for he is generally his own cashier. He considers it his duty to exchange airy persiflage with each customer as he leaves the shop, and by the time he gets back to you your face is caked in cold lather. This usually happens four or five times while you are getting shaved, and you may consider yourself lucky if a salesman for a perfumery or soap house doesn't come in to talk up his wares. In that event you are bound to be kept in waiting for ten or fifteen minutes, and when you are finally shaved your peace of mind is destroyed for the rest of the day. No boss barbers in mine. I know 'em too well, and I wait every time."—Philadelphia Record.

Prevented a Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs. George Long, of New Straitsville, Ohio, prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remidies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her, and she writes this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of the matchless merit of this grand remedy for curing all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1 00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at A. C. A Bad Reputation.

In Bloomsbury, London, was formerly a region known as the Field of Forty Footsteps. It was frequented by rough characters, and it is related that a struggle between two brothers took place there. The footprints of the men were indelibly impressed in the sod and no grass would ever grow there. The place was built upon at the beginning of the century.—Detroit Free Press.

Queen Victoria Likes Young People.

As everyone knows, Queen Victoria likes young people about her. A lady is sometimes dismissed from attendance because her majesty has wearied of her company, and another will send in her resignation because she feels physically unequal to the duties of her position, the demands made on the patience and bodily strength of a lady-in-waiting being incessant. Think of the strength required for the long hours of standing—for weary drives on bleak Scotch moorlands, and, what is hardest of all, the constant suppression of one's own individuality! The queen, the princess of Wales and the other princesses have among them a little host of attendant ladies, and, though their royal mistresses no doubt display a considerable amount of consideration for them, yet, kindly though they may feel, they have the natural capriciousness of their station and sex.—Detroit Free Press.

The regular meeting of the selectmen was held in their room Friday evening, with the full board present. Bills were approved and routine matters attended to.

A lecture upon Japanese customs and life, illustrated by many curiosities direct from Japan, will be given Friday night, in the Horace Mann building, at 8 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Viquert, with their three children, left today for New York, and will sail this week from that city for Paris, where they will attend the exposition.

John L. Fisher, of City Mills, who has been critically ill, is reported slowly recovering, and his brother, Walter M. Fisher of Franklin is also recovering from pneumonia.

The Savoy orchestra of Providence has been engaged to furnish music for the reception to be given by the Ladies' Auxiliary, A. O. H., at the Opera house on Easter Monday evening.

Rev. S. A. Cook goes to annual conference at Fitchburg this week. He received a unanimous recall from the official board of the church and fully expects to return to Franklin another year.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Emily Fisher was held at City Mills yesterday, Rev. I. W. Sneath officiating, assisted by Rev Mr. Rand of Watertown. The interment was in the City Mills cemetery.

It is said that there has been a drop of about 10 per cent. in building materials within a short time past, the cause doubtless being that the extreme high prices had prevented many from building.

Nearly 100 tickets have already been disposed of for the reception to be given by the Ladies' Auxiliary, A. O. H, at the Opera house on Easter Monday evening. There will be a large number of out-of-town guests present.

The next meeting of the Alden club will be at Dean academy chapel next Monday evening, when Mrs. Jennette Robinson Murphy will give her pleasing entertainment. It is an open meeting, and a large audience is expected.

At the M. E. church last Friday evening Mrs. H. R. Jenks rendered a solo in a very pleasing and touching manner. A duet with Mrs. C. L. Stewart was also highly appreciated. Such singing is an unusual treat in regular prayer meeting.

About 75 Italian laborers arrived in town from Boston on Saturday afternoon. They are now being employed on the Milford, Attleboro and Woonsocket line, which resumed the work of construction this week. The workmen are quartered at Unionville.

The following will explain itself: "Born at East Watertown, to Mr. and Mrs. C. I. Dean a girl:

What pertains to a rubber shoe
Mr. Dean, we thought he knew,
But at the advent of this daughter
His interest takes another quarter."

The Y. P. C. U. of the Universalist church will hold its regular meeting in the church parlors tomorrow evening. The social part of the evening will be in charge of a special committee and music and games will make up the program. All members are urged to come and bring their friends.

There are few who will not be glad to see warm weather again. Somebody says that any one who can live through such a wretched winter as this has been, with the sudden changes in temperature, which have rapidly followed one another, can congratulate themselves that they have a tough spot in them somewhere.

Prof. L. I. Blake, who is at the head of the school of electrical engineering in the University of Kansas, has been elected to membership in the American Physical society. This society recently organized in New York city and aims to fill the same position in this country that the Philosophical society does in England.

There was a large gathering of members at the meeting of the Farmers' club held with Warren H. Bright, on Central street, last evening, when a very interesting paper on "Market Gardening and How to Reclaim Exhausted Soil" was read, which was followed by a general discussion of the subject. Refreshments were served at the close.

At the meeting of St. Mary's alumni, held at the convent Sunday afternoon, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Miss Catherine Sheahan; vice president, George Keefe; treasurer, James Murphy; secretary, Miss Anna Kelly. The next monthly social meeting will be held with the president on Friday evening, April 20.

James F. Ray is having the Otis Wales place at South Franklin put in repair, and the premises will be occupied as a milk farm. The place has been unoccupied for many years, since the death of Mr. Wales, and the land used for pasture. The dwelling is a large two-story building, pleasantly situated, and was kept in repair when Mr. Wales lived there.

Bicycle dealers anticipate a large business this year and wheels are coming into town by almost every train. The machine is much lighter, faster and better constructed than five years ago and is sold for half the money. The ruling prices for wheels of good quality range from $35 to $50; good second-hand wheels can be purchased for less than half these prices.

Don't don your spring suits or throw off your winter flannels in anticipation of sweltering heat, for while there are no snow storms immediately in sight, according to the predictions of the weather man, the conditions are favorable to squalls and Old Boreas is likely to get in some of his heavy work before the robins nest again or the green grass and flowers appear.

There is an appearance of business at Unionville in the way of gathering and brushing up the tools used in the street railway construction. The part remaining to be constructed between here and Wrentham Center is easy to build, and once work is begun on it a few weeks only, probably, will be required to complete it. The tools, however, are being sent to Bellingham, where there is also track to be laid.

The Baptist church was filled to overflowing last Sunday evening at the Baptismal service. The pastor gave an earnest and definite sermon on "The Conversion of Children." The ordinance was administered by Rev. F. B. Sleeper and by Rev. A. L. Fraser, pastor of the Baptist church in North Bellingham, the latter baptizing three candidates into the fellowship of his church. The service closed with the beautiful baptismal ritual.

Friday forenoon good entertainment was supplied to a crowd of onlookers by Dennis Sullivan and his load of hay on Depot street. The center of gravity of the load was so far in the rear that it lifted the forward end from the earth. To overcome this it was suggested that the front end of the load be held down by two men on top, which was successful for a moment, until the swaying of the load sideways was enough to land a good part of it and the men in the gutter, and as no one was hurt the crowd enjoyed the free show immensely.

Miss Jane D. Fisher, who was injured a few weeks ago by a fall at her home on Central street, died at 10 o'clock Saturday morning. For a number of years she has been in feeble health and the shock resulting from the fall, in which she sustained a fractured hip, hastened her death. Miss Fisher was 70 years of age and has been a resident of Franklin the greater part of her life. Funeral services were held at her late home at 11 a. m. Monday Rev. I. W. Sneath officiating, assisted by Rev. Mr. Rand of Watertown. Interment in Union street cemetery.

Charles J. McDermott, superintendent of the Colonial Rubber company, died of heart failure last evening at his home on Crescent street after only a few days' illness with the grip, having been taken ill the latter part of last week. Mr. McDermott came here two years ago when the Saylor company was organized, and upon the dissolution of the latter became interested in its successor, the Colonial Rubber company. He was an expert calendar man, and has in the past superintended this class of work in various rubber factories throughout the country. He was about 50 years of age and leaves a widow and two sons.

Charles Atkinson, who takes charge of the almshouse next week, coming from the Weymouth almshouse, has created a breeze there by his unexpected change, and the Boston Herald says: "This action has caused much surprise. Overseers of the Poor Willis and Gardner say that Mr. Atkinson's management has been perfectly satisfactory. The board has of late paid considerable attention to the matter of supplying wood to the outside poor of the town. It is admitted that while the overseers believe that Mr. Atkinson's transactions have been strictly honest, they think he has been careless in his measuring of the wood. William Brown of Hopkinton has been elected to fill the vacancy."

The grip seems to be reaching the proportions of an epidemic. It is the same uncomfortable disease, according to reports, and leaves its victims with a feeling that life is not worth living. They have the consolation that they have plenty of company, as it is present in all parts of the country and has been especially severe in London and Paris. The way to avoid it is to keep toned up and tonics are reported to be in great demand. Some cases are reported to be very severe and the doctors are said to be unusually busy. March weather is evidently the kind that the grip germ enjoys, and the clouds of dust that float about are alarming some people, who think that it is full of disease germs.

Easter eggs for coloring should be boiled hard or blown out by running a hat pin through them and then making the hole in one end larger than the other. Blow through the smallest hole until the egg shell is empty. Eggs may be colored blue by being dipped in blueing. Red eggs may be made by using red ink and purple ones by using purple ink. If an egg does not color well a little gold paint put on to cover bare spots gives a pretty effect. Eggs wrapped in bright calico and boiled make odd Easter eggs. Queer effects are produced by painting faces on the eggs.

A horse belonging to J. C. McInness, who has lately started a milk route in town, ran away this morning shortly before 7 o'clock. The animal, with a wagon containing bottles of milk, started from in front of the postoffice block, went along on the westerly curbing towards Emmons street, and going upon the sidewalk the wagon struck against the fence near Mason's drug store and came within a few feet of striking the plate glass window. Here the body of the wagon was detatched and the horse kept on with the shafts, two forward wheels and whiffletree behind. The animal turned down Emmons street and ran into West street, where he was brought to a stop by John Geb, having suffered no injury. The wagon was badly damaged and a number of bottles containing milk were spilled on Main street.

Will the Resort Change Ownership?

There have been further inquiries lately about Lake Pearl from Boston real estate men, but no change of management or ownership has been reported. It may be remembered that some months ago a project was said to be talked of by which very extensive improvements would be carried out, but the enterprise fell through for some reason. It is understood that the present owner of the property will sell, but as he has expended considerable time and money in developing the property to its present condition, if he sells he naturally wants his cash back as well as something for labor of brain. With the extension of street railway service to the park, which will surely come before long from some company, the place will be much more valuable as a pleasure resort than at present.

Scheduled to Play Sixteen Games.

The Dean academy base ball team, J. H. A. Smith manager, and E. R. Jenness captain, have arranged the following for the coming season:

April—14, English high school, at Franklin; 21, Tech. Sophomores, at Franklin; 28, Groton school, at Groton.

May—2, St. Mark's, at Southboro; 5, Brown Freshman, at Franklin; 9, Tech. Freshman, at Franklin; 12, Tufts second, at Franklin; 16, Phillips Exeter, at Exeter; 19, Providence high school, at Franklin; 23, Brown Sophomores, at Franklin; 26, Roxbury high, at Franklin; 30, Carters, at Franklin.

June—2, Thayer academy; 6, Framingham high; 9, Friends school; 13, Somerville high; all to be played at Franklin.

Big Wool Earnings.

It is figured that the net earnings of the American Woolen company for the first six months of the fiscal year, ending Dec. 31, amounted to $2,600,000. Officials of the American Woolen company estimate that net earnings for the year ending June 30 will amount to $5,000,000 net.

There is $20,000,000 of 7 per cent. preferred stock outstanding, which calls for the annual disbursement of $1,400,000 per annum. There is $29,501,000 of common stock outstanding. Net earnings of $5,000,000, after making provisions for the full year's dividend on the preferred stock, amount to $12.50 per share on the common stock.

Dental Notice.

I have, since the death of my associate, the late Dr. John T. Stetson, disposed of my Boston office. I will devote my entire time to Franklin patients of myself and the late Dr. Stetson. I extend sincere thanks to all who have for so many years held confidence in my ability, assuring them that renewed efforts will be made to merit a continuance of their patronage.

COMMUNICATIONS.

[The editor assumes no responsibility for matter under this caption. This column is entirely at the disposal of the public, avoiding, as far a possible, trivial and controversial matter.]

To Prevent Mistake.

TO EDITOR SENTINEL:—I read with interest the suggestion of your correspondent in regard to the blowing of a whistle at 9 o'clock for the clearing of the streets of idlers and loafers who are juvenile. But it is possible there is some misapprehension in regard to the by-law passed at the recent town meeting. The by-law has to be sanctioned by the superior court before it can be enforced. When the court has sanctioned it, then the suggestion of your correspondent will be timely. May I not also say I am somewhat surprised to hear there is any quarrel between the Board of Health and the "School Board." I am very sure the Board of Health is not quarreling with anybody. It is simply endeavoring to stamp out scarlet fever in mode made proper by the law, and to do this with as little inconvenience to anyone as is consistent with thoroughness and success. D. M. H.

MR. EDITOR:—One of the reasons urged by the friends of Officer Nickerson for reappointment is that there is no other available man for the place. Are our selectmen less able than our overseers? When they wanted a new man at the Town farm they hustled out and found him. Is not that course open to the selectmen? There is one other thought. If Mr. Nickerson should receive the appointment as being the only man, and anything should happen to him, what a condition we would be in, to be sure! Sickness is among us; death is in our midst. Should Mr. Nickerson be taken away would the town be left the remainder of the year at the mercy of the illegal liquor seller, who, as everyone knows, has had altogether too much latitude the past year, if the no-license votes mean anything?

SUPPRESSION.

Interesting Facts

Out of 73 deaths recorded last year 21 lived to the age of more than 75 years, and nearly all of them passed the age of 80. Many of the others were past the age of 50, and only three or four are recorded between the age of 20 and 40, which indicates a good chance of long life in Franklin for the man that has reached the age of 25. Contrary to the prevailing idea, the month of August shows the largest death roll of any of the months, January and December averaging about the same each, but not as many as August. The births registered numbered 127, showing a large per cent. of increase in population as compared with the death roll of 73. Estimating from the condition of business, the removals from town and the new arrivals, the latter would probably show a gain over the former, so that the coming census is expected to show an increase over 1895.

In War Time.

When the civil war began Franklin's chief means of reaching the outside world was via three trains a day on the railroad to Boston, one about 7 and one about 9 a. m., and a freight with a passenger car attached in the afternoon. This afternoon train was not remarkable for speed. Sometimes it was two hours on the way, sometimes three and sometimes more. It returned in the forenoon at about the same rate of speed. The two passenger trains coming from Boston in the afternoon made good time for those days, an hour and twenty or thirty minutes. The few daily newspapers that were taken in town came on the afternoon train, arriving here a little before 5 p. m. After the rebellion began, of course, there was great interest in getting the latest news at the earliest possible moment. There was no telegraph in town and arrangements were made to have a copy of a later edition of a Boston paper sent out on the last train, arriving at 7 p. m., and for the public good the latest news was read aloud at the store of A. R. Russegue. Day after day, six days in the week, for months at the regular time the store would be crowded with citizens hungering for news from the front. Very few who listened did not have a personal as well as general and patriotic interest in what was going on at the battlefields of the south.—Woonsocket Reporter.

Advertising is business news. It tells the things which are of great daily importance. It is of more account to the frugal housewife to know where to get certain necessary commodities at a less price than usual than to know of the troubles in Siam and Alaska.

JOHN HENRY JENKINS,

WHO WAS ER SEE-LECK-MAN.

When yer git ter talkin' 'bout yer red-hot politics,
Yer wire pullin' hosses 'n th' job they try ter fix,
Th' party lines 'n' policies, 'n' platforms long 'n' deep,
With th' solemn promises they don't intend ter keep,
I'd like ter take yer 'long a me to a place I know
'N' see an' ol' town meetin' a, they had 'em years ago.
Issues didn't sound so big, no bilferlootin' wurds,
'Propriatin' money fer th' school house 'n' th' ruds;
Hottest time they ever had, er praps they can,
Wuz when John Henry Jenkins got to be er see-leck-man.

Fer years 'n' years he'd told 'em jest how things should be done,
How ter build ther bridges 'n' how th' town should run;
No odds whether in th' field a leanin' on his hoe
Er in the cross-ruds store, where th' farmers used ter go,
He'd set 'n' preach economy ter keep th' taxes down
'N' hold a rattlin' argument with any body roun';
He used ter take more papers than most any body there,
'N' runnin' a town ter him wuz plain as light 'n' air.
People get ter takin' stock 'n' finally they ran
This same John Henry Jenkins fer ter be a seeleck man.

Got elected sure enough, 'n' started in ter show
Fellers in before him lots er things they didn't know.
Ruds were never quite so rough as when be run the town,
'N' most ev'rywhere yer'd go yer'd find th' bridges down;
Taxes went up quite er lot, 'n' ev'rybody knew
Jinkins' term in public life was purty nearly thro';
Had er lot er argument that rounded kinder thin,
But all his talk warn't good enough ter put him in agin;
He found th' job he thought so small more'n he could stan',
Th' wise John Henry Jinkins, who wuz er seeleck-man.

Ev'rywhere its jest th' same, tho' on er bigger scale,
People who talk th' loudest er th' very ones ter fail;
Criticisin' public men, 'n' telling things they know,
How they'd handle all the strings if they could have er show.
Think it's tarnal easy fer ter run th' ship uv state;
Ter plunge th' country inter war they wouldn't hesitate,
'N' them that allers know so well how to steer th' boat
Seldom git up interest ter go'n cast er vote.
Wish them that allers know it could only understan',
Jest like John Henry Jinkins, who was a seeleck-man.

TUESDAY, APRIL 3, 1900.

An Enterprising Girl.

The Baltimore Herald finds a girl who is up with the times, along with the automobiles: "A girl who is making a venture in the right direction is one who proposes opening an old-fashioned country inn in a popular mountain district. 'I am sure,' she says, 'that the automobile will create a demand for such places. People will begin to travel as they used to do in the days of the stage coach, and of course they will need places at which to stop for the night. They will not care about going to regular hotels, even if such places were to be found in the country. So I am going to make my place as much as possible like the inns we read about in old novels and run across once in a great while when traveling in England. I am going to have old-fashioned high bedsteads, with dimity valances, etc., but I'm going to be sure that they are comfortable, even if I have to put in wire springs, and my floors will be sanded and rush covered, and the chimneys will have great open fireplaces, in which there will be big, roaring fires. Mark my word for it, the automobile will open a new field for women—real, womanly women, who know how to raise poultry, keep a good table and an immaculate house.'"

J. Eads How, of St. Louis, who has refused to accept $1,00[illegible],00[illegible] inherited from his relatives because he has not earned it by his own labors, has given $2,000 to be expended "for the public welfare." This represents the interest on a sum he keeps in bank to enable him to prosecute his work of relieving distress among the poorer classes. It is "unearned increment," he says, and, therefore, he refuses to use it himself. As a matter of fact, it is very seldom that he spends any money on his own account. He left his mansion in Lindell boulevard to live among the poorest classes in St. Louis. He conducts the Mission home at Ninth and Washington streets. One room and a kitchen constitute his home. He is a nephew of the late James B. Eads, who built the bridge across the Mississippi river at St. Louis. He was educated at an eastern college, and while traveling afterward in Europe conceived the idea of devoting his life to the poor.

Miles McMullin, of St. Albans, Vt., who claims to be [illegible] years of age, was in Fair Haven one day recently, reports the Era, of that town. The old gentleman is of French and English [illegible] looks as though about 7[illegible] years ha[illegible] over his head. Mr. McMullin says [illegible] shaking the hand of George Washington when he was president, and that he has grasped the hand of every president of the United States since that time. He was wearing a coat which was given him by President McKinley when he was at Bluff Point last summer. The old man is bright and spry.

A newly married couple in New Brunswick, N. J., circumvented their mischievous friends by starting on their wedding journey by way of the roof. The friends, well supplied with rice and old slippers, stood at the foot of the stairs. The pair ascended to the roof, walked to the adjoining house, then down and through the rear door to a back street, where they entered a waiting carriage and were driven to the railway station.

Our world contains, we are told, about 52,[illegible]00,000 square miles of land surface, owned by some 60 different peoples. First on the list comes England, who has over 11,000,000 for her share. Next, we have Russia, with 8,[illegible]00,000 and more; then China, followed closely by France, and fifth, the United States, which, without the Philippines, counts 3,6[illegible]9,630 in square miles.

RECORD OF THE PAST

No Stronger Evidence Can Be Had.

Look well to their record. What they have done many times in years gone by, is the best guarantee of future results. Anyone with a bad back; any reader suffering from urinary troubles, from any kidney ills, will find in the following evidence proof that relief and cure is near at hand:

Mr. Patrick O. Dwyer, mason, of 62 White street, New Haven, Conn, says: "In 1896 when Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of backache which always bothered me when I caught cold, which hurt me when I stooped, or straightened after stooping, which refused to disappear under treatment of different medicines, I was only too pleased to let the people of New Haven know the fact through our newspapers. Three years from that date, or in the month of May, 1899, I just as ardently recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as I did when they effected the cure mentioned above. My advice to anyone suffering from kidney complaint is, call at a drug store, procure Doan's Kidney Pills, take them as directed, and you will be surprised at the results."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers, price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name—Doan's—and t[illegible]

VENDETTAS OF THE PRESENT.

They Differ But Slightly from the Sanguinary Feuds of Other Days.

It is through lack of information that the vendetta is referred to to-day as an institution of the past. Vendettas—blood feuds—exist to-day not only in Sicily, Sardinia and Corsica, but in Kentucky and other of the southern and western states, and also at times in England, Ireland and France, Italy and the east, says the New York World.

It has happened recently that an Albanian whose relative had been killed by a Turkish vizier shot the vizier's son—which is at least a partial exemplification of the vendetta. In Arabia the system is to-day in full operation, a fact which is so well understood that offenses sufficient to start a train of killings are rarely committed, and a considerable degree of order is thereby preserved.

As it is generally understood the vendetta originated in the following practice: An assassin was never allowed to escape. The responsibility of punishment was assumed by the nearest blood relations of his victim. There must be blood for blood, a death for a death.

Feminine Financiering.

That women are the best financiers of the world we have often had opportunity to acknowledge, says the Honolulu Independent. We have seen them at the auction sales when they made a "bargain" by buying an article they had no use for whatever, and we have seen them haggling over the price of cheap calico for a reduction in price of one cent a yard, and then triumphantly carrying their purchase to a fashionable dressmaker and paying her ten dollars for a "morning" dress. This morning we could not help smiling while watching a lady credited with possessing good business sense buying "Chinese birds" on board a mail steamer, haggling over the price of the birds and beating down the seller of seven fine specimens by 50 cents of the original price. In the meantime her hack was waiting, and the driver "charging." She made her bargain, saved 50 cents on the birds and paid the hackman one dollar for waiting. That is female financiering.

Filled the Requirement.

A primary teacher was hearing a recitation in grammar, and the class was composed largely of the smaller students. The teacher wrote the three words: "Bees, bear, boys," on the board and asked the pupils to write a sentence containing the three words. She was quite taken back a few minutes later when one of the bright boys in the class handed in the following: "Boys bees bear when they go in swim[illegible]."

Determining Status.

The Fool—I know that, I'm not worthy of you, my dear.

The Fairy—Remember that, Harold, and my married life is sure to be happy.—N. Y. Journal.

When Pa Firs' Et Tobasco Sauce.

When pa firs' et tabasco sauce—I'm smilin' 'bout it yet,
Although his subsekent remarks I always shall regret.
We'd come to town to see the sights, an' pa remarked to me:
"We'll eat at a bong tong 'hotel an' sling some style," says he
An' then he sort o' cast his eye among the plates an' all,
An' says: "That ketchup mus' be good, the bottle is so small:"
An' then he took a piece o' meat an' covered it quite thick,
When pa firs' et tabasco sauce an' rose to make his kick.

It all comes back so plain to me; I rikcollect it well;
He just was talkin' mild an' calm, an' then he give a yell
An' tried to cave the ceilin' by buttin' with his head,
"Er-hooh! Er-hooh! Fire! Murder! Hooh!" I can't tell all he said.
But when they heard his heated words six women lef' the room,
An' said such language filled their soul with shame, an' also gloom;
But pa, he only gurgled some, and then he yelled again,
When firs' he et tabasco sauce an' told about it then.

We laid him out upon a board an' fanned him quite awhile,
An' pa, he sort o' gasped at first an' then he tried to smile,
An' says: "Just heat a poker now, an' run it down my neck,
I want to cool off gradual, it's better I ex pect."
But when he got me out o' doors, he says "I want to get
That there blame ketchup recipe an' learn jus' how it's het,
So I can try it on the boys when you an' me git hum,
Till they, too, think the condiment is mixed with Kingdom Come."
—San Francisco Examiner.

The Man Behind the Gun.

They say that life's a battle, lad, I think you'll find it true;
The same old conflict rages, though the weapons may be new;
But in every kind of warfare that is waged beneath the sun,
The contest is decided by the man behind the gun.

There are many hidden dangers that a soldier never sees—
Blind batteries to blast you, and sharpshooters in the trees;
And whether you will falter, or the foe will have to run,
Will depend upon the mettle of the man behind the gun.

There will come supremest moments in the battle for the right,
When the deck is cleared for action, and the foe is just in sight;
Then, oh then, you must be ready; for Manilas are not won
When a sluggard or a coward is the man behind the gun.

What though the foe grows boastful, and counts up his array
Of armies and of battleships to fill you with dismay—
Keep up your target practice—vict'ry's certain as the sun!
For it's not the heavy cannon—it's the man behind the gun!
—Alice Rollit Coe, in Youth's Companion.

When the Cold Days Come.

We use to rail at winter, with its ice, an' sleet and snow,
An' heave a sigh for summer when we heard the blizzard blow;
But now we've thought it over, an' the growlers they are dumb,
An' we'll all shout hallelula when the Cold
Days
Come!

Fact is, we're fond o' blizzards, fer sartainly they beat
The burnin' breath o' summer, when the skies are cracked with heat!
We allus favored icicles (would give the worl' fer some!)
An' we'll all shout hallelula when the Cold
Days
Come!

Oh, come along, gray winter, an' wrap the worl' in white!
We'll tune the fiddles for you where the fire's burnin' bright.
We use to call you cruel, but the growlers now are dumb,
An' we'll have a jubilation when the Cold
Days
Come!
—F. L. Stanton, in Atlanta Constitution.

He Stooped to Conquer.

He stooped and picked a handkerchief
Up from the floor near where she stood
And bowing said "Permit me," in
The bravest, courtliest way he could.

The maiden blushed and sweetly said:
"It is not mine"—he knew 'twas not!
The dainty thing he offered her
Was one that he himself had bought.

But there they stood and wondered who Might be its owner, and before
They parted talked of much besides
What he had found upon the floor.

* * * * *

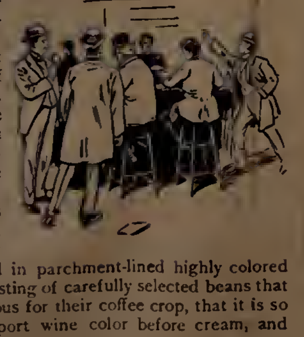
They walk in pleasant ways to-day;
Of all mankind she loves him best;
The handkerchief is locked away,
One secret still is in his breast.
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Times-Herald.

Not a Friend.

Mr. Northside—Who was that friend you had with you this afternoon?

Mr. Shadyside—That wasn't a friend. That was my father-in-law.—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

FIVE MINUTES FOR REFRESHMENT.



We all know how little refreshment is usually obtained in the traditional five minutes.

It is often better not to try to get anything to eat, and so save yourself useless wear and tear on your nerves.

But if you can get a cup of Chase & Sanborn's Seal Brand Coffee you can get in five minutes what will refresh and invigorate you for five hours.

It is because Chase & Sanborn's Coffee is absolutely unadulterated. The Seal Brand as well as their other high grade Coffees which are packed in parchment-lined highly colored imported bags is all pure coffee, consisting of carefully selected beans that have been raised on plantations, famous for their coffee crop, that it is so delicious. The kind that is deep port wine color before cream, and golden after cream.

Ask for it wherever you may be, until you get it. It is worth the trouble. The best is always the cheapest.

CHASE & SANBORN'S COFFEES.

This Month Take Hood's Sarsaparilla

And have new pure and bright blood. Then you will enjoy life.

Household Frugality.

Mrs. Younghusband—Do you notice any difference in the milk, dear?

Mr. Younghusband—I should say so this is a much better quality than we have been getting lately.

Mrs. Younghusband—Indeed it is. I got it of a new man, who said he would guarantee it to be perfectly pure, so I got enough to last for a couple of weeks.—Chicago Daily News.

He Knew That One.

A little fellow who has not, as yet, succeeded in learning the name of the three daily meals, came down to breakfast the other morning, when his mamma said:

"Well, Rollo, what meal is this?"

"Oatmeal," was the confident reply.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Treacherous.

Mr. Broadstairs—I have 300 hens on my place.

Young Quigley (solemnly) — Well, you want to look out for them.

Mr. Broadstairs (astonished)—Look out for them! Why?

Young Quigley (still solemnly)—Because they are laying for you.—N. Y. World.

Do not leave home on a journey without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed and cannot be procured while you are on board the cars or steamship. It is pleasant, safe and reliable. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

Beauty Is Blood Deep.

Clean blood means a clean skin. No beauty without it. Cascarets, Candy Cathartic clean your blood and keep it clean, by stirring up the lazy liver and driving all impurities from the body. Begin to-day to banish pimples, boils, blotches, blackheads, and that sickly bilious complexion by taking Cascarets,—beauty for ten cents. All druggists, satisfaction guaranteed, 10c, 25c, 50c.

Scrofula, salt rheum, erysipelas and other distressing eruptive diseases yield quickly and permanently to the cleansing, purifying power of Burdock Blood Bitters.

Bodily pain loses its terror if you've a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil in the house. Instant relief in case of burns, cuts, sprains, accidents of any sort.

A Ringing Voice.

A merry ring has Roland's voice,
That makes her maiden heart rejoice
And blushes to her cheek can bring;
But yet I've heard her shyly own
That it would have a sweeter tone
Had it the true engagement ring

FOR ONE DOLLAR.

Published Every Alternate Day except Sunday.

The Thrice-a-Week Edition of THE NEW YORK WORLD is first among all "weekly" papers in size, frequency of publication and the freshness, accuracy and variety of its contents. It has all the merits of a great $6 daily at the price of a dollar weekly. Its political news is prompt, complete, accurate and impartial, as all its readers will testify. It is against the monopolies and for the people.

It prints the news of all the world, having special correspondence from all important news points on the globe. It has brilliant illustrations, stories by great authors, a capital humor page, complete markets, departments for the household and women's work and other special departments of unusual interest.

LIES vs. FACTS

No man wishes to buy a pig in a bag, and no one places confidence in the advertisements of Scale makers which SOUND improbable. "Something for nothing" can never be had, and when you see Scales advertised so indefinitely as to leave a BIG percentage for the imagination; investigate carefully.

Some people are fair-minded, and to them we refer the Scale question. Actions SPEAK louder than words, and when you find a genuine article made of good material FOR a fair price is it not better that the facts in the case should be looked into by fair-minded men for THEMSELVES before buying any kind of a Scale?

A POET'S BREAKFAST.

MARIE BRONSON signaled the coachman to stop.

"Miss Marie," said her governess, severely, "what is your intention?"

"A harmless intention, mademoiselle. I want to walk over the bridge."

"Walk over the bridge, Miss Marie? But is it customary?"

"It appears to be customary for some folks to do so, judging from the procession we see, dear mademoiselle. Now, don't forbid me! Only fancy, I have ridden over this bridge all the days of my life—every time I have come downtown from home. And never once have I set foot upon its planks. Come, get out, mademoiselle! Let us play that we are going to work and have little tin pails on our arms. It will be great fun."

"I am quite sure your mamma would not like it, Miss Marie."

"Mamma? Well, to tell the truth, mademoiselle, though perhaps I ought not to do so, dear mamma used to walk over this bridge every day in her girlhood. She was not rich then. She had a great deal more fun than I have, I think."

Mlle. Baron shook her head disapprovingly, but had no choice but to leave the carriage with her young mistress. It was early morning and the State street bridge was thronged with men and women hastening to their tasks. They made an almost compact body, and the impetus of their movement was irresistible. They pushed along with an eagerness and impatience characteristic of the most restless and hard-working city in the world.

When Marie Bronson felt herself a part of the throng and found herself elbowed by hustling men who paid no regard to her dainty personality, and when the smoke of a tug submerged the bridge in its foul gloom and the bell of the bridge keeper warned the crowd that it must hurry yet faster if it did not wish to be suspended over the ill-smelling river, she had a feeling of distinct amusement. The whole stress and fume seemed a sort of a joke to her, and she wished that she might be thrown upon her own resources for once and have a chance to put her abilities to the test. Mlle. le Baron, however, was not amused. Her face wore a look of protest and fright, and at every other step she summoned Thomas, the driver, to keep close.

Miss Marie walked as slowly as the crowd would permit. She was looking with frank and warm interest into the faces of the persons who passed her—persons who looked likable, many of them, but about whose lives she knew nothing, and whose feelings she fancied she would find it difficult to understand. So, scrutinizing the passers-by, she gazed with astonishment into a face she knew—the face of Selfridge Ames. He had also amused Miss Marie, because he chose not to do the things which were expected of the young men of his class, but to live a bohemian existence, amid heaven knows what surroundings, and to declare with perfect nonchalance that he intended to be a poet. The impertinence of the announcement had always touched Marie's risibilities.

"Why, how do you do?" she cried, holding out her hand. "I never see you any more, Mr. Ames."

The crowd swept her impatiently aside, and she laughed at the jostling.

"I must turn and walk with you, Miss Bronson, if we are to speak together," returned the young man.

They were pushed into the procession of hurrying work people, and ran along together, laughing, to the scandal of mademoiselle, who made yet more frantic gestures to the coachman to keep close at hand.

"What is the reason none of your old friends ever see you nowadays?"

"I hear that my old friends laugh at me."

Marie blushed. "Yes," she confessed, "but they like you none the less. But you know it seems so silly for anyone in Chicago to write poetry."

"Time was when Bristol was as dirty and as commercial as Chicago. Yet a poet wrote there."

"I have also heard that he starved."

"But I'm not starving. I am going to my breakfast now."

"I breakfasted an hour ago."

"You are fortunate. I make breakfast last till dinner."

"Then you must really be a poet."

"Some of the reviews have been saying so."

"How egotistical you are! But I don't mind. I will even encourage your vanity by admitting that I have read both of your books."

"I hope you liked them?"

"I thought them beautiful. I didn't see where you found all that beauty, living here in this awful city."

"The fact that it is awful gives me something to write about. It is the passion of it that thrills me."

"I know. I try to feel that way, too, and I have come nearer to doing it the last few minutes than I ever did before in my life."

"I am sorry to leave you, but this is where I breakfast."

"What? Not in that little place? But it is clean."

"Clean enough. Cleaner than many finer places."

"Do you know what I am going to do?"

"I haven't an idea."

"I am going to breakfast with you. I am hungry. We had a horrid breakfast at home. I could eat nothing."

"Miss Marie!" shrilled mademoiselle, in alarm, "you are not going in that terrible place!"

"Indeed, yes, mademoiselle, and you also. If it is good enough for my friend it is good enough for me, is it not?"

"But, Miss Marie, with a young man!"

"Is it not nice that he is young, mademoiselle?"

"I thought you were proud," murmured Selfridge. "I have been dreaming of you desolately and writing verses to you which I did not send."

"Had you no postage, then?"

"I had no courage."

"How absurd! Have you forgotten the motto of your city?"

"Miss Pearson! You tell me there is no need for the discouragement I have been feeling?"

"Tut! Do not talk about discouraging. Consult the menu. What are we to eat? Red hots? It would be adorable to have red hots."

"Mon Dieu!" gasped mademoiselle.

"You see that man over there? He plays the cornet at the Grand. He is a wonderful cornetist and the pleasantest fellow! We often take our breakfast together."

"Do not ask him now. Who is that man with red hair?"

"He? He is nobody, but he is dying of love for somebody who is somebody. It is a romance. I shall tell it to you some day."

"Your world seems to be full of romances."

"Everybody's world is. It is my profession to notice it. I suppose it is your vocation to make the romance."

"I have made none. I never do anything but tease mademoiselle, and that is not exciting, because she really does not care as much as she pretends. Isn't the coffee amazingly bad? It seems bohemian to drink such vile coffee."

"Then you do not intend to laugh at me always because—because I am a fool?"

"No one laughs at the troubadours."

"Thank you. Are you to be my great patron?"

"The great patrons always had rich, fat, old husbands who bored them, so I shall not be your patron. I would rather be your friend."

"Then I may send you the verses that I wrote to you?"

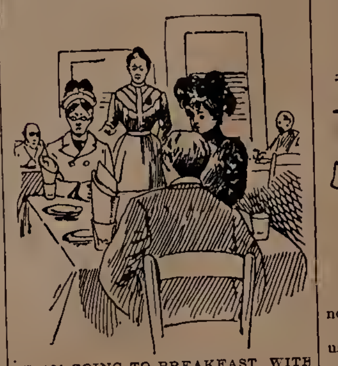
"I can't imagine what else you would do with them. I suppose no one would publish them."

"Eh?"

"Forgive me. I like to tease, you know."

"What are we to do now that breakfast is over?"

"Nothing. I see that mademoiselle has settled our account. That was thoughtful of her."



"I AM GOING TO BREAKFAST WITH YOU."

"But you told her to."

"I swear I did not!"

"I am not so poor I cannot pay for breakfast for my friends."

"I'll wager you are! I'll wager that you are so poor you will not even find stamps to send me those verses by the ten o'clock mail!"

"You will lose!"

"I shall be miserable if I gain!"

"Miss Marie, what are you saying? I cannot follow you," complained the poor French lady, adjusting her glasses with a trembling hand.

"Do not try to follow me, mademoiselle, except to the carriage. How patient Thomas looks! I like his expression, do not you, Mr. Ames? Now, remember you have had one meal, and you are not to take another till seven. If you ate more you might forget how to write, and that would be terrible. Shall I see you at seven at our house at dinner? Mamma will telephone you an invitation if you will only tell me where you can be reached."

He wrote a number on a card.

"It is a public telephone. I shall be there at one."

"Good-by."

"What a beautiful breakfast it has been. Good-by."

"Mademoiselle, is it not fascinating to eat red hots?"

"Miss Marie, you are incorrigible."

"No, no, dear mademoiselle—not incorrigible, only happy. Let us hasten through with our errands, so I can go home and tell mamma. She will enjoy it. She loved bohemia herself when she was young."

"But this was not bohemia."

"No? Call it the suburbs of bohemia, then. But it is the nearest I have ever been to it."—Chicago Tribune.

A Perfect Fleece.

Many persons interested in the natural history of the sheep do not clearly understand what density of the fleece means. Wool, as it exists in the fleece, is valued as to quantity and quality. Quality depends on length and closeness of the fibers. The latter is the density of the fleece. This depends on natural peculiarity, and exists in a remarkable degree in certain breeds and in families of these. Pure Spanish merino wool has about 45,000 fibers on a square inch of skin. The finest and densest wool is on the shoulders. A perfect fleece will be even in fineness from the shoulder to the thigh, of nearly equal length of staple on the back over on the sides from the shoulder to the thigh, and equal in density on the shoulder and back from loin to loin. The sheep is the most impressive of all the domestic animals. The selection of the father of the flock is thought so important that experts are employed to select rams.—N. Y. Press.

Faith in Superstition.

"I'm just sure that her auburn hair is the result of chemicals," said young Mrs. Torkins in a tone of mystery and confidence.

"What makes you think so?"

"When I met her the other day I looked all around and I didn't see a white horse anywhere."

He Got the Flies.

His house is steam heated and he has been troubled with flies all winter. Every time he sat down to eat a dozen would fall in his soup. Last Sunday there were half a dozen guests to dinner and right in the midst of the meal six flies fell into the salad. He swore vengeance. He would rid the house of those flies or die in the attempt. After the guests had left he got his wife, daughter and the hired girl and they "shooed" the flies into the pantry after a good half hour of hard work. Then he prepared his "exterminator." He took an ounce or more of gunpowder, spread it over a pan and put some sugar temptingly in the center. When the flies had finally settled in it he touched off the fuse and shut the door. The next instant there was a puff and then an explosion. He had forgotten to remove a couple of cartriges which he had opened to remove the powder but had not used! Monday he purchased a $50 set of dinner dishes and the carpenter's bill was $20.—Detroit Free Press

Why His Coat Was Unbuttoned.

The thermometer stood at ten degrees above zero.

He had on an overcoat, undercoat and a vest. His other garments cut no ice here.

Although the wind blew a Greenland gale, his overcoat and undercoat were both unbuttoned and flapped like the sails of a schooner set wing-and-wing.

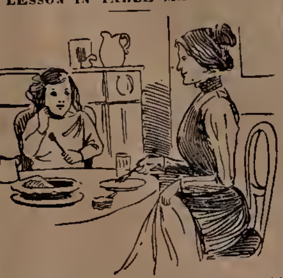
Why did he not button his coat on this piercing day?

Because he was The Man With a Badge.

By leaving his coat unbuttoned People could see that on his vest was displayed his vested right to wear a Badge, and who ever saw a man with such authority, when off duty, who didn't display at least the rim of his Badge?

No one, because power is sweet to us all, from the President to the Peasant. —Washington Star.

LESSON IN TABLE MANNERS.



Mother—Peggie! darling! you should not scratch your nose with a spoon!

Political Uncertainties.

In serious things change still holds sway
And fills the heart with sorrow.
The map which all respect to-day
Is out of style to-morrow.

LIGHT, FIRM LADDER.

It Is Safe and Does Not Break a Thin-Soled Boot in Two When Stepped Upon.

It is made of boards, and the steps are three inches in width (as are the sides.) They are held in place by screws. Each one is also supported by a three-eighths-inch iron rod that passes through from side to side, with a head and a washer on one end and a nut on the other. These rods keep the ladder from spreading, and make the breaking of a step impossible—giving a safe ladder and one that does not break the thin-soled boot nearly in two when stepped upon.—N. Y. Tribune.

KEEP YOUR BLOOD CLEAN

Original.

Markham—Your wife is full of social devices, Lumley.

Lumley—Right you are. The other day she noticed my hair was getting thin and proposed giving a "coming out" party for it.—N. Y. World.

He Got the Change.

Judge—Why did you pick this physician's pocket?

Prisoner — Well, I consulted him about my healt', an' he told me that I had to have change or die.—N. Y. World.

What He Might Become.

"What do you expect your boy to be when he grows up?"

"From present indications," returned the fond father, who had just heard of the youngster's getting into another scrape. "I should say that there was every likelihood that he would be a disappointment."—Chicago Post.

The Best Remedy for Rheumatism.

All who use Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism are delighted with the quick relief from pain which it affords. When speaking of this Mr. D. N. Sinks of Troy, Ohio, says: "Some time ago I had a severe attack of rheumatism in my arm and shoulder. I tried numerous remedies, but got no relief until I was recommended by Messrs George F. Parsons & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree with me that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

"Better late than never." It is best, however, to be never late about taking Hood's Sarsaparilla to purify your blood. Take it now.

The Leading Physical Culture Teacher of America, Prof. ROBERT J. ROBERTS, of the Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium, of Boston, says:

DEAR SIRS.—I can only speak of the "old Johnson's Anodyne Liniment" in the highest terms. I have used it in the gymnasium when the boys have strained or overworked their bodies. It has worked like magic in reducing swelled joints and in removing soreness of the parts. At home my wife has used it with our boys and speaks enthusiastically. In fact for most of the slight ills of the flesh, internal and external, it has proved valuable. [Signed] ROBERT J. ROBERTS.

Horses That Sleep Standing.

It is not generally known that at least four out of every ten horses do not lie down to sleep. The horse that sleeps in a standing position rests one leg at a time, depending on the other three to sustain the weight of his body. The habit is a very dangerous one. Only a short time since a fine horse in the stables of a big manufacturing concern went to sleep while standing in his stall fell heavily to the floor, breaking one of his legs. A great many horses are permanently injured as a result of accidents of this nature, and there is no way of curing them of the habit.—Boston Globe.

Chances of Army Promotion.

The opportunity for the coming soldier to secure commissioned rank has been greater in the last 12 months than at any previous time in the history of the army, and more from this class have been appointed than in 15 years. It is proposed to still further recognize men from the ranks in making appointments to vacancies which now exist, so it can no longer be claimed the man who now enrolls in the ranks has not a fair chance of being a commissioned officer if he is bright enough to meet the examination requirements.—Chicago Chronicle.

WRENTHAM.

Dr. Nathaniel Ware Hawes, the well known Newbury street dentist, died Sunday at his residence at "Hawes Lawn," East street, from a complication of diseases brought on by a severe attack of the grippe, which he contracted three weeks ago. Dr. Hawes was born in this town in August, 1838, his parents being Benjamin and Elizabeth Hawes. He was a professor at the Harvard Dental school and received his degree from there. He was twice married. He was a member of St. Albans lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Foxboro. The funeral will be held from her late residence Wednesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.——The Fish and Game association of North Attleboro have leased a tract of land of Chauncey G. Fuller, built a dam and flooded a number of acres. Friday they liberated 1,000 quarter pound trout and the pond is to be closed for three years. A number of pheasant have also been liberated, with 300 quail, most of the latter in this part of the town.——Mr. and Mrs. D. Mora, with their two sons, Louis and Joe, are guests at the Chamberlin's.——Friday night Charles S. Ruggles celebrated his birthday with a party given to the Kipling club at his home on Taunton street. Whist was one of the leading attractions, Miss Mabel Dean winning the first prize, a vase, and D. S. Farrington a silver smelling bottle; Mrs. Sallie Rowells and F. J. Ruggles won the consolation prizes. After an elaborate lunch Miss Mary Stone read an article on the history of the club, Mrs. M. A. Smith a poem and Mr. Rowells, the secretary and treasurer, presented the annual dues in attractive form.——Schools closed in town Friday.——In the recent forest fire Charles E. Wilkinson lost 300 cords of wood.——F. A. Shepard and family have returned from Milford, where Mrs. Shepard has been for nearly a month.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

BREAKING UP ARMOR PLATE.

A Ton of Dynamite a Week Used in the Process by a Skilled Operator.

Up in the ravine a half mile from Monocacy, Pa., is where they use a ton of dynamite every week in an armor plate graveyard. Steel armor plate that fails to pass government inspection is sent to be broken into fragments to be returned to the smelters at the mills.

The noise of the process may be heard 15 miles away. Operations are directed by Caleb Bland. He has 40 men at work, 20 who drill holes in the armor plate by night, and 20 who do nothing but explode dynamite by electricity during the day.

As many as 40 holes are drilled in a single steel plate. These holes are filled with dynamite, which is fired by wire, one shot after another, reminding one of the roar of artillery or the thunder of battleships in action. This is kept up all day.

They use the finest diamond drills, and the men engaged in the business have been doing little else for a long time. The workmen use four tons of dynamite every month, and yet accidents are rare. The plates are shipped by rail to the Monocacy ravine, and when they are broken into bits are sent back again. They also blast into fragments large condemned cannons from gun works, forts and ships.

The terrific firing begins about eight o'clock every morning and continues until well on in the afternoon. The drilling is done by night, so that they can fire during the day and not keep anyone from sleep. The only complaints they now have are from some new men on the night shift who cannot sleep in the day. Said one of the bosses:

"Our old men who work at night can sleep in the day quite well, no matter how much noise we make. They are used to it. Those men can sleep during the most terrific explosions. The women folks for miles around attend to their household work, not at all minding the roar of the exploding dynamite. They are accustomed to it. The children go to school and study their lessons, but are not disturbed. It is just as if they were studying near the firing line of an army every school day. They don't mind it. Strangers coming along hold their ears and leave in terror. If they'd stop awhile they'd get used to it.

"No, we have no complaints from our men about injured eardrums. Some wear cotton in their ears, but not many.

"We can fire a hundred shots by electricity very fast, nearly one a second, if it is necessary. You can imagine it requires a good many shots to use up a ton of dynamite in six working days. We have the best of appliances to prevent the scattering of fine iron or steel in the air and to avoid damages resulting from flying fragments."—N. Y. Sun.

The pupils in the lower grades of St. Mary's school, who have had a vacation for the past three weeks, resumed their studies Wednesday in the basement of the church. The class rooms which they are to occupy in the new building will be ready next week.

Rev. Dr. Koehne will deliver his fifth lecture in the course on next Tuesday evening, in the Congregational church, upon the subject "Modern Skepticism." This is a thoroughly prepared lecture upon the theme in hand and will be worth a sacrifice to hear.

Solicitor R. E. Healey, for the telephone company, is now at work vigorously canvassing the field for new 'phones, with excellent prospects for many new ones shortly. As their convenience becomes manifest the users will wonder how they ever got along without them.

Manager Hazelton took his Tufts ball nine to New Haven on Wednesday, where the Yales beat them 14 to 3. Woodworth, who pitched for Milford last season, is now at Tufts, and did the twirling. Fiske caught a fine game, the papers speaking of him as a "crackerjack."

H. M. Bullock, real estate agent, has been ill at his residence on Ruggles street the past two or three weeks with the grip. Sunday afternoon he became suddenly worse, becoming delirious, and the family had to have the aid of an extra person to keep him in bed. Dr. A. J. Gallison was summoned.

Some time ago Artist Calkin placed a remarkably life-like picture of the late Rev. W. M. Thayer in Mr. Dana's window for exhibition and it was much admired. Mrs. Thayer has just presented it to Dean academy, where it will grace the walls of that institution and should prove an impetus to the young people there.

Mr. Koehne will consider in his lecture on next Tuesday evening such perplexing questions as the following: Was Jesus simply a great man? Was He the product of heredity? What of the universality of His kingdom? There are but two remaining lectures in the course. All should plan to hear them.

N. D. Parker of Boston, Miss Taylor of the Lynn Classical High school and Supt. L. P. Nash of Holyoke were in town today visiting the High school. Mr. Nash is generally considered one of the best of the younger school superintendents of Massachusetts, and expressed himself as being much pleased with the condition of Franklin schools.

Charles Atkinson, the new manager of the Town farm, is taking hold of things as if he knew his business thoroughly, and will evidently prove just the man for the place. He had already been engaged to remain at his former place for another year, but for certain reasons desired to make a change. The Overseers were fortunate in getting so good a man.

The attention of the Alden club is called to next Monday evening when Mrs. Jeannette Robinson Murphy gives her delineations of Southern life prior to the Civil war, at Dean academy chapel. A large attendance is requested. This is open to the public. Will not our citizens avail themselves of a rare treat and also show their appreciation of the club's efforts.

The Rev. R. Perry Bush of Chelsea preached a very eloquent and earnest sermon at the Universalist Lenten service last evening, on "The Religious Man and the Sources of His Inspiration." Mr. Bush has a manner of speaking which at once enlists and holds attention. Those who heard Mr. Bush last evening will surely be glad to hear him again when an opportunity may offer.

During our absence through illness a matter of correction was overlooked. We had stated that Supt. Daniels' report at the annual meeting had been rejected; this we corrected later by stating that only a portion was rejected. To this statement Mr. Bassett, the mover of the motion, takes exception, and insists that he moved the rejection of the entire report. This statement he verifies by the report of the clerk of the meeting, which shows that the entire report was rejected.

Ozro Littlefield celebrated his 93d birthday anniversary at his home in Roslindale Sunday. He was formerly for several years a resident of Franklin. Except being somewhat deaf, Mr. Littlefield has his faculties and enjoys good health. When living here he worked at the carpenter's trade and at the Sherman & Farmer straw goods factory. He was born in Boscawen, N. H., and had a hard struggle in early life. He is of a cheerful disposition, generally disposed to look on the bright side of things and take matters in a philosophical way. He is an uncle of Edward F. Searles, the well-known millionaire, and that gentleman has materially assisted in making the past decade or two of Mr. Littlefield's life comfortable and peaceful.

Word was received here Wednesday of the death at South Framingham, early in the day, of Michael O'Toole, who was at one time a resident here, and who in January, 1899, was married to Miss Minnie Keefe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Keefe, of Cottage street. Mr. O'Toole was a cutter in the Hood rubber works when the plant was located here and later at the Hood works at Watertown. He has been a sufferer from lung trouble for some time and last fall was compelled to give up work. He was 27 years of age. Funeral services were held in South Framingham this morning and the interment was here in St. Mary's cemetery.

The entertainment at the regular fortnightly meeting, Wednesday evening, of the Y. P. C. U., in the Universalist church parlors, was a very interesting one. The program consisted of instrumental and vocal music, with readings by Dr. Hodge, interspersed with renderings from Floyd Hosie's phonograph. Mrs. Thompson's piano solos were executed in her usual artistic and pleasing manner and the union appreciated her kindness in contributing to their pleasure. The singing by Miss Jessie Corbin of "The Holy City" showed a most remarkable voice and skill in its use. The piano duet by Miss Reed and Miss Corbin was especially enjoyed. After the program games were indulged in, followed by light refreshments. Miss Cochrane, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Crafts and Mr. Gatchell were the committee for the entertainment. A Colonial party is announced for Wednesday evening. April 18, under the management of Miss Edith Hodge.

The entertainment and sale held by the King's Daughters and Sons at Odd Fellows' hall Tuesday evening was well patronized and the affair was a complete success in every way. There was a goodly sum realized, which will be added to the fund for the building of a Home for the Aged of Norfolk County. The following was the program: Piano duet, Misses Nixon and Metcalf; reading, Miss Linne Ferrer; vocal solo, Miss Kellough; reading, Miss Shermen; mandolin solo, J. Ray Wyckoff; vocal solo, Roy Hartshorn; piano solo, Miss Teppan; trio, Miss Mann, Messrs. Mann and Bly; piano solo, Mrs. Thompson; Gibson pictures, illustrated by tableaux; instrumental trio, Miss Mann and Messrs. Mann and Bly; play, "Mice at Play," Merie Perron, Ernest Abbott, Dana Searle, Walter Reed; vocal solo, J. Ray Wyckoff; reading, Miss Pearl Judd; vocal solo, Miss Louise Grant; charade, Misses Fales, Judd and Nixon, Messrs Sneath, Wyckoff, Nixon and Frazer; piano solo, Mrs. Thompson; trio, Miss Mann, Messrs. Mann and Bly.

Manufacturer Harry T. Hayward enjoys the unique distinction of being the first possessor of an automobile in town. He drove the machine out from Newton, where it was manufactured, yesterday, accompanied by one of the prominent men of the establishment. It is called a "run about", and weighs about six hundred pounds. Its motive power is steam, the fuel being gasolene. The steam is generated in a remarkably short time, and the speed of the machine is practically limitless. Indeed, Mr. Hayward was only a couple of hours in running out from Newton. It is one of the simplest automobiles manufactured, and has stood the test of going up Mt. Washington, as Mr. and Mrs. Stanley rode up the mountain last summer. This carriage has no top, and looks not unlike an ordinary buggy, except that the seat is somewhat higher, while the wheels are of the bicycle pattern. All of the mechanism is in the rear body, exposing but little of anything that might be affected by mud or water. Mr. Hayward expects to find it exceedingly useful in making his trips to and from Bellingham, where his business calls him not a little. For the present he is mainly solicitous about horses being scared.

Card of Thanks.

The King's Daughters and Sons wish to extend their thanks to all who so kindly assisted in their entertainment, and also to those who so generously contributed money.

ELSIE R. METCALF, Secretary.

The new "Orient Road Racer" model is now on exhibition in the windows of J. F. Hussey, on Depot street, also at the Orient Cycle Agency.

Annual Parish Meeting.

The annual meeting of the parish of the First Congregational church was held on Tuesday evening. Deacon Thomas B. Allen called the meeting to order and the warrant was read by William S. Johnson. Dr. J. Cushing Gallison was chosen moderator. The treasurer's report was read, showing a small balance in the treasury after all bills are paid. The total receipts from pew rentals and voluntary offerings were $3,608. The voluntary offerings were $1,077, being the largest amount for some years. The following officers and committees were elected for the new year. Treasurer, Bradley M. Rockwood; asst. treas., Nathan C. Nye; clerk and auditor, William S. Johnson; parish com., Dea. Thos. B. Allen, George E. Emerson, Walter M. Fisher; music com., Herbert W. Thayer, Joseph P. Bassett, Nathan C. Nye; com. on voluntary offerings, E. H. Sherman, E. D. Daniels and Palmer A. Woodward.

It was voted that the music committee provide music for the evening service whenever held in the audience room. It was voted that the time for the annual rental of pews be fixed for Wednesday evening, April 11, at 7.30. It was voted that the parish committee issue a warrant for a special meeting of the parish to consider the matter of appropriating money for the care of the cemetery lot upon which the body of Rev. Nathaniel Emmons is buried. The meeting was a very interesting and harmonious one and clearly indicated the prosperous condition of the parish.

"Market Gardening."

The Farmers' club met with Warren H. Bright last Monday evening, and the paper for the evening, by the host, was read, which we give in part:

The great question with farmers today is "What crops can we raise to yield us the most profit?" We will admit that we cannot grow grain nor fatten beeves with the same profit that our fathers did before the opening up of the West and the reduction of rates on freight. The farms which have been turned to market gardens are the best paying farms we have in New England. To be a success the farm must be near a good market in order that fresh vegetables may be delivered early in the morning. There are crops which will thrive best on meadow land provided it is well drained, such as cabbages. I have always found peas one of my best crops for quick returns. The seeds should be put into the ground as early as it is dry enough to permit. Tomatoes may be rated as one of the leading crops of market gardening, for they do not require extra care and there is generally a ready sale for them. Any good corn land will raise tomatoes.

I do not find the bean crop as a rule profitable, as the market is very limited, and to compete with the wholesale market requires experience on the part of grower to insure him profit. Beans should be planted from the first to the middle of May. As a general thing the beet crop demands a ready sale and is easily cultivated. They can be planted as soon as the ground can be worked in the spring, as they are hardy and are not injured by light frosts. There are many other varieties of vegetables that are included in market gardening, but I do not consider them practical for the ordinary farmer as our market is so limited.

Another New Model.

To meet the demand for a light road wheel that shall be a strictly first-class machine, and yet sell at a moderate price, the Orient company have just brought out a new model to be known as the "Orient Road Racer." In appearance it is striking, its crimson rims and front forks with the fine black enameled frame make it very attractive. In quality it is fully up to the high standard of all "Orient" wheels. In price it is, quality considered, the lowest of anything on the market, it being listed at only $50. which will surely make it the popular wheel of the season.

We have samples of this model already in stock and invite all interested in wheeling, whether desiring to purchase or not, to call and examine them.

ORIENT CYCLE AGENCY, 72 Union St.

Richardson's Market.

People seem to enjoy "roasts." We have secured one for our patrons for Saturday which will cost as before, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 cents. Of course we have finer cuts costing a little more. Then we have a nice line of fowls and chickens, costing from 16 to 20 cents. All the vegetables to be found in Boston to go with our meats, including the famous White Cape turnips, and rhubarb at 12 cents per pound. Butter, canned goods, tea, coffee, home-killed veal, pork; cranberries.

Spring Changes

are about due. You will want new picture frames to brighten up the freshened rooms, and you will want them up to date. The latest styles, in perfect taste, are simple and inexpensive. Many of my new spring mouldings are in and others coming.

MR. EDITOR:—"May I not also say I am somewhat surprised to hear there is any quarrel between the School Board and the 'Board of Health.' I am very sure the School Board is not quarreling with anybody. It is simply endeavoring to" have the laws of the commonwealth obeyed.

Elevated vs. The People.

The Boston Elevated road, it would appear, wants to shut Framingham people out of Boston and the latter are objecting to such an idea. There is now a bill in the legislature that will adjust matters to the satisfaction of many people.

In all the evidence that has been presented before the street railway committee of the legislature in opposition to the bills which would give the local authorities in the cities and towns the right to grant connecting street railway companies the privilege of operating over the local companies tracks, it seems evident that it is not a fight between the Boston Elevated street railway company and Boston and Worcester street railway company but between a syndicate of New York capitalists who dictate the policy of the Boston Elevated and the people of our commonwealth.

We know that the people of Framingham appreciate the advantages to be gained by through service, as is demonstrated by the service we have had for the last few weeks from Marlboro to South Framingham, and if the law had been on the Statue books during the dispute between the Framingham, Southboro and Marlboro street railway and the Framingham Union street railway company, the selectmen could have taken it into their own hands and compelled them to do so at a much earlier date.

We realize the disadvantages the citizens are put to who are obliged to use the cars of other street railway companies connecting with the Boston Elevated street railway company by being obliged to change; and we believe that the legislators will take the part of the people and pass a bill which will put the matter in the hands of local authorities.

If the street railway systems in the cities of Worcester, Springfield, Fall River, New Bedford, Lawrence, Lowell, Newburyport, Providence, Buffalo and Cleveland can take into the centres the cars of connecting lines of street rail way companies, we can see no reason why the Boston Elevated system should not do the same thing, and we are at a loss to understand their opposition to this bill.

It is to be hoped that the outside roads will be given entrence into into Boston.—South Framingham News.

Pockets and Principles.

A tailor who has made trousers for many statesmen and public men of the country for more than 30 years has a curious reason for his belief that the country is getting better. "When I was first in business," he said, "I never could put enough pockets in a pair of trousers. I was one of the first tailors, in this locality at least, to suggest two hip pockets instead of one, and I remember I was called a benefactor, particularly by my southern patrons. You know why, of course. There was a time when every gentleman carried his flask wherever he went. That is what led to the second hip pocket. The gentleman also carried a weapon of attack and defense. Slowly, by degrees, the extra hip was dropped. I think it was the weapon pocket that was dropped first, and of late years some of my patrons have asked me to leave out both hip pockets, and now I have a few customers who want no pockets whatever in their trousers. As a matter of good fit there is no question but they are right, and I have always said that pockets are the cause of most of the baggy trousers you see in the street. But aside from the sartorial side of the case, the absence, or rather, the tendency toward decadence of pockets in trousers is an indication to my mind that the world is getting better. It means that men are not so much addicted to the bottle, or to belligerency. Reform and good fits go hand in hand."

Pernicious Papers.

Boys become tramps in three ways, according to Mr. Josiah Flynt, who has spent a large part of his time for ten years living with tramps and studying them. Some boys are born to the road; some are forced upon it; but more are enticed to it. Of the children of the third class, it has been found that they are largely what the older tramps call "worshipers of the tough." That is, they believe that it is manly to swagger like a cowboy and talk like a criminal. The charm which wild life has for them is often but one form of the mimicry which is common to youth of all ages. They have been so unfortunate as to hear some alluring tale of vagabondage or crime, and are eager to have a part in similar adventures. Therefore Mr. Flynt says: "Let everything possible be done to keep these sensitive boys and girls, but particularly the former, from familiarity with crime. Do not thrust desperadoism upon them from the shop windows, through the picture-covered dime novels, and the flaring faces of sensational picture papers. It is this teaching by suggestion that starts many an honest but romantic boy off to the road." But it is not only dime novels and papers devoted to crime from the effects of which young people should be shielded. Not a few daily newspapers are quite as pernicious. The journals that report crime with sensational details, under conspicuous head-lines, are doing a great deal to stimulate boys of a certain type to become tramps and criminals. Parents who bring such papers into their homes will have only themselves to blame if, sooner or later, distressing results follow.

A Maine paper tells about a woman 65 years old, living in Wiscasset, who, recently deserted her fifth husband because, as she told the court, "he wasn't her style." The husband testified that for eight years he had been obliged to get all his own meals and do the family washing besides, and thereupon the justice granted the divorce asked for.

The Wrong Bird.

One of the well-known magicians not long ago had a queer thing to happen, but the people in the theater had more fun out of it than he did. One of his tricks was to shake a sack to show that it was empty, and then to draw out of it an egg, after which he would always reach in again and bring out the hen that laid the egg. Of course, he had to have help in this, and one night he had a new man who did everything just as he had been told until he came to this act. Reaching into the bag, he drew forth the fowl at the usual time, but instead of the hen an old rooster hopped down onto the stage, ruffled its feathers and strutted about, crowing with all his might, while the audience laughed, and the magician went out to hunt his new helper.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Wily South African Natives.

"Nothing," says a man who spent many years in South Africa, "gives a native greater pleasure than to read the countenance of a white man when he knows the latter wants information. For a piece of tobacco he will trump up an exciting story, and for an extra quarter he will lay it on thickly. I have often seen them at this game, their eyes twinkling with delight while they have been imparting some confidential statement to myself and others; and it is quite clear that they are making wild statements as to these supposed battles and the terrible loss of life which has been inflicted upon the enemy."—

SOUTHERN HOSPITALITY.

An Instance of Base Ingratitude on the Part of an Englisheen Man.

At dinner the talk turned on southern hospitality, and many were the instances related of it before a pretty young southern matron had a chance to tell her story.

"When my husband was in business in the south several years ago," she said, "the manager of the Boston firm whose agency he held was taken suddenly ill while in our city. He was alone at the hotel and I told my husband to bring him to the house.

"It turned out that he had typhoid pneumonia, and for five weeks he was just about as sick as a man could be and get well again. I nursed him with as much care as if he had been my own husband, and when he finally recovered, the doctor told him that if it had not been for my nursing he never would have gotten well.

"The day he was leaving he thanked me for taking care of him and pressed a five-dollar bill into my hand. I was so mad I hardly knew what to do, and I said: 'When I do kindness I don't charge anything for it, but if I was going to charge anything it would be a heap sight more than that.' And right then and there I called my colored maid and, handing her the money, said: 'Here, Mary, is something Mr. Pratt is giving you for your trouble.' And what do you think that man whom I had nursed back to life said:

"'So this is your southern hospitality, is it?' Every time I remember that fellow's sneer I wonder if you people up here really know what hospitality means."

GILD LEATHER HANGINGS.

An Old-World Art That Has Been Revived by Two New-World Women.

Two young American women, American women of Boston, have lately made new again the old-world and old-time art of gilding leather hangings for the walls of homes and buildings.

The revival of this old art is due entirely to the perseverance of two sisters, the Misses Mary and Clara Ware, who are graduates of the courses in decoration of the school connected with the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. While continuing their studies in Venice they were much impressed by the beauty of the gilded leather in some of the old palaces and gradually they were led to investigate the methods that had produced it. They found that in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries gilded leather was one of the chief industries of Spain, where it had been introduced at least 300 years before by the Moors. It is therefore undoubtedly of African origin. From Spain the art spread to France and Italy, while the making of "Cordovan leather," as it was called, is said to have been one of the chief sources of wealth in the Netherlands. This art, like other old arts, degenerated in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. In its last days both materials and workmanship were often cheap and inferior. In the present century practically no leather of this kind has been produced, and it has remained for these two young American women to show its possibilities in modern schemes of decoration.

THE FIGHTING SWORDFISH.

Deadly Combats Are Often Fought by These Most Fearless Fish.

The swordfish is utterly without fear, and will, like a buffalo or rhinoceros, charge anything that offends it, often doing an amount of execution hardly to be believed did not the evidence exist. Combats between swordfish are most interesting, and may be compared to a duel between two expert swordsmen. Such a contest was observed off the long pier that extends out into the ocean at Santa Monica, near Los Angeles, last year, says the San Francisco Call. Some fishermen noticed two big fish leaping out of the water and dashing along the surface. Soon it was seen that they were swordfish. The season was when the fish are unusually ferocious. They had made several rushes and when observed were at close quarters, striking each other powerful side blows like cavalrymen. This was unsatisfactory, and finally they separated and darted at each other like arrows, the water hissing as their sharp dorsal fins cut through it. They evidently struck head-on, one missing, while the sword of the other struck just below the eye and plowed a deep furrow in the fish, partly disabling it, so that it turned and attempted to escape. But its adversary also turned, and with a rush drove its sword completely through the body of its foe and held it fast, only wrenching its weapon loose when its enemy stopped swimming.

Bicycles in Tiger Hunts.

The latest use to which bicycles have been applied is tiger hunting. A paper published in British India gives an account of this startling innovation. A pig, it appears, was carried away by a tiger from a coffee estate at Castlewood, in the state of Johore. "The news having been sent to Johore," runs the report, "the sultan's trackers were out on bicycles by midday and located the tiger in some low shrub within a half mile of the shed. The sultan himself rode out at four o'clock, and after a short heat of half an hour a large tiger was driven out of the shrub and fell to one well-placed shot by the sultan through the tiger's forehead."

THEY ADMIRE MICE.

Men and Women Join to Do Justice to the Tiny Rodents.

Albany Animal Lover Has Just Formed an Organization to Be Known as "United States Mouse Club."

The latest fad in clubs is the United States Mouse club, organized recently by animal lovers who have found mice a captivating addition to their other favorites.

An imported mouse is an entirely different creature from the pestiferous rodent which is the horror of housewives and the despair of grain dealers. They come in the most exquisite colors—white midgets that are a lively reproduction of the frosted bonbons the little ones love; in adorable grays, affected by the Quakers; delicate fawns, fascinating browns, blue, black and French red. Then there are piebald darlings in every conceivable tint, with eyes like jewels and coats as glossy as a dude's silk hat. A bit of polished ivory is no finer than each thread-like claw, and their teeth are like pearls sharpened to a point. They have ears like tiny tissue paper cornucopias, and they dart about like comets keeping important engagements. They never grow up and never get old. Grandfathers and great-great-grandmothers are always mice and are never guilty of the indiscretion of developing into rats.

Of all pets, they require the least care, and a mousery can be established at a trifling expense. An ideal home is a box 21 inches long and nine inches wide, fashioned of varnished white wood. A wire top and a glass front give perfect ventilation, and permits the children to enjoy the capers of the small inmates.

Like every well-regulated theater, it should have a back door where the zinc tray can be daily removed, cleaned with hot water and refilled with sawdust, which will keep it in a perfectly sanitary condition. A shelf four inches wide should extend lengthwise through the middle of the box for sleeping quarters, and a tiny ladder is much appreciated, as they climb like monkeys. A bit of felt used for steam pipe covering, a wad of hair from your dressing table, a scrap of paper, and lo! they are equipped for nest building.

NOT AFRAID OF MICE.
(One of the Fair Officers of the United States Mouse Club.)

Their diet is exceedingly simple—for each mouse a teaspoonful of bread soaked in boiled milk for breakfast, and all kinds of grains and seeds mixed with oats and oatmeal constitute the midnight feast. However, linseed and hemp must be given sparingly, on account of its heating properties. In summer an occasional sprig of chickweed and dandelion is permissible, but care must be exercised not to overfeed, for they easily assume aldermanic proportions.

The club was founded by John H. Grube, of 294 Third street, Albany, N. Y., and the officers are:

President—John H. Grube, Albany, N. Y.
Vice President—Mrs. Edith Kingman Poyer, Oak Park, Ill.
Recording Secretary—Miss Jennie Van Allen, Chicago, Ill.
Corresponding Secretary—Anton Rothmuller, Chicago, Ill.
Treasurer—Mrs. Leland Norton, Chicago, Ill.

All the officers are deeply interested in stock, Mrs. Norton being the founder and president of the Chicago Cat club and mistress of the famous Drexel kennels, where Miss Frances Willard's "Toots" is master of ceremonies. Mrs. Poyer owns the Northwestern Rabbitry, where more than 1,000 bunnies and cavies hold high carnival, and Mrs. Rothmuller imported the first mice ever brought to this country.

Work of Baptist Church.

The Baptists of America have a membership in the neighborhood of 4,000,000. They have a Sunday-school attendance of nearly 2,000,000. Their church properties run over $75,000,000 in value and their annual contributions to good works exceed 20 per cent. of that vast sum. They have more than 150 institutions of learning, universities, seminaries and academies, covering the educational requirements of both sexes in the church and at the same time making provision for the colored race and native Indians.

Safest Place Under Fire.

Every soldier believes that the only safe place under fire is the recent scene of some cannonade escapade. When defending a fort or camp the wounded are generally placed in the breaches, as the enemy are not likely to waste powder and shot on points which have already been cleared of all barricade. The same holds true of naval engagements. Sailors much prefer to sit in some yawning gap still hot and smoking from the effect of a splintering cannon ball than behind the stoutest bulwark.

A Monkey's Right at Issue.

A Washington police court had occasion recently to pass upon the momentous question whether the proprietor of a monkey can be compelled to furnish it with shoes. On the complaint of some benevolent idiot Pietro Florello, by profession a hand organist, was hauled into the temple of justice to answer a charge of cruelty to animals, in that he was utilizing a barefooted monkey in the collection of his precarious income. After a careful research into the law of domestic relations the court reached the conclusion that Signor Florello was under no legal obligation to furnish his friend with footgear, and the case was accordingly dismissed. — Chicago Chronicle.

What the Name Tugela Means.

The name Tugela means "fear" and it has received the name from the rapidity with which it come down in flood. A thunderstorm among the mountains in which it rises will raise the river many feet in a few minutes and a resident on its banks declares that he has seen it rise 40 feet in a single night! The current is at all times exceedingly swift and a comparatively light rise is sufficient to make the drift impassable, while a heavy rise will sweep away any temporary bridge that may have been erected.—N. Y. Sun.

Is Baby Too Thin?

If so, there must be some trouble with its food. Well babies are plump; only the sick are thin. Are you sure the food is all right? Children can't help but grow; they must grow if their food nourishes them. Perhaps a mistake was made in the past and as a result the digestion is weakened. If that is so, don't give the baby a lot of medicine; just use your every-day common sense and help nature a little, and the way to do it is to add half a teaspoonful of to the baby's food three or four times a day. The gain will begin the very first day you give it. It seems to correct the digestion and gets the baby started right again. If the baby is nursing but does not thrive, then the mother should take the emulsion. It will have a good effect both upon the mother and child. Twenty-five years proves this fact.

An Army Execution.

At the army station at Willets Point, L. I., recently the oldest member of his branch of the service was executed by order of the war department. For 33 years he had served his country faithfully. For three years of that time he worked underground in the great tunnel under Hell Gate. Two years ago his old muscles got stiff and his old bones began to crack when he walked around. Then an ungrateful republic put him on half rations. His hair, once a glossy brown, was fast turning white. His voice, once clear as a clarion, became cracked. For two years he ate his half rations without complaining. Then one day the order came from Washington for his execution. A paternal government, it was said, was tired of seeing his name on the army pay-rolls. A corporal's guard was told off to carry out the orders of the department. He was marched out into the center of the parade ground. But because he had served so long in the army his eyes were not blindfolded. He was allowed to look his executioners and the sun squarely in the face. Then the volley was fired. "Jack," the oldest mule in the army, was mustered out.—N. Y. World.

Winter Climate in Natal.

The changes of temperature in winter were certainly very trying. The day began fresh and cold and bracing, but the brilliant sunshine soon changed that into what might be called a very hot English summer's day. About four o'clock, when the sun sloped towards the western hills, it began to grow cold again, and no wrap or greatcoat was too warm to put on then. By night one was only too glad of as big a fire on the open hearth as could be provided, for fuel was scarce and very expensive in those days. Doubtless the railway has improved all these conditions; but Natal, as far as I saw it, is not a well-wooded country, except in the native reserves, and the only forest—bush as they would call it in Australia—which I saw, cost me a 50-mile ride to get to it!

Spain's Greatest Need.

Mr. R. P. Olivia, of Barcelona, Spain, spends his winters at Aiken, S. C. Weak nerves had caused severe pains in the back of his head. On using Electric Bitters, America's greatest Blood and Nerve Remedy, all pain soon left him. He says this grand medicine is what his country needs. All America knows that it cures liver and kidney trouble, purifies the blood, tones up the stomach, strengthens the nerves, puts vim, vigor and new life into every muscle, nerve and organ of the body. If weak, tired or ailing you need it. Every bottle guaranteed, only 50 cts. Sold by A. C. Mason & Co. Druggists.

Does Coffee Agree With You?

Pursuant to a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Henry B. Kimball to the Benjamin Franklin Savings Bank, dated the fourteenth day of May, A. D. 1892, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 673, folio 570, and for the purpose of foreclosing said mortgage, will be sold at public auction, on the premises hereinafter described, on

SATURDAY, the FIFTH day of MAY,

at nine o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage and therein described as follows, to wit:

The following described pieces or parcels of real estate situated in said Franklin, with buildings thereon, bounded and described as follows:

1st. A certain piece or parcel of land on the westerly side of Forest street and bounded, beginning on Forest street at the center of the brook and land of Ernst E. Holmstrom et al.; thence running westerly by the center of said brook four rods; thence turning and running southerly five rods, more or less, to a fence; thence running westerly by said fence and said Holmstrom's land to land of heirs of Adin Sargent; thence running westerly on said land of Sargent's heirs to land known as the Peter Adams farm; thence southerly various courses on said Adams farm to land of heirs of Fenner Grant; thence on said land of said Grant's heirs to land of Charlotte M. Woodward, formerly of Providence County Savings Bank; thence easterly by said land of Charlotte M. Woodward various courses to said Forest street; thence northerly on said Forest street to place of beginning, being part of the "Bradford Farm," so called, containing fifty acres, more or less; also

2. A certain piece or parcel of land on the westerly side of said Forest street, bounded on the north and west by land of heirs of Fenner Grant; on the south by land of heirs of George Grant and on the east by said Forest street, containing eleven (11) acres, more or less; and also

3. A certain piece or parcel of land on the easterly side of said Forest street, and bounded, beginning at the northwesterly corner of the premises on said Forest street; thence running southerly on said Forest street forty (40) rods, more or less, to an old rail fence; thence running easterly forty (40) rods, more or less, to a stone wall; thence running northerly by said wall to land of this grantor, formerly of Gilmore; thence on said land formerly of Gilmore westerly to said Forest street and the place of beginning, containing seven (7) acres, more or less. Reserving to the grantor the right to pass and repass with teams or otherwise along the northerly side of said land last above described; also reserving the wood and timber on the lot first above described and the right to Jason Tower to remove the same at any time prior to December 1, A. D. 1888.

4. A certain lot or tract of land situated in said Franklin, on the westerly side of the road leading from West Wrentham meeting house, so called, to Franklin Centre, and bounded, beginning on the westerly line of said road at the northeasterly corner of land late of Joseph and Fenner Grant; thence running northeasterly with said road forty (40) rods, more or less, to land now or formerly of Abner Fiske; thence running westerly with the southerly line of said Fiske's land one hundred and twenty (120) rods, more or less, to a turn of said Fiske's land; thence southerly with said Fiske's land forty (40) rods, more or less, to land late of Joseph and Fenner Grant; thence easterly to the said land of said Grants one hundred and twenty (120) rods more or less, to said road at the place of beginning, containing thirty (30) acres, more or less, and is known as the "Choice Lot," and the same premises described in a deed from the Providence County Savings Bank to this grantor, dated January 28th, A. D. 1880, recorded with Norfolk Deeds, lib. 517, fol. 239, to which deed reference is hereby given for more particular description; reserving and subject to the right of Jason Tower to remove the wood and timber lying on said land at any time prior to December 1, A. D. 1888.

5. A certain piece or parcel of land, with the buildings thereon, situated in the southerly part of Franklin aforesaid and on the westerly side of Forest street, and bounded and described as follows, viz: Beginning at a point on the westerly side of said street at land now or formerly of Amos P. Woodward; and thence running westerly on a stone wall about sixty (60) rods to a corner in the fence; thence southerly on land of said Woodward as the wall now stands to land of the heirs of Adin D. Sargent; thence continuing southerly by said heirs' land until it reaches an old stone wall and fence; thence continuing southerly across the wood lot and pasture to a corner; thence turning and running easterly on a fence and wall to a corner at a stake four (4) rods westerly of said street; thence turning and running northerly in a straight line to the center of the brook; thence turning and running easterly again by the center of said brook to the westerly side of said street; thence running northerly on said street to the point of beginning; containing twenty-five acres, be the same more or less.

Being the same premises which were conveyed to Ernst Edwin Holmstrom, Charles Holmstrom and James Holmstrom by Amos P. Woodward by a deed dated the twenty-ninth day of March, A. D. 1887, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 590, folio 551, to which deed reference is hereby made for a more particular description of said land.

PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law and all other persons interested in the estate of Seneca Adams, late of Bellingham, in said county, deceased:

Whereas, Henry A. Whitney, administrator of the estate of said deceased, has presented to said court his petition for license to sell at private sale, in accordance with the offer named in said petition, or upon such terms as may be adjudged best, the whole of certain parcels of the real estate of said deceased for the payment of debts and charges of administration, and for other reasons set forth in said petition.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Brookline, in said county, on the twenty-fifth day of April, A. D. 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is ordered to serve this citation by delivering a copy thereof to each person interested in the estate fourteen days at least before said court, or by publishing the same once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper published in Franklin, the last publication to be one day at least before said court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fourth day of April, in the year one thousand nine hundred.

AT PARIS NEXT YEAR.

A bicycle geared to 240 will be sent to the Paris exposition. The front sprocket contains 60 teeth and the rear sprocket 17 teeth.

Jokai, the Hungarian writer, has produced more than 300 novels. He has planned to display a copy of every edition of his books at the Paris exposition.

The Eiffel tower is being painted with five shades of enamel paint. The summit and the dome are to be a chrome yellow. The shades will graduate to the pedestal, which will be of dark orange. Two coats will be required and nearly 50 tons of enamel paint will be consumed.

The greatest musical instrument, or rather musical box, ever constructed will be exhibited for the first time at the Paris exhibition in 1900. Its inventor, Antonio Zibordi, an Italian, devoted 15 years of his life to construct it. He has bestowed upon his masterpiece the imposing name of "Autoelektropolyphon." In it are concealed 80,000 pieces of musical apparatus, which required an outlay of 60,000 francs.

The Paris exposition administration has taken all the measures possible to offer security to exhibitors and visitors against fire. All wood of the framework in the building will be covered with an insulating coat of non-inflammable material, and all stairways will be fireproof. All decorated canvas, awnings, and canvas coverings must be fireproof. All theaters, concert halls, etc., must have iron or asbestos curtains, and the lighting of such places will be exclusively by electricity.

Our naval exhibit at Paris will undoubtedly prove most interesting, and the models of the vessels which destroyed the Spanish fleets at Manila and Santiago will probably be as popular as any exhibit in the whole exposition. Models have not been made of all the ships, but of types of war vessels. They are now on exhibition in Washington in the state, war and navy building. The models were constructed at the Washington navy yard, and are exact reproductions of the vessels, to the smallest detail.

The Epworth league will hold its regular business and social meeting at the home of J. T. Hutchinson, Jr., Arlington street, tomorrow evening, at 8 o'clock.

A special electric car will probably be run from Woonsocket to accommodate the guests from that city to the Ladies' Auxiliary reception on Easter Monday evening.

K. R. Jewett took out his watering cart yesterday, owing to the fierce dust storms that have been prevailing the past few days, but the cold weather actually covered his water jets with icicles.

James McParland was arrested for beating a horse Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock, in Central square, by Constable Davis, and later gave bail to appear for a hearing, which takes place Saturday.

The funeral of Levi Clark, who died at the Town farm on Saturday, was held on Monday morning, Rev. Mr. Sneath officiating. Mr. Clark was at one time a business man in town. He was 91 years of age.

Dr. Hodge's recent pamphlet, suggested by Dr. Lyman Abbott's address at the Universalist General convention, went through its first edition in two weeks. The second edition is promised this week.

One of the most popular conductors on the road is George H. Drown, who at one time had one of our Franklin trains. He is to go to California in charge of a mine there. His friends here wish him every success.

Rev. C. J. White, pastor of the Universalist church in Woonsocket, well known here, and one of the trustees of Dean academy, has resigned his position owing to ill health, after a most successful pastorate of over thirty years.

The Ladies' Benevolent society of the Congregational church will meet in the parlor Wednesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. Supper served at 6 30, tickets usual price. Rental of pews in the evening at 7.30 in place of the usual entertainment.

Among the divorce cases to come before the April term at Dedham are two or three from this vicinity. There is also on the motion list the case of Alphonso W. Buckland et al. vs. Lawrence McGinnis, which was tried in the district court here.

On Saturday evening, April 7, Frank M. Silver of Providence, R. I., was united in marriage to Miss Hermenia Woodward of Franklin, by Rev. I. W. Sneath. The ceremony was performed at the parsonage. The couple will reside in Providence.

The members of Fidelity lodge, A. O. U. W., have accepted an invitation to be present as the guests of Ames lodge of Woonsocket this evening, when the latter is to perform special degree work. The local workmen will make the trip in a special trolley car.

The Rev. I. M. Atwood, D. D., the Universalist bishop, or, as his strict official title is, general superintendent, is expected to preach at the Universalist Lenten service Thursday evening. There will be a general desire to hear Dr. Atwood, who has not been in Franklin in many years.

Some days since it was reported that Mrs. S. W. Squire, who has been visiting relatives in the West during the winter, was slowly recovering from her sickness and was able to sit up a short time daily. She was expected to return by the first of the present month, but her illness made that impossible.

Dean pulled itself together for a practice game on Saturday with a picked nine from about town and beat them, 8 to 2. During the game a player ran into Ray Wyckoff, injuring his knee so that he is at present unable to bear any weight upon it, though it is not expected the injury is a permanent one.

Master Robert Thayer returned to Cornwall on the Hudson yesterday after a week's vacation with his parents. He gave a lunch and phonograph party to a few of his playmates on Saturday evening, the favors being original witticisms in verse, by his Aunt Margaret, and accompanied by Easter suggestions.

Don't fail to hear Rev. Mr. Koehne at the Congregational church this evening, as his subject, "Modern Skepticism," is one that will appeal to everyone. He handles his subjects with such dramatic force, elegance of diction and sound common sense as to make his lectures exceedingly valuable. No admission fee is charged.

The Mothers' section of the Aldea club met with Mrs. Fred P. Chapman, Dean avenue, Friday afternoon. Papers were read by Mrs. Hosie, Mrs. Knapp and Mrs. Barber, followed by the usual discussion. It has been decided to omit a children's day this year on account of the many children who have been sick recently.

The Franklin W. R. C. will hold an Easter sale in G. A. R. hall this evening and tomorrow evening. An entertainment has been prepared for this evening and supper will also be served. Tomorrow evening dancing will be indulged in. A handsome suit of clothes will be given to the person holding the lucky admission ticket.

The new paper train between Boston and New York passed through here early Sunday morning, making the trip from here to Boston at the rate of a mile a minute. Nearly the same speed had been maintained between Willimantic and here. The train was but four hours and twenty-six minutes between Boston and New York, 215 miles.

The town has received a handsome working set of weights and measures for the use of the sealer of weights and measures, Fred L. Davis, consisting of copper measures, brass weights and scales, yardstick, etc., carefully adjusted and finished in a style to suit the artistic taste of the sealer. He will soon be ready to provide dealers with sixteen ounces to the pound.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the A. O. H. are preparing a most enjoyable Easter social in the Opera house on Monday evening. They have secured the Savoy orchestra of Providence, which will give a concert, and an entertainment is also to be provided previous to the dancing. Supper will also be served in the hall. The chances now are that there will be a large number present.

A former business man in Franklin, who is now in a license community, writes to a friend here as follows: "While I was in Franklin I was in favor of license, thinking it would improve business, but since I have come here I have seen enough of rum. I wouldn't vote for license now if I were in hell in company with the worst devils in the land." That's pretty good testimony.

The selectmen Friday evening approved a large number of bills and considered several matters brought to their attention by interested parties. The tree warden was authorized to publish a notice of the law relating to trees in public places. Thomas B. Allen, William F. Buckley and Arthur A. Pond were drawn as jurors for the criminal term at Dedham. The bond of the treasurer was approved and filed with the town clerk.

Evidently baseball is not to be neglected at Dean academy this season, and the nine will open the struggle the 14th of the month, wind, weather and other things liable to prevent play permitting. A large number of the games until the close of the school term have been arranged to be played here. The students have had some good nines in the past and their well wishers hope that good fortune will attend them the present season.

The Messrs. Whiting and their families arrived home from their trip South on Saturday, having enjoyed a most delightful journey. They were in New Orleans during the famous Mardi Gras festival, and in Florida at the height of the winter season, when all the magnificent hotels were full of guests. The trip to Nassau was a remarkably pleasant one, and throughout the entire time they were away they had but one really unpleasant day.

The employes of Trowbridge Piano company have organized a base ball team for the coming season under the management of Robert Culgin, with Charles McCarthy captain. The team is made up of the strongest players: A. McKenzie, c.; T. Smith, p.; R. Culgin, 1 b.; A. Elmons, 2. b.; J. McCarthy, 3 b.; C. McCarthy, s. s.; A. Norris, l. f.; F. Perrin, c. f.; E. Hannon, r. f. They would like games with any strong team, Heliotypes preferred.

The funeral of Mrs. Louisa Johnson, daughter of Henry Bemis, was held on Saturday afternoon, Rev. Dr. Hodge, officiating. Mrs. Johnson lost her husband many years ago and lived with her father, who is a widower. Both have been sick the past few weeks, and it was supposed by them that they were the last of their family living. It is now reported, however, that a cousin, has been discovered, who will care for the old gentleman, who is 91 years old.

The summer program of the Farmers' club will include five or six field meetings and a union picnic of the club and grange. The field meetings will include a visit to the town farm, a place in which all are interested, both on account of its present condition and the future prospects. As the meeting appointed for next Monday evening, postponed, was the last one on the winter program, probably no more will be held until the field meetings open.

A petition is in circulation requesting Congressman Sprague to use his influence to secure the appointment of H. E. Talbot as postmaster at the expiration of Postmaster Conroy's term of office, some time in May. It has the official endorsement of the Republican town committee. Mr. Conroy has filled the position with credit and has been a most competent and obliging official, proving a worthy successor to his predecessor, Mr. Talbot, who also retired from the office with an excellent record.

There was a good attendance at the High school on Friday evening to enjoy the illustrated lecture and entertainment by Rev. Masashi Kobayshi of Japan. He was assisted in the wedding ceremony by Misses Mary Hutchinson, Maisie Russell, Charles Hutchinson, George Sneath, Arthur Stewart, Elmer Thayer, Alden Abbott and Master Reed. The lecture included explanations of the many Japanese curiosities on exhibition and descriptions of farming and other labors in Japan, religious ideas, social customs, singing in the Japanese language and the wedding ceremony.

The following item from the Boston Transcript shows that Franklin is always alive to "bargains" on the market: "According to the deeds transferring the title to the Framingham Agricultural Fair grounds at Framingham, the actual buyer is Addison M. Thayer of Franklin, who buys for investment. The property was sold by auction on Saturday, March 10, under foreclosure proceedings brought by the receivers of the Framingham Savings bank. The price paid, according to the revenue stamps on the deeds, is $5,600, or less than one-half of what the property is assessed for." Mr. Thayer is "mum" regarding his intentions, having several fine offers under advisement.

The community was shocked yesterday to learn of the death of W. H. Gould, many not knowing that he had been sick. He died on Sunday at 4 a. m. of heart failure, preceded by an attack of the grip. He had been sick but a couple of weeks, and Mrs. Gould is also so sick that her recovery is hardly expected. Mr. Gould has lived here for thirty-nine years, but has been in no active business for the past eighteen years, when he was a contractor. He leaves a widow, two daughters, Mrs. E. F. Austin of this place, Mrs. F. A. Everett of Oxford, and one son, A. W. Gould, of Milford. He was 72 years of age. The funeral was held at the Universalist church this afternoon, at 2 o'clock, Rev. Dr. Hodge officiating.

The New Liquor Officer.

The announcement that Deputy Sheriff Fitzpatrick had been appointed liquor officer by the selectmen at their meeting on Friday evening occasioned no little surprise upon the street, as it was not generally known that he was a candidate for the office. Indeed, it is asserted that he was not, but might be induced to take it if elected. It is understood that each selectman presented a candidate, but the genial sheriff was finally selected. A petition containing 114 names was also presented, asking that Officer Nickerson be retained, but for some reason the selectmen saw fit to act otherwise.

When Anthony Connor was selected two or three years ago there was not a little criticism indulged in as soon as the selection was made, but the SENTINEL counseled patience, that the new appointee might be given an opportunity of proving himself the man for the place. In this instance we say the same thing. There are a number of things favorable to be said in regard to the new appointee. He understands what needs to be done. He fully knows the temper of the temperance people of this town, as expressed in the recent vote for no license, and further, he has had no little experience in dealing with law breakers, all of which should have a tendency to keep him up to his duty.

The salary is ample, so that he may employ state detectives should occasion offer. At times they are indispensable, and we trust he will avail himself of their services. It is an old saying that you must fight fire with fire, and when law breakers are using every means to defy the law, something out of the ordinary must be employed to detect and punish them. Again, he will find abundant opportunity to exercise all the talent he has in bringing law breakers to justice, and in that effort he will have the support of every law-abiding citizen in town, but they will not do his work; that remains for him to do, and for that purpose has he been selected.

It has been asserted that during the past three months there have been more evidences of the sale of liquor upon our streets than of its suppression, which ought not to be, and we trust that he will remedy it as speedily as possible. People are watching the new appointee, and do not propose to have their no-license votes made void and of no effect.

A Great Sale of Horses Contemplated.

D. W. Corson & Co., auctioneers and appraisers, wish to give special notice that there will be one of the greatest auction sales of high-bred trotting, breeding and racing prospects within a few weeks that has ever been held in Norfolk county, which will include all of J. J. McCarthy's racing stable in Franklin, consisting of 25 head or more of the best bred horses in the country, together with the whole outfit of sulkies, jog carts, road wagons, etc. This being a special sale, those having good horses that they desire to dispose of can enter the same in this sale upon application to D. W. Corson, Franklin, Mass., who will furnish terms, etc. The date of this sale will be announced in all the leading papers of New England in the near future.

Dental Notice.

I have, since the death of my associate, the late Dr. John T. Stetson, disposed of my Boston office. I will devote my entire time to Franklin patients of myself and the late Dr. Stetson. I extend sincere thanks to all who have for so many years held confidence in my ability, assuring them that renewed efforts will be made to merit a continuance of their patronage.

THE LAND OF THE SKY.

BATTERY PARK HOTEL,
ASHEVILLE, N. C., March 25, 1900.

The beauty, the wit, the deep glance of the eye, the subtle and untranslatable charm of a fascinating woman is felt long after we leave her presence. She draws us by an irresistible spell back to the sound of her voice, the grace of her smile. Once caught in the mesh of her weaving, the entanglement becomes a delicious bondage. It is a joy.

I could but make this comparison when, attracted back from the whirl and gaiety of the Mardi Gras spectacle, I once more found myself in the "Land of the Sky." Here on a hilltop, with one sweep of the vision, the loveliness and fascination of Nature's unrivalled scenery appeals with unquestionable power to mind and soul. The air is so refreshing, tonic, exhilarating, the breeze mild and gentle as a mother's kiss, that one cannot have enough of it. The lungs expand to the full and take in the fair spring odors which arise from the sun-heated mountain sides where buds begin to swell, and birds are happily prattling and nest building. Long rows of purple and pink crocuses, a rosary of summer promises, border all the walks, and little children digging dandelions send rollicking laughter across the lawn.

How many things in life are undertaken with a willingness to endure discomfort for the sake of the coveted end! People who are deathly seasick from start to finish will still patiently endure all that to go to Europe. People who delight in grand views will travel over the roughest roads and put up with the poorest accommodations to secure them. How seldom it is that one can plan a trip which is not too far, not too tiresome, not too dull and uninteresting in transit, not too laborious, not too full of unpleasant features! In coming to this region, let it be from New York, the West or New Orleans, not one of all these annoyances and endurances is necessary. The trains are luxurious beyond words. The distance is but medium. The speed is exceptionable, the scenery is historic, beautiful, rising to wonder, grandeur and splendor; and the comfort of the body, the healing invigorating, appetizing air of these heights banishes the last touch of melancholy or nervousness from the system.

People rarely think that Nature has one cure for mental depression which can be had for the asking. Altitude is one of the most remarkable cheer-bringers in the world. Laughter and high spirits, careless, happy feelings are the product of altitude as surely as that seaside cities invariably produce low nervous conditions, especially in winter. In this pretty place one is lifted 2,210 feet above New York, and this great hotel, the home of hundreds during the round year, while practically standing castle-like in the very center of the town, is, nevertheless, raised 250 feet above it, and is encircled by the winding Swannanoa and by the French Broad, whose stately cliffs and rich gorge-divided borders should long before this have become the subject for poetry and song.

To anyone who, for even a brief stay, would enter a place where everything combines to make one happy, the restful yet active atmosphere of this house where I am stopping will prove a boon. Although comfortably filled, and it can easily accommodate 500 people, the home-like and refined ease of all the guests makes the Battery Park seem more like one's own habitation than a great hotel. The service is so accurate, swift and courteous. Everything and everybody seem so ready and yet there is neither haste nor confusion, where hundreds must be waited upon, that we feel behind us a marvelous system, a clear-headed, scientific management which is almost automatic. Civilization has reached a point where this perfection in the details of life is constantly demanded, and with the necessity arises the genius who can fill it.

A hundred things are provided for our amusement daily, so that nobody asks "What shall we do now?" The answer comes of itself, as, for instance, yesterday, when carriages began to flock up the meandering driveways to the upper lawn, parties on horseback galloped up and flung rein from their beautiful creatures' necks to the attendant grooms, (for they ride magnificent animals here) and guests came out into the brilliant, June-like sunshine to witness a real North Carolina set of games and sports by the native darkeys of the country. Such fun, such innocent merriment as these ambitious fellows made for us with their greased pole, barrel race, sack race, ladder contest and crude but efficient boxing, while the little ones scrambled and rolled over the short green grass trying to secure the dimes, and nickels thrown for them! Just a jolly out door lark for all, with many a reminiscence among the men of school-boy pranks at home.

Tonight in the immense ball room will occur one of those famous balls which call out the invited gentry of the whole vicinity and display a magnificence of costume that proves astonishing to the transient comer. If the mishape of South Africa at Kimberly have made the diamond trebly precious, fortunes galore must be held in fee within a radius of ten miles, for everyone seems to have the king gem to display with gowns that match their costliness.

But, it is the morning drive, or walk, or electric car ride, far into the heart of the hills, that brings the flush of health to the cheek, the depth and color to the eye! It is the exploration of the sublime heights that turn from blue to rose at sunset or are softened by a silvery haze at mid day! It is the "loafing and inviting the soul" in the shadow of huge trees or playing a keen game of golf in the open stretches that renews the fire of life within and bids defiance to old Time!

The society belle, dawdling wearily over her lotions and cosmetics, spending hours in the bath and by every artificial method trying to recover that tone, freshness and youthfulness of beauty which she has lost in city dissipations, can find her physician here in the clear, crystal water and out-door medicants provided by a climate made equable by the happily concerted conditions of latitude, altitude, mountains shutting off storms and winds and the soothing influence of a sky scape as blue and smiling as heaven.

It is not surprising that thousands of visitors from the south in summer time seek this matchless region where the mountains are clothed in deep green forest to their tops, to enjoy the bracing atmosphere; nor that thousands of Northerners escape the sudden changes and oppressive rigor of winter snows and blizzards in pleasurable outdoor life from November to May, or becoming worshippers, remain, perching their houses like birds' nests on the slopes of the Appalachian range. "It is high, it is dry, 'tis the Land of the Sky," and from many a heart will go up a thought of thanksgiving for a stay amid its fastnesses.

CORA LINN DANIELS.

What Is Our Duty to the Philippines?

On Sabbath evening Rev. Mr. Sneath spoke upon our duty to the Philippines. He said: Seven thousand miles from San Francisco are the Philippines, numbering 1,200 to 1,500, covering an area of 150,000 square miles, fertile in character. They are worthy of consideration. After 300 years of Spanish domination, in the providence of God they have come under the control of the United States. What shall be the attitude of the United States with reference to them? First, we should give to them the benefits of our educational system. The education which most of the Filopinos have received is covered by reading, writing and simple arithmetic. Intelligence is the foundation of good government. The United States very wisely made provision for a school system in Cuba. It is preparing to do the same in the Philippines. This is as it should be.

Second, as rapidly as possible the people should be trained in the knowledge and practice of self-government. For this they are not competent today. This is the testimony of experts. But they are a docile, tractable people, and have the capacity for self-government. The aim of the government should be in this direction.

Third, we should give them the gospel. This people have been under the tyranny of the Friars. The result is a people who are superstitious, ignorant and idolatrous. The official correspondent of the Outlook declares that they are as idolatrous as the "heathen Chinee." These Friars have a very unsavory reputation and are hated and despised by the Filipinos. The first duty of the people of the U. S. is to give them the benefit of a true gospel. The new century will open with a magnificent mission before the American people. Without doubt they will be wise to perform it.

THE Paris exposition will open on time April 14, though it won't be any where near ready In that respect it won't differ from other fairs

FAXON of Quincy is after the police of that city for permitting school boys to smoke cigarettes and frequent saloons. He has got a big task on hand, but a worthy one.

WHAT a scare Boston had, to be sure, when it was thought the order had gone forth that Sapho could not be sold in the city. It was all a mistake; the order was simply to stop the sale upon the streets.

PRES. HARPER of the Chicago university raised his 3,000,000 all right and got 2,000,000 more from Rockefeller. It looks as if the Rockefeller purse had no bottom so far as this institution is concerned.

THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR is to take base ball under its wing, and secure justice for the players. That will be much better work than ordering strikes without occasion. Here's power to the association.

McKINLEY and Long sounds all right and would be all right, but the time has not come when the Republican party fears to lose New England, and not till then will New England be given a candidate for either office.

QUEEN VICTORIA landed in Ireland on Wednesday for the first time in thirty-nine years. This one visit may not atone for years of injustice, but the seed is being sown which may bear rich fruitage, if Ireland nourishes it rightly.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR DAVIS has resigned his position because he sympathises with the Boers and wishes to speak in their behalf. His resignation shows his manliness, so long as his goverment shows no sympathy.

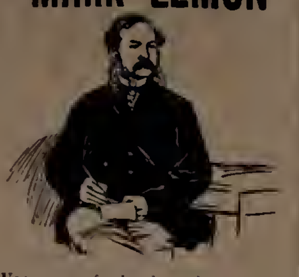
FOR the first time Lord Roberts has been obliged to say "I regret to report," but the utter incapacity of one of his officers made it necessary. That officer is said to be very close to the Queen, by the way, and the mistake cost a good many lives.

ALL Massachusetts is agog over the coming of McKinley to this state April 26 to the Manufacturers' convention, when the occasion will be a bigger one even than that of last year. New England won't be given the go-by this year by any presidential candidate.

ALL honor to our Legislature which had the manliness to kill the proposition to increase the salaries of the present members to $1,000 a year. What it might do for its successors is quite another matter, though as it stands today there are but three states that pay more and twenty-four that pay less.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY GARDINER of New York has been one of the worst of the Tammany officials because of his intelligence and because of his power to shield evil doers. But it now looks as if his time had come, as it is understood that Roosevelt may remove him. The sooner the better for New York, but he isn't the only one.

THE ice trust will now double the price of that commodity to the poor of New York and other cities. There should be some law which would protect poor people and prevent the trusts from controling the necessaries of life. In Russia the government has just confiscated the oil trust because of its extortions. What's the matter with that course here?



MARK LEMON

Was one of the best known and most valued contributors to London "Punch" in its early days.

His wit flavored the paper and added much to what was already good.

Lemon to-day is good in various kinds of punch, and many people think a bit of lemon is a good addition to a cup of tea.

It takes more than the flavor of lemon alone, however, to insure a choice cup of tea.

You must first buy a tea that is right, such tea, for instance, as Chase & Sanborn sell.

Their package teas are undoubtedly the best that money can buy, put up as they are in pound and half-pound air-tight leaded forms.

This prevents any loss of strength; and secures to the consumer their original freshness and quality.

Their leading kinds are Kohinoor, an English breakfast tea, the Orloff, a Formosa Oolong, and the Orange Pekoe, noted for its delightful flavor.

They are all equally good, however, and each the best of their kind.

Sold only in pound and half-pound air-tight packages.

One pound makes over 200 cups.

SOME FIRST APPEARANCES.

Envelopes were first used in 1839.

The first air pump was made in 1654.

Anaesthesia was first discovered in 1844.

The first balloon ascent was made in 1783.

The first lucifer match was made in 1829.

The first horse railroad was built in 1826-7.

The first matches were made at Nuremburg in 1477.

The first newspaper advertisements appeared in 1652.

The first copper coin was coined in New Haven in 1687.

Kerosene was first used for lighting purposes in 1826.

The first almanac was printed by George von Purback in 1460.

The first chimneys were introduced into Rome from Padua in 1368.

Glass was early discovered. Glass beads were found on mummies over 3,000 years old.

The first attempt to manufacture pins in this country was made soon after the war of 1812.

The first national bank in the United States was incorporated by congress, December 31, 1783.

The first temperance society in this country was organized in Saratoga county, N. Y., in March, 1808.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

Germany has organized a tool trust for the purpose of antagonizing the introduction of American-made tools into that country.

Already half a dozen American engineering plants have been established in Europe, and some 20 more American firms have the matter of building European plants under consideration.

Several soda lakes have been found in the foothills near Ashcroft, B. C. According to Feilden's Magazine, their bottoms and shores are incrusted with a natural washing compound containing borax and soda. It is quite equal to the washing powders in common use for cleansing purposes. About 275 tons of the compound have been cut and taken out of one lake. It is handled exactly the same as ice. One lake alone contains 20,000 tons.

The production of petroleum in the world is 5,000,000,000 gallons, of which 2,500,000,000 are produced in the United States, 2,250,000,000 in Russia, 87,000,000 in Austria, 72,000,000 in Sumatra, 30,000,000 in Java, 29,000,000 in Canada, 24,000,000 in Roumania, 15,000,000 in India, 8,000,000 in Japan, 7,000,000 in Germany, 3,000,000 in Peru and the smaller remainder in Italy and other countries.

Our Desires.

In childhood days to get the moon
We cry for all we're worth;
But when maturer judgment comes
We then desire the earth.

TRAVELING IN JAPAN.

Bishop Earl Cranston Speaks of His Experience in Hotels in the Mikado's Realm.

Bishop Earl Cranston in the Northwestern Christian Advocate has been telling the readers of that paper something of his experiences in hotels in Japan. Naturally they were very novel. The guest enters a little area, practically an extension of the street or sidewalk, and sees before him a low platform or raised floor, from which he is greeted by the host with profound bows, forehead touching the floor. Nothing resembling the European or American hotel office is seen—only a little table with an inkstone, where accounts are made up. Servants promptly assist the guests to take off their shoes and then sandals are supplied if the travelers have none of their own; they are then escorted upstairs, without rails, to a ten-mat room or a 12-mat room, etc., the price varying according to the number of mats. As the latter are soft and noiseless they are soon appreciated by the tired tourist. Even in winter the only heating apparatus visible is a box of ashes "with a nest of coals;" the doors are of paper and work on slides, and with a slight push from the outside every movement of the guest is visible. The waiters are called by clapping the hands and approach the guest on their knees to receive his commands. In the absence of chairs the traveler has to content himself with mats and sitting upon his heels, Japanese fashion, or in some adaptation of it. As to meals, "foreign food"—beefsteak, chickens, butter, eggs and potatoes—can now be had at all the leading hotels, though sometimes it is spoiled in the cooking. Perhaps nowhere else are travelers treated with the courtesy and distinction they are in Japan—a reason, possibly, why the "land of the morning calm" of late years has become so popular with tourists.

SIR CORNELIUS CLERY.

Commander of the Second Division of Gen. Buller's Army Corps in South Africa.

Maj. Gen. Sir Cornelius Francis Clery, K. C. B., in command of the Second division of Buller's army corps in South Africa, is now matched against Gen. Joubert, and these two old and grizzled soldiers may fight it out in Natal. Gen. Clery is an officer of European reputation. "Clery on Minor Tactics" is a standard work in the educational department of every army on the continent. Its author has been a British officer 41 years, entering the army at 21. He was given his present rank in 1894. As a tactician he is probably without an equal, and his executive and administrative ability has stood some of the most severe tests. He has done considerable fighting in Egypt and Zululand and has been assigned to special service at the Cape. His extraordinary knowledge of tactics will not be useless in his engagements with the Boers

SEEKING THE LIGHT.

Colored Converts Brought Into the Fold of the Church.

Their Sincerity Not to Be Doubted—A Sunday Morning Baptism in the Potomac—The Ceremony Described.

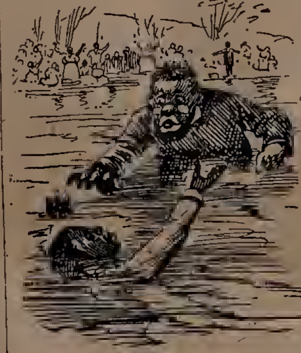
[Special Washington Letter.]

THREE newspaper men were taking a Sunday morning walk with the intention to go over the heights of Georgetown beyond the ancient Rock of Dumbarton, when, as we were nearing the historic stream of Rock creek, which divides the old-time commercial port from the national capital, we heard the voices of hundreds of people singing religious songs and shouting amen and hallelujah. There was evidently a ceremony of baptism being performed by the colored people of our city, because we had heard similar sounds upon one occasion before, although we had never been present at any such occasion in this city or the vicinity.

We deflected our course and came to the P street bridge, over which the Metropolitan street cars run, and standing upon that structure we witnessed an unusual scene, even for the District of Columbia. There must have been not less than 5,000 colored people upon one bank of the stream, while there were upwards of 3,000 white people upon the other side, all gathered together to witness the immersion of about two score colored men and women, who were to be admitted as members of the Baptist church after public compliance with the most important regulation of that religious body.

While not disposed to smile or laugh at things religious, nor ridicule anything of that nature, a great many things occurred which were provocative of laughter, in spite of the fact that these people were earnest, sincere and honestly seeking salvation. While all of the good people upon the eastern shore of the creek were singing: "We are kneeling at the altar on our knees, and we face the rising sun; Lord have mercy on our souls," a young colored girl not more than 16 years of age entered the water and was led into a deep place by the pastor.

She was so carried away by religious zeal and enthusiasm that it required the united strength of the pastor and his assistant to hold the girl and keep her from drowning herself. She was slippery as an eel, and it really seemed as though she would drown herself in the fervor of her frenzy. Several times she jumped into the water far beyond her depth, but was ultimately held in check, while the pastor uttered a few words of invocation and pushed her under the water. While this struggle was going on the people on the bank were singing: "Way over yonder where I wander, angels are looking on me."



BEYOND HER DEPTH.

"Sister Susan is saved." "Sister Bettie is saved." "Glory be to God. Hallelujah!" "Praise the Lord for evermore!"

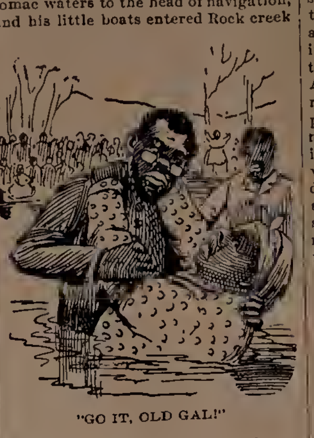
Those were a few of the ejaculations which burst in unison from the throats of the assembled multitude, as sister after sister was immersed and blessed by the pastor. There was one athletic old woman, who weighed 300 pounds at least, who grasped the pastor around the throat and hauled his head under the water, which, by the way, looked very much like thick bean soup. The crying and wailing and crooning of the negro plantation melodies were like barbaric singing of ante-bellum times. One of their peculiar cries as the waters rolled over the heads of the converts was: "The waters of Jordan are rolling over my soul. Glory be to God! Hallelujah!"

Standing on the bridge, as we did, above the people, every word they uttered came up to us distinctly, and the voices of praise rang up and down the peaceful valley so that they must have been heard fully two miles by the people who dwell in the beautiful cottages along the banks of the stream.

The place chosen for the baptismal ceremony was only a quarter of a mile above the mouth of the sewer of Georgetown. There were upwards of 40 people baptized, and there was no foolishness about it, either, for every one of them went under the water and some of them were kept under for a long time. There were very few men in the congregation who were thus taken into the church. The majority of them were women, and nearly all of them girls. When the heavy old woman hauled her pastor under the water there were at least fourscore people on the banks who cried: "Go it, old gal. Go it, old gal. The preacher needs to baptize his soul, too. Go it, old gal!"

Upon every announcement of the profession of faith, the people were soused under the water with a swish, and when their heads went out of sight their heels went above the water, and they kicked and screamed like mad. There is nothing on earth more deeply earnest than the profession of religious faith by the people who have come up out of the darkness of the bondage of slavery. Of course, their educational condition is yet circumscribed. Very often too much is expected of them. It is not fair for a race which has steadily grown for a thousand years to expect another race to attain perfection in a quarter of a century. These people are learning of the same Master whose worship we have learned from our infancy. Nevertheless, it was almost impossible for my friends and myself to realize the actual solemnity of the occasion, on account of the many ludicrous things said and done, as heard and seen from our vantage ground.

Capt. John Smith sailed these Potomac waters to the head of navigation, and his little boats entered Rock creek and anchored there. The Scotchman, Beall, who named the heights the Rock of Dumbarton, worshiped on these very banks. Here the Potomacs and Alalostans, and Occoquans of the south, allied their forces and met in deadly conflict the powerful Susquehannas of the north, and gave them their Waterloo. Here the aboriginal inhabitants of the Blue Ridge mountains came to hunt and fish and spend their winters; deserting their mountain resorts until the warmth of genial spring and balmy summer wooed them back again to the crags and peaks, the springs and streams of the high altitude. Here, only a generation since, the soldiers of the north rendezvoused and recruited for mortal combat with their impetuous and valorous cousins of the south. But the wars of nations and races have passed into memories; and in the name of the Prince of Peace the people of another race perform the ceremony which initiates them into the fellowship of the religion of love, and teaches them that joy is duty and love is law.



"GO IT, OLD GAL!"

That old colored pastor was a peculiar specimen of his race. He wore no gown nor insignia of the rank of episcopacy or presbytery. His long frock coat was buttoned up to the neck; his shaggy, gray-black beard and hair glistened in the sunlight; his spectacles clung to his ample nose, and their gold bows gave added dignity to his appearance. He was not aged nor venerable, but strong and powerful physically. His voice was deep, rasping, penetrating, and his invocations were distinctly audible above the volume of praise, song, shouting and hullabaloo of the multitude. That he was a man of influence with his people was manifest when, by simply raising his hand and beckoning to the people, he commanded silence when every new convert came down into the chilly waters to meet him.

When the last baptism had been made, he slowly came upon dry land, and stood there in dripping garments and delivered a sermon, an earnest lecture to the people, and at last dismissed them with the benediction. He had been in the water for more than an hour. If he does not die of pneumonia or the grippe it will undoubtedly be because of a dispensation of providence.

When the spectators reached the western end of the bridge, intending to continue their walk, there was a cry of distress and pain, a rush of scores of men pell mell into a commingled mass of writhing legs and arms, all of the people pushing and crowding towards a common center, many of them striking out right and left like rioters and bruisers. The solitary policeman helplessly struggled to wedge his way towards the center of the crowd, but could do nothing until the crowd gradually separated. Then it was discovered that several men had been cut with razors, ten or more had been struck with fists and sticks, and the appearance of the individuals emerging from the center of the melee was very unprepossessing. As usual, somebody had started a quarrel, a sufficient number of friends of the participants had reenforced their neighbors, and the meeting had closed in turmoil and disorder. The words of wisdom had evidently fallen upon some deaf ears. The solemnity of the occasion had manifestly made no impression upon several minds yet in the darkness of sin. There are black sheep in all families, and in all churches.

SMITH D. FRY.

A little light work should not make a woman's back ache—

And it wouldn't if the kidneys were right.

Sick kidneys are to blame for three-fourths of the pain and misery in this world.

If all the kidneys in the world could be made strong and healthful, backache would disappear like magic.

Doan's Kidney Pills

Are making well kidneys just as fast as people let them. They never fail. Have cured thousands of men and women.

Read this testimony of their merit.

Mrs. J. F. Jencks, of 532 Bank street, wife of the foreman at the Brown Carriage Co., New London, Ct., says:

"It took five or six boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills to radically cure me of backache, in the winter of 1896, and all I can add to the statement I gave at that time for publication in our New London papers is, the cure then effected has been permanent. I as conscientiously and as emphatically endorse Doan's Kidney Pills to-day as I did when they were first brought to my notice over three years ago. My advice to anyone suffering from either weakened or over-excited kidneys is to procure Doan's Kidney Pills at a drug store, take a course of the treatment, and the results promised will inevitably follow."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no substitute.

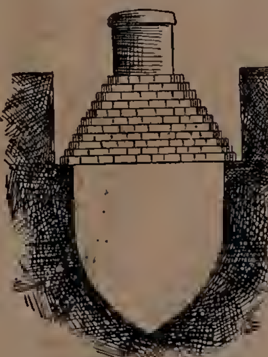
French Swindler's Trick.

The Paris police had recently been looking for a swindler. A few days ago it was found that his death had been registered, whereupon the papers in the case were duly docketed and put away. But what was the surprise of a detective inspector who had known him well, and had noted the fact of his death, to come across him one day following a funeral to the cemetery. On mixing with the mourners the detective learned that the body being borne to its last resting place was that of the living man who was following as one of the mourners. To avoid a scene he allowed the ceremony to proceed and then took his man into custody. The latter explained that his brother having died he conceived the idea of substituting his own name and papers with the idea of putting the police off the scent and evading his punishment.

CHEAP FARM CISTERN.

Description of One That Is Peculiarly Adapted for Regions Where Hay Subsoil Prevails.

Where clay subsoil prevails, and this is found on nearly all Ohio farms, there is a good opportunity to build cement cisterns very cheap and durable. In starting the excavation a circle should be struck the desired size, and after thrown open several feet in depth the circumference should be lessened one spading each time until an abrupt bottom is reached, when you will have a jug-shaped figure. Now inscribe a second circle five inches larger than the first, cutting it down two feet in depth, as shown in illustration, which forms a shoulder upon which to build the brick top. This top is necessary in order to guard against frost chipping the cement, and also to allow a smaller focus at top, which allows the cistern to be kept in a better sanitary condition.



A CHEAP CISTERN.

After the clay wall has become somewhat dry, take a mallet and chisel and chip numerous crevices into the clay. It is now ready to trowel on the cement. After the walls are well troweled down, erect the brick top, laying each brick with good cement mortar, cementing and troweling down both inside and outside of wall until top is reached, then erect sewer tile as shown in illustration, cementing it well. Fill excavation, mounding up slightly, and you have a cistern that is pure, clean and sanitary and will undoubtedly give you no trouble as long as you live. Make it large enough to hold a bountiful supply of water.—George W. Brown, in Ohio Farmer.

A Mysterious Box.

In 1838 Francis Douce, the antiquary, bequeathed a sealed box to the British museum on condition that it was not to be opened until January 1, 1900. Some literary people in England are now clamoring for information as to its contents, but it is unlikely that their curiosity will be gratified for a long time, as a great many formalities have to be gone through first.—N. Y. Journal.

Those Loving Girls.

Picked Too Soon.

A devoted Cleveland uncle took his very small nephew out in the country one bright day not long ago, and his friend, the farmer, suggested he should go out and hunt for eggs. Of course the small nephew went along. The uncle knew where to go, and, though he is fat and scant of breath, managed to gather a number from all sorts of hiding places. Presently he stooped and picked up a bantam's egg. The small nephew saw it.

"Put it back, unk," he shrieked. "Don't oo see zat one isn't ripe yet!"

Puts Them to Sleep.

The wound inflicted by a mauser bullet, the missile mostly used by Boers, is quite circular and much smaller than the end of a lead pencil. When a man is hit by one of these bullets he feels no pain or shock; but a stupid sensation, and a strange singing in the ears are felt, which render the majority of soldiers unconscious.—N. Y. Sun.

Lakes and Rivers.

The average reader will be amazed to learn that little New Hampshire, with less than 10,000 square miles, has no less than 406 lakes and ponds, 154 brooks, 58 rivers and 294 mountains. Colorado, a big state, has 556 creeks. Texas has comparatively few rivers, lakes and creeks. Alabama has 663 creeks and 87 rivers. Minnesota has 222 lakes and 104 rivers.—N. Y. Press.

Highly Chilled.

"Isn't her new gown stunning?"

"Yes; her husband must have been stunned when he got the bill."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Dangers of the Grip.

The greatest danger from la grippe is of its resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for la grippe we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that this remedy is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. It will cure la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

Ancient Egyptian Monolith in New York Is Falling to Decay.

One of the chief attractions of Central park, in the city of New York, is the Egyptian obelisk erected opposite the Metropolitan Museum of Art. This ancient monolith was erected in Central park in 1881, having been transported from Alexandria, under charge of Lieutenant Commander Gorringe. It was asserted that the severity of our climate would cause disintegration, and steps were taken to prevent this, or to reduce it to a minimum. A careful examination made recently proves that in spite of the care taken to prevent it the process of disintegration has been going on. The ravages of the weather are particularly noticeable on the west face of the obelisk, which has a scaly appearance in certain places. This is the side upon which the shaft rested when partly buried in the sands of Egypt, and the hieroglyphics on it are much fainter than on the other three surfaces. Then, the crack which extends from the base to the south side of the obelisk has been gradually spreading, although it was filled with a wooden plug covered with cement when the stone was erected on its present site. The authorities who have charge of the obelisk will make a thorough investigation, and if it can be shown that the monument is in danger of destruction by being exposed to the inclement elements, it will probably be removed and exhibited under cover.

SHELDONVILLE.

Died at her home Friday evening, March 24, Mrs Susan Follett of Sheldonville, in the 89th year of her age. She leaves one son, Homer A., and one grand son, Charles I., both of this place, and one brother, besides a large circle of relatives and friends It was peculiarly trying to the son, who was confined to his room with a severe attack of grip The funeral occurred Tuesday at 12 m. at her late residence and was largely attended. Rev. F. B. Sleeper, pastor of the Baptist church, officiated. Among the floral tributes were a crown of tulips and ferns with the word "mother," a pillow of callas, carnations and ferns with the word "sister" and a bouquet of white carnations. The interment was at Sheldonville cemetery. The bearers were N. Falk, G. S. Sheldon, W. C Averill and B. E. Sheldon.

NORFOLK.

The young people of this town have for several weeks been carefully preparing to present the comedy drama, "Diamonds and Hearts," for the benefit of the band, and as presented last Friday evening was decidedly the event of the season in this community, as evidenced by the frequent and liberal applause of the large audience which packed the hall to the doors In the audience were visitors from Franklin, Walpole, Medfield, Medway, Attleboro and Millis. Miss Stella Holbrook played the leading part very successfully. Miss Grace Bragg, as her sister, was highly commended for her clever acting, as was also Miss Esther Ware. Miss Ina Moulton took her difficult part with credit. Miss Austin Green, as Hannah, performed her household duties as no other could. Joseph Sharpe, as a granger, and Master Allen Moulton, as the darkey, kept the audience in a continual roar. Percy D Hodges, as the villain, was calm and collected, and Arthur Jenness, as Dr. Burton, was all that could be desired. The play will be repeated Wednesday evening, April 18.

WHERE HONESTY EXISTS.

No Burglar Alarms Are Required in the Small Towns of Connecticut.

"People in the small towns up in Connecticut," said a traveling man, "appear to be much more honest than they are in New York. Not one family in ten thinks of such a thing as burglar alarms, and half of them do not even lock their outer doors when they retire. But what impresses me most are the street laundry boxes.

"Nearly every town of 5,000 or more inhabitants has several places where laundry packages are received and delivered. These places are generally dry goods or notion stores, or haberdasheries. Suburban merchants as a rule do not keep their stores open much later than eight o'clock in the evening, and do not open them until seven or half-past seven in the morning.

"This does not suit all their patrons, so it is no infrequent sight to see outside the store a large red box with a fair-sized opening in the top. The box bears the legend: 'If the store is closed, put your laundry in here.' Now just imagine a New York laundry office using a receptacle like that. Why, five minutes after a package was deposited in the box it would be fished out and in an hour its contents would be in the possession of some dealer in second-hand clothing. But up in Connecticut the scheme seems to work very well, and all I can say is that it is a tribute to the general honesty of the community."

COULD NOT RESIST BOOTS.

A Woman Who Had Never Stolen Anything, But Them She Would Steal.

Here is a respectable looking middle-aged woman; 20 times at least she has been sent to varying terms of imprisonment for stealing from shops; an incorrigible shoplifter she is termed, and so I thought till I came to understand her, says the Contemporary Review. Repeatedly as she was charged the pathos of the whole thing grew upon her. Her silence in the dock and her tears in the cell were irresistible.

So we became friends, and she told me her secret. I found respectable lodgings for her, hired a sewing machine, and secured her plenty of work. She was not idle, and was soon beyond the necessity of stealing. I flattered myself we were on the way to success and I said to her: "Your devil shall be cast out," when all of a sudden the old offense was repeated, and again to prison she went. My heart went out to the wretched creature as she sat in the cell. I could not condemn her, for I knew. With a piteous look into my face she said: "Don't blame me, Mr. Holmes, don't blame me; I can't help it. I would if I could, but I must steal boots." Knowing this, I had provided her liberally with boots to minimize the temptation, but all in vain, and so far as I could ascertain she had never stolen anything but boots.

The "Adamless dinner," at which men are tabooed, is a new fad among society women.

TIMELY BOOK NOTES.

A new play by Ibsen will be published about Christmas. Its name has not yet been divulged.

Justin McCarthy, the historian and novelist, has just undergone the last of a series of operations for the relief of his eyes, and it is now expected that his sight will be completely restored.

"Ouida" seems to have permanently retired from exploiting the peccadillos of high life, and to have confined herself to extracting the essence of art from the more lowly spheres of life. A new story from her pen is to be entitled "The Waters of Edern," and is a tale of Italian village life.

A volume that will keenly interest a large and ever-growing number of readers is entitled "Lamb and Hazlitt; Further Letters and Records," by W. Carew Hazlitt, which is announced to be published in London. These are two characters in English literature who may be ranked among its princes and about whose works no one ever tires.

Rev. Charles M. Sheldon does not regard "In His Steps" as the best of the several books he has written and published. The reading public, however, does not agree with him, and its verdict is accepted. It is commonly supposed that "In His Steps" netted its author a very large sum, but such is not the case. It was copyrigthed in this country only, so the author receives no royalty from England, where it has had the largest sale. In this country Mr. Sheldon sought to get his book on the market so as to sell it at a low price in order that it would have a wide circulation.

WHAT THE WOMEN ARE DOING.

Lady Colin Campbell is an accomplished fencer.

Miss Helen Long, who has presided over the home of the secretary of the navy for two years, has the degree of M. D. from Johns Hopkins.

Miss Cecilia Beaux, of Philadelphia, has been appointed as the only woman on the jury to select exhibits for the United States fine arts departments at the Paris exposition.

The first Russian woman ever admitted to practice in the United States district court of southern New York is Miss Alice Berber, who was so honored a few days ago.

The first lady student to be received into the Chicago theological seminary is Miss Florence Fensham, professor of Old Testament literature in the American college for girls in Constantinople.

Miss Alice De Rothschild, who was recently naturalized in England, was sincerely devoted to her brother, the late Baron Nathaniel, and inherited a large life interest in his immense fortune. The lady is very clever and a social success.

The widow of former Gov. Atkinson, of Georgia, has created something of a sensation in business and social circles by going into the field as a general state agent for fire and life insurance companies. She says her purpose is to make a living and educate her five children. She is already doing well and has received letters of congratulation from numerous society women.

Killed with Whole Skin.

You may have your bones broken, your heart smashed to a pulp and strong tendons torn, while the skin remains quite uninjured. This is done by large missiles. In the days of the pound cannon ball it was very common, and even now a large, smooth fragment of shell may knock a man over, break his leg and pass on without leaving the smallest mark on the skin. When a shell glides along over the heart, liver, stomach or any other internal organ it bruises and tears it, causing instant death, but the most powerful microscope would not reveal a trace of damage to the skin.—London Answers.

The Parson Who Milked His Cow.

A country pastor, who was very bright and original in his remarks, attracted the notice of a wealthy lady who was spending the summer in the vicinity. One evening she called at the parsonage just as the old minister, clad in overalls, was coming in from the stable with a brimming pail of milk.

"Why, Mr. Smith!" exclaimed the lady, "do you milk a cow?"

"Certainly, madam," was the reply. "What would you have me milk?"

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

Miss Myrtle Grant of this place was married to Samuel Leonard of Wrentham in that town last Saturday.

Mrs. G. I. Partridge has been confined to the house the past few weeks with the grip, but is now somewhat improved.

Mrs. Louis Merrifield of Crescent street, who has been confined to the house the past two weeks, is convalescent.

One of the double new brick houses at Unionville is nearly ready for the roof and the other is completed to the ground floor.

John Cosseboom, in the Ray office in Woonsocket, has been wrestling with the grip, being compelled to lay off for a time.

The funeral of the late William H. Gould was held on Tuesday afternoon, the interment being made in the Union street cemetery.

Officer Connor is now wielding the paint brush, being employed by Artist Dinsmore in retouching the exterior of the Opera house.

Dean academy crosses bats for the first game of the season with the Boston English High, on the campus here, on Saturday afternoon.

A number of the United Workmen enjoyed a social visitation with their brethren of the Ames lodge of Woonsocket on Tuesday evening.

Excelsior lodge, A. F. & A. M., has been invited by Rev. Dr. Hodge to attend services in the Universalist church on Sunday morning, April 22.

The body of Mrs. Horace DeWitt was brought here for burial from Bucksport, Me., on Tuesday, interment being made in the Union street cemetery.

Mrs. Joseph Titcomb is quite seriously sick at her residence on Union street. Miss Josephine Titcomb, a niece living with Mrs. Titcomb, is also sick.

All members of the W. R. C. are invited to be present at the regular meeting Monday evening. A social time is expected; ice cream will be served.

Mrs. H. B. Haslam will have charge of the Y. P. C. U. meeting at the Universalist church on Sunday evening at 6 o'clock, the subject being "Newness of Life."

Tonight, at 7.30, at St. John's Rectory, a Good Friday Passion Service will be conducted by the Rector with Meditations on the "Seven Sayings from the Cross."

J. J. McCarthy is to dispose of all the thoroughbred horses in his racing stable within a few weeks, and D. W. Corson & Co., auctioneers, are now arranging for the sale.

Tufts played Harvard on Wednesday, and came very near taking the latter into camp, being beaten by only one run, five to four. It was nearly an errorless game upon both sides.

It is to be remembered that it is now unlawful to cut or trim trees along streets or in public places. The tree warden has to direct all that. His notice will be issued soon.

Rev. S. A. Cook has been returned by the conference to this charge, as all his friends will be pleased to learn. He has been very earnest and faithful in his efforts since coming to Franklin.

Several forest fires have been reported during the past week. Some of them have been put out without much trouble, while others have burned over several acres before they were subdued.

Frank Pendergast, who has been employed in O. B. Carter's furnishing store at Watertown, has accepted a position with the Combination Clothing company here, beginning his duties on Monday.

An extra force of men are at work on the portion of St. Mary's new building to be used as a chapel. Work is being hurried in order to have the chapel in readiness for the holding of Easter services.

"Nan, the Mascot," will be presented by St. Mary's Dramatic society at the Opera house on the evening of Patriots' day, Thursday, April 19. The American Band orchestra will furnish music and after the play there will be dancing until 2 a. m.

Miss Vitaline Longua, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Longua of McCarthy street, died on Tuesday morning of lung trouble. She was 23 years of age and had been a sufferer for a year past. The funeral will take place tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Rev. F. A. Everett, son of A. F. Everett, who has been stationed at Oxford for the past five years, has been transferred to Uxbridge. He was remarkably successful in his Oxford charge, which explains the unusually long service permitted him there.

A number from here are planning to attend the annual meeting of the Norfolk County Temperance union, to be held at the Universalist church, Medfield, Tuesday, April 17, where very interesting morning, afternoon and evening sessions have been arranged.

It is reported that a couple of Franklinites recently went into a restaurant in Woonsocket, and after partaking of a hearty meal refused to "make good." A policeman was called, and as they showed no money a friendly saloon keeper paid the bill and let them off. It is said, however, that he did it with very bad grace, but saw no way to get out of it.

The Medfield and Medway Street Railway company has reached the foot of the hill in Medway, and a large force of men are expected to push the road on toward Franklin as rapidly as possible. While it looks a little later than the first of May just at present, yet it is evident that the company proposes to lose no time in connecting Franklin with Boston, all of which will be fully appreciated.

The Easter Day Services of St. John's church will be Choral Celebration of The Holy Communion, at the Rectory, at 8 a. m.; Sunday School Service at the Baptist Vestry, at 2 p. m., and Choral Vesper Service with Anthems, and Sermon by the Rector on "The Resurrection of the Body." The music will be especially fine. The Brick Envelope offering will be for the Building fund of the Chapel and Parish House.

George H. Cook, one of the superintendents at the Worcester Textile company at Unionville, was married in Worcester, April 3, to Miss Nellie Sumner Lyons. They are now enjoying a wedding trip to Thomasville, Ga., his former home. Upon their return here they will occupy Artist Hutchinson's house on School street, recently purchased of A. M. Thayer.

A petition is in circulation at South Franklin to have the school there reopened. When it was closed a few years ago and the pupils furnished transportation to the centre there were only a few pupils in the district, but since then several children have arrived at school age. It is understood that the school committee are willing to open a school there if it is the wish of the parents.

The reception to be given under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary, A. O. H., next Monday evening at the Opera house promises to be a most successful and enjoyable event. The programme will include a concert by the Savoy orchestra of Providence, an entertainment by local and out-of-town talent and dancing, with a fine "spread" in the Opera house at midnight. A goodly number of out of town guests will be present.

The spring weather has a bad effect upon the school boys and some of the girls, and there are a large number of cases of pupils away from school, more or less. In a good many instances the parents are as much in fault as the children, and perhaps more. There are a few cases of neglect in respect to school attendance where prosecutions may be expected, as they seem to be such that milder means will not accomplish the end desired.

A forest fire at Unionville Saturday burned over about eight acres, most of it belonging to the Goldbury Pond heirs. A gang of men was on hand promptly and cornered the blaze. It is supposed the fire started from sparks from a locomotive on the railroad. Sunday afternoon from 300 to 500 cords of cut wood belonging to Francis Thayer of Bellingham and located in the woods near East Blackstone, were burned. The origin of the blaze is unknown.

William Rockwood has just been presented with a snuff box over 100 years old, given him by a great grand-daughter of Jabez Fisher, the latter being at one time one of Franklin's prominent citizens. The interesting part of the affair is that the snuff box was presented to Mr. Fisher by Mr. Rockwood's grandfather, Timothy Rockwood, who died about 1838. It is in a perfect state of preservation, and Mr. Rockwood values it very highly as an heirloom.

The Carter house on School street, which was recently purchased by Joseph Hutchinson, is being entirely repapered and repainted upon the interior, and the exterior will also have a new coat of paint. A new hot air heater, of the Magee pattern, has also been placed in the cellar, and when the improvements are all completed it will be one of the fine residences of the town. It is understood that the tenant is to be Charles Stewart, the straw goods manufacturer, who will go in about the first of May.

The fair and entertainment arranged by the Woman's Relief Corps on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings proved to be very successful, augmenting the coffers of the good ladies to quite a satisfactory degree. The supper on Tuesday evening was well patronized and was very appetizing and the entertainments on both evenings were all that could be desired. H. E. Bachelor and Miss Minnie Smith were the fortunate ones in securing the sofa pillows, and Miss May Fales secured the suit of clothes. Altogether it was a very enjoyable affair.

J. B. McKinnon, the groceryman, has just purchased the Hotel Briggs of the Misses Mary and Helen Modjeska, having taken possession yesterday. Mr. McKinnon proposes to conduct a first-class hotel, setting as good a table as it is possible to set and paying particular attention to the comfort and convenience of his guests. Although Mr. McKinnon has had no practical experience as a boniface, yet his genial good nature and his capacity for hard work ought to stand him in good stead. His many friends trust that his labors will be crowned with abundant success.

A Franklin machinist has a steam automobile nearly completed, which may be expected upon the streets before many days. The machine is entirely his own makeup, and those who have been favored with a view of it incline to the opinion that the practical test will show that it is one of the best. It is probably somewhat different from a steam carriage invented by a Franklin man a good many years ago, which was seen on the street only once. It had wheels about eight or ten feet in diameter and would go at good speed, the only trouble being to make it go where the rider wanted and not where the machine wanted to go, because they were liable to have a desire in nearly opposite directions.

Dr. D. M. Hodge, the tree warden, is grappling with the tree problem in great shape. The laws relating to the matter are being carefully studied, so that both trees and people may be protected in their rights. If the man who makes two blades of grass grow where one grew before is a public benefactor, how much greater is the man who looks to the life and development of Nature's umbrellas along the highway that give the weary traveler protection when the sun seeks to kiss his brow with a caress that brings a blister to his cuticle. The woodmen now must "spare that tree" along the highway unless the warden says he may cut it down, and the blessings of the lovers of trees will make a bulwark of strength for the official to lay up when his soul is weary in well doing.

The funeral of the late David A. Sawyer, who died on Tuesday, aged 82, was held at the house this afternoon, at 2 o'clock, Rev. Dr. Hodge officiating. Mr. Sawyer had been in somewhat feeble health for some time, but had been out upon the very day he died, the cause of his death being an affection of the heart. He leaves a widow, three daughters, Mrs. S. F. Sargent of Salem, Mrs. E. L. Metcalf and Miss Mary Sawyer, and one son, H. P. Sawyer, of Norway, Me. Mr. Sawyer was born in Cape Elizabeth, Me., coming here about twenty-five years ago. He was a carpenter by trade, but old age compelled him to give up active work some years ago and he and his wife have occupied the same house with E. L Metcalf on Central street. Mr. Sawyer and his family have always been regular attendants at the Universalist church.

Song Recital and Lecture.

The Alden club held an open meeting at Dean academy last Monday evening, at which a large number were present. Mrs. Ray opened the meeting and announced the postponement of the next meeting of the Mothers' section to April 26 at Unionville, when there will be an address by Dr. Kate Sanborn. An invitation was also given the Alden club by Prof. Peirce to attend a lecture on Shakespeare by the noted Dr. Crowe, at Dean academy, April 26.

Mrs. Jeannette Robinson Murphy, a Southerner, with true love of the South tingling in her veins and ringing in her voice, then gave a charming and unique song recital and lecture to a most appreciative audience.

She sang and acted negro songs, told anecdotes of the colored people and described most lovingly the old Southern mammy, part of the time in the costume of one. She paid a high tribute to the negro melodies which she had loved and studied from a child and told some of the superstitions and stories which had come straight from the far distant parts of Africa and bore striking resemblance to the Old Testament stories that we know so well. Mrs. Murphy's personality is most charming and the evening was one to be long remembered by her hearers, many meeting her informally afterwards. The next meeting of the Alden club will be a home evening on April 23.

Baptist Easter Services.

Easter services will be of special interest at the Baptist church. An excellent printed program has been prepared with an original hymn by the pastor. The church will be finely decorated. In the forenoon Rev. F. B. Sleeper will preach on "Christ the Supreme Force Over Life and Death." In the evening there will be an Easter concert by the Sunday school. The program has been arranged with great care and will prove exceedingly interesting. The holy ordinance of baptism will be administered. The pastor will give a short address on "Raised to Newness of Life." The choir will render the following anthems or solos:

FORENOON.
"Christ Is Risen from the Dead,"	J. V. Roberts
"The Resurrection,"	Albert J. Holden
"Rejoice, Jerusalem, and Sing,"	Geo. B. Nevins
EVENING.
"Thanks Be to God,"	Danks
"The Choir Boy,"	Paul B. Armstrong
"The Resurrection and the Life,"	Frederick N. Shackley

A Creditable Showing.

The annual rental of pews at the Congregational church was held Wednesday evening, G. E. Emerson officiating as auctioneer. The premiums obtained were exceedingly satisfactory, while the general demand for sittings was greater than ever before. Previous to the renting a supper was served in the banquet room below, about 150 partaking of and enjoying the feast of good things. At the parish meeting, of which Dr. J. C. Gallison was chairman, $10 was voted to be expended in the care of Dr. Nathaniel Emmons' lot in the cemetery, and J. E. Barber and E. S. Crossman were voted in as members of the parish. E. H. Sherman having resigned as a member of the committee on voluntary offerings, E. S. Cook was selected in his place.

Open Saturday.

I have just put in a new line of choice confectionery, fruit, nuts, soda, cigars, tobacco, etc. Also base ball goods and children's school goods, and shall be pleased to meet my customers once more,
A. E. WINGHENBACH,
Central Square.

One of a Thousand.

A large audience greeted Rev. Mr. Koehne at the Congregational church on Tuesday evening to enjoy his lecture on "Modern Skepticism" Speaking very rapidly he crowded into an hour and a quarter what other speakers would require at least two hours for, and he handled his subject with masterly ability. He gave a broad comprehensive view of Christ, showing that he could not have been an "accident," nor the result of a natural law, but must have been divine. It was keenly analytical, showing not only a vast amount of study and research, but also a depth of thought which was truly remarkable. He noted the times in which Christ lived, the people with whom he lived and came in contact, his wonderful knowledge of men and things, as well as the divine side of his nature, all of which combined to make him the ideal man. No truth stands out today that cannot be found in Christ's teaching. Nothing that he ever taught has since been proven to be untrue. What he did not speak his acts show forth, covering every phase of human life and human needs. The speaker was logical, eloquent and convincing, and gave his hearers a treat which was rare and thoughtful. Next week Tuesday evening he will deliver the gem of his series, "The New Aristocracy, or the Rise of the Common People." This is the lecture that Rev. Mr. Koehne charged one hundred dollars for delivering when he was upon the lecture platform. All who miss it will miss the intellectual treat of their life.

Easter Services at Universalist Church.

Morning worship 10.30 a. m.; offertory in C minor, Batiste; doxology; invocation; Lord's prayer; "Awake, Thou that Sleepest," Goodrich; Psalm 23; "Resurrection Morn," solo, Rodney, Mr. Hartshorne; gospel for the day; prayer; "Alleluia, Christ is Risen," Dennee; hymn, "Sing With All the Sons of Glory," Irons; offertory, Pastorale in E, Lemare; sermon; hymn, "I Know that My Redeemer Lives," Wesley; Finale in E Flat; baptism; right hand of fellowship; communion; benediction.

Vesper hour: Cantata, "The Resurrection," Manney; "Hosanna," Miss Corbin. Concert service under direction of Sunday school.

This Year's Wheel.

The dealers are beginning to stock up with the 1900 models and very soon the cranks can size up what they want to ride, or at least get a line on the new and old firms, and make up a shopping list, as the housewife would say, and the chainless wheel, with a reduction of price will command considerable attention, but the majority of riders will stick to the older models. The machines for this year, as a rule, are bigger, and, so the claim stronger. In many cities the chainless machine with the coaster brake will be the wheel of the year. An improved tire and hard saddle are also among the new requirements that will meet with great demand.

The wheel for this year is lean and rakish and light. Its enamel is brighter and it has ugly little ball grips and ugly joints in its handle bars. Its parts are finely cut and more highly polished than before. On the whole there is little new to the wheel. Adjustable bars and small saddles have been in use several years and so have the coaster brakes and half a dozen kinds of plunger brakes. Among the many makes of wheels displayed now there are a few that differ very greatly from the others, taking them class for class. Some of the manufacturers have their own parts and they are distinctive. But the number of makers have increased so much in the last few years that there are not enough of inventions to go around, and hence many concerns which pretend to be manufacturers of bicycles, now are merely assemblers of the different parts that are manufactured by the standard concerns. In some instances they make their own frames on patterns of their own, but the differences can not be detected readily, because enamel covers so called improvements as well as defects in a wheel. Another striking feature of this year's wheels is the uniformity in the size of bolts, sockets and screws. It is now possible to have a wheel of one make fitted with half a dozen parts made by another manufacturer.—Exchange.

Our Easter Market.

We shall be headquarters for poultry for Easter, fresh killed and tender, from 16 to 20 cents, together with all the vegetables, including spring dug parsnips. We shall also have all the meats, and a roast of beef costing from 8 to 12 cents. We make a specialty of butter, 5 pounds for $1.25, also 5 pounds for $1.50. Then we have tub butter from 23 to 30 cts, and our fancy print at 30 cannot be beaten. No. 1 cider vinegar at 15 cts per gallon.
RICHARDSON, the Marketman.

The License Question.

The vote in the town elections on the license question shows a much larger license vote than was to be noted last year. Yet of the ten towns that changed their position on the license question, seven that have been "license" town during the past twelve months went for "no license," while only three "no license" towns went for "license." The explanation of this rather curious showing is that the strong sentiment of most Massachusetts towns is for no license, unless the place happens to be a summer resort, when it is sometimes thought best to have a few places licensed to sell liquor rather than to deal with the kitchen barroom. It is true that the kitchen barroom often flourishes in the country towns where the no-license sentiment is strong, and it is not uncommon for the indignation of some citizens to be shown by an increase in the license vote. Still, when the license vote gets large enough to carry an election and saloons are licensed to do business the year round one year's experience often proves enough to put the town back into the "no" column again.—Boston Advertiser.

Are Your Children in School?

It may not be generally known by parents that the law of 1898 not only requires the attendance of all children of school age unless exempt by physical causes, but also has a penalty for the parent or guardian who neglects to cause his children to attend. Non-attendance at five full day sessions or ten half day sessions during any six months, unless the cause is sickness or something of that kind, makes the liability to prosecution. Indeed, the school committee are very seriously considering several cases where the parents are neglecting to have their children attend school as the law requires, and unless there is a change in the conditions prosecutions are very likely to be made.

Mechanical Genius.

The ubiquity of Fred L. Davis' mechanical genius is again illustrated by the traveling bill posting establishment which he has concocted for George I. Partridge. It is a bicycle wheel, to which long iron rods are attached. The ends of these rods serve for handles, where the driver puts on the motive power, and between them, in front of the man and behind the wheel, are the paste pot, brush and posters, all secure.

FRIDAY, APRIL 13, 1900.

Dark Side of Speculation.

For uncounted ages it has been an accepted axiom that evil is quick and swift and good is slow and heavy of foot. All the world believes that the truth must labor long and painfully to overtake a lie. In the one field of business success or failure, however, the shining stories of great and sudden wealth far outstrip the less seductive chronicles of fading fortunes and ruinous chronicles of fading fortunes and ruinous reverses. Perhaps this proves the rule. Is it not a fundamental doctrine of philosophers that the lust of riches is a great and widespread evil? Certainly that is true when the avenue by which wealth is sought is the broad path to destruction which is known as margin speculation, and it is in that field of fierce struggles for swift riches that the fortunes won most completely blot out of sight the fortunes lost. There is the place where the danger of forgetting what is disagreeable is most imminent and serious. For example, says the Cleveland Leader, who notices the drop in the market value of stocks in such a day of declining prices as the other day was? Not one in every ten, surely, of the multitude that looked with longing and wonder upon the spectacle of sudden wealth, gained without effort which was presented last winter and last spring when the price of securities rose so steadily and swiftly that anyone who bought them, and did not wait too long, scored handsome profits. It is easy to overlook the news of dropping quotations. A declining market is not celebrated in the papers. The men whose nominal fortunes shrink fast and alarmingly do not say much of their fate. Their stories are not the kind that people like to hear. Yet prices may fall just as swiftly as they rise. Already the total value, at current quotations, of the stocks dealt in by Wall street speculators has fallen hundreds of millions of dollars from the highest point reached this year. The chances are that there may be further shrinkage before 1899 ends. It is the side of speculation which ought never to be forgotten.

Photography of sound has reached a point said to establish the fact that there is no such thing as absolute silence. The machine used is so sensitive that it records the lightest current of air passing through a room and distant noises the ear cannot detect.

A Michigan woman was accused a years ago, on the testimony of her maid, of having fed pounded glass to her husband. The courts were in doubt as to whether it was a case of murder or another phase of the servant girl problem.

The get-rich-quick fraternity are in trouble throughout the country, which is, however, an inevitable result. There has never yet been an operation of the kind that did not result in a smash-up and hurried flight.

Through the efforts of the Audubon society, it is stated, a law was passed by the Illinois legislature which makes the possession of any harmless bird, living or dead, an offense punishable by a fine.

At the bedside of their dying father in Houlton two brothers lately quarreled over the division of the estate, and one kicked the other in the spine, rendering him a hopeless paralytic.

A man in Kansas City has received $5,000 damages from a person who called him "a clabber-faced barnacle." Originality in epithet is so rare nowadays that this seems ungenerous.

Owing to the risk of fire from leakage of electricity the insurance companies are warning their patrons not to use incandescent lights in their windows for holiday displays.

WHIMS OF RACE HORSES.

The Thoroughbreds Are as Full of Queer Notions as the Most Erratic Human Being.

"Talking about people being peculiar," remarked an old trainer out at the Bennings race track the other day, "if there is anything more peculiar than race horses I haven't come across it. Race horses, I mean thoroughbreds, of course, are as full of whims as—well, as a woman, and you've got to humor them just the same as women. I remember one I trained some years ago—a horse, I mean, of course. He was a great one, and few of them could show him the way in. Yet that fellow couldn't be exercised in preparing him for a race unless the boy on him was rigged out in the stable's colors. You couldn't fool him about it, either, for he knew just as well whether the boy was fully dressed as we did, and if he wasn't you couldn't get the old fellow on the track. But when the boy put on the duds, why, the old horse would go out and do all that was wanted of him," says the Washington Star.

"Then there was another that I had that wouldn't associate with other horses, and the consequence was that we had to train him by himself. Actually had to wait every time until every other horse was off the track. Then, when he had the whole track to himself, we had all we could do to get him off when we thought he had been given enough. This same one we had to send to the post by himself, and when we got him there we had to keep him away to one side, off from the bunch. Another one I had was just the opposite, for he wouldn't go on the track, either for exercise or for a race, unless he was accompanied by another horse.

"Then there is the horse that runs true as long as he is in the lead, but will stop and give up the fight the moment another one gets near him or passes him. On the other hand, there is the horse that tries all the harder as long as he is behind. Then there is the horse that will not try if the jockey has a whip, while there are others that will not try unless they are given both whip and spurs. But, as I said, they are very peculiar, and have as many whims as mankind."

How Values Exist.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

Scottish churchmen are complaining of a lack of suitable candidates for the ministry.

The grandson of the first woman to become a Christian in Zululand was recently ordained a missionary.

A Methodist church in Terre Haute has barred out two evangelists because they would not promise to refrain from teaching socialism.

The professors and students of political economy in a number of the leading universities have taken up the subject of union labels and their influence on wages.

Girard college, Philadelphia, suffers from the nocturnal visitations of a myriad of bats. They have built in great numbers under the eaves of the central hall and about the chapel.

Experiments made in Baden, Germany, in regard to coeducation have convinced the authorities that there is no harm in it, and that it has advantages, especially in the smaller towns.

Charles J. Capen has taught in the Boston Latin school 48 years, and prides himself upon the fact that, though now 76 years of age, no one can yet call him a decrepit old man, nor scarcely a white-haired one.

Mrs. Collis P. Huntington has given Principal H. B. Frissel, of the Hampton normal and agricultural institute, a check for $2,500 for the establishment in Newport News, Va., of a cooking and sewing school for colored girls.

The new education act passed by the West Australian government enacts that any person disturbing a school, or who insults, upbraids, or abuses a teacher in the presence or hearing of the pupils, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 40 shillings and not less than ten shillings.

TO PRESERVE CIDER.

Subnitrate of Bismuth and Citric Acid Will Keep It Sweet and Clear.

This year's large apple crop has made cider abundant and cheap, and by reason of processes discovered in recent years cider made early in the fall when apples are cheapest remains palatable all winter. With this improvement in the method of preserving cider has come a change of theory as to the unwholesomeness of the beverage. Twenty years ago cider was denounced as a dangerous drink; now it is recommended especially to persons suffering from stomach disorders, and to those of a rheumatic or gouty tendency.

The French have made a medical study of cider, doubtless partly because it takes the place of wine in parts of France, and the result of such study has led the French experts to the conclusion that the presence of malic acid and of tannin in cider makes it of great hygienic value. Some dyspeptics cannot drink it, but in some forms of intestinal trouble it is helpful. It is recommended especially to gouty persons.

To be wholesome, however, cider must be in good condition, and especially it must not be too hard. The old method of putting up cider in a strong and securely corked bottle, along with three or four raisins and a tablespoonful of sugar to a pint, is still practiced in this country, and the result is a delightful beverage with all the effervescence of champagne; but this method of preserving cider is expensive and troublesome. The French have discovered a cheaper method, and that is to place in cider that is to be preserved from hardening a small quantity of the subnitrate of bismuth. It is found that a partly consumed barrel of rapidly hardening cider may thus be preserved for many months. The hardening process is not altogether arrested, but it goes on very slowly.

The French have also discovered a method of preserving the bright transparency of cider. Most cider when exposed to the light becomes clouded, and brown. This change is due to the chemical action of tannin and sometimes to iron contained in the cider. Save in appearance the beverage is none the worse for the change, and indeed a cider that quickly turns brown is regarded as especially wholesome for some persons because of its being rich in tannin. To preserve the clear beauty of cider, however, the French use citric acid in quantities varying with the natural acidity of the cider, usually about 60 grains to the gallon. With citric acid and subnitrate of bismuth cider may thus be kept indefinitely, not only fine in color but almost at a uniform condition of fermentation.—N. Y. Sun.

INTO THE ENEMY'S RANKS.

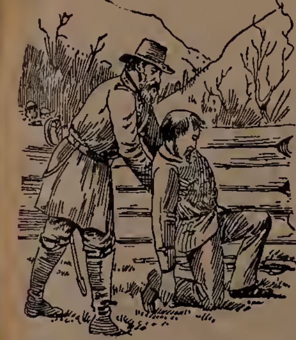
How General Rutherford B. Hayes Got Into a Ticklish Situation and Out Again.

An interesting war story was told recently by a man who took part in a meeting on board the steamer Sylvia coming from Porto Rico to New York. The chief speaker in the party was Maj. Webb C. Hayes, son of the late president, who has been recently made lieutenant colonel of the Thirty-first infantry. Beside him sat Capt. Paget, the British military attache, and a third was a western newspaper man. They had been speaking of luck in war, and the major remarked:

"I don't know whether I'm lucky or unlucky. I've been in a number of battles and in every one I've been wounded or had my horse wounded. None of my wounds, however, has been grave enough to disable me permanently."

Capt. Paget, who has witnessed or taken part in 20 wars, said: "I suppose that I'm rather lucky, because I've had very much the same experience and am alive to-day, while most of my old colleagues have passed away."

The western editor spoke up: "In the major's case I think it's heredity. I knew his father, the president, during the civil war, where he was one of the bravest generals. He was certainly unlucky in many things, but very lucky in not being killed. He frequently led forlorn hopes or maintained desperate defenses in which the loss of life was appalling, but he came out without a scratch. He told me once of an experience in the Lynchburg campaign which I shall never forget.



"I'M ONE OF EARLY'S BRIGADE."

"The unionists had been outnumbered and probably outmaneuvered, and were falling back, pursued by the confederates. Hayes was ordered to hold the enemy in check in a narrow valley until the artillery and supply wagons were safe. He promptly intrenched himself and erected barricades of logs and stone fences. He had Gen. Hastings to hold one side of the gorge and Maj. William McKinley, now president, to hold the center. The night wore on and soon the firing began.

"Suddenly Gen. Hayes saw men wounded and staggering in front of one of his barricades, and in the darkness took them for his own soldiers. He ordered the firing to cease, and ran himself out of the line to save them as far as he could. A few feet from a cannon he heard a man moaning. He picked him up and carried him within the lines and said gently in the dark:

"'My boy, what regiment do you belong to?'

"The man gasped: 'I'm one of Early's brigade.'

The general had run into a body of confederate troops, and had he been known the history of the republic might have been changed."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

DEWEY'S FIRE.

How the Admiral Effectually Quenched a Threatened Blaze on Shipboard in '95.

President Brown, of Norwich university, the military school at Northfield Vt., was formerly a naval officer, and is a warm friend of Admiral Dewey. He recently told the story of an amusing experience which fell to the lot of Admiral Dewey while he was serving as executive officer of the Colorado at the close of the civil war.

"A new officer on board a ship," said President Brown, "is put through a 'course of spouts' by the 'jackies'—the common sailors—who are pretty skillful at that sort of hazing. It is often disagreeable and embarrassing for the new officer, but the sailors usually manage it so cleverly that they keep within the regulations.

"One of the rules on board ship is that the men shall not carry matches. A lantern is kept burning for the convenience of smokers.

"As young Dewey came on deck early one morning, one of the Colorado's roughest characters said to a shipmate who was confined with him in the 'brig,' or ship's prison, in a tone loud enough for Dewey's ear:

"'Bill, I've got some matches in my pocket, and I've a blamed good notion to burn this old ship under his feet.'

"Dewey didn't say a word, but immediately turned on his heel and rang the fire-bell, at the same time calling out: 'Fire in the brig!'

"Such an alarm, so early in the morning, before the men had tumbled out of their quarters, was unwelcome, but in a few seconds the decks swarmed with half-dressed sailors, who manned the four powerful fire-nozzles which protected the brig.

"Of course Dewey, as executive officer, directed the streams, and in a few moments two very wet, very cold, very much disgusted and half-drowned sailors were howling for mercy.

"Dewey shouted: 'Fire out! Make secure!' Then he turned to the dripping sailors, and said: 'I guess those matches of yours are too wet to do much damage now.'"—Youth's Companion.

ODD NAMES FOR NEWSPAPERS

Perhaps as good a name as a newspaper could have is that of the Oklahoma Sunbeam. If it lives up to its name it ought to be genuinely popular, except, perhaps, in midsummer.

An odd name seems to be a good advertisement for a newspaper in the far west, and probably that is why the Sedalia Bazoo, the Texas Jimplecute and the Tombstone Epitaph of other days have plenty of imitators or successors.

Kansas and Oklahoma are prolific in queer newspaper titles. The Shawnee Daily Dinner Bell no doubt expected its name to have a welcome sound to the people of the region, but the founders of the Kingfisher Kicker, of the Thomas County Cat or of the Western Cyclone could not so expect.

The Pottawatomie County Plain People has a good sound, and so has the Hill City Lively Times. The Kansas Cowboy, the Comanche Chief and the Kiowa Chief are picturesque, while singularity is the strong recommendation of the Ensign Razzoop, the Jayhawkeye and the Palladium, the Prairie Dog, the Prairie Owl, the Whimwham, the Open Eye, the Frantic and the Grigsby City Scorcher.

BRIEF BITS FROM ABROAD.

Paris has 142 daily papers.

London now has women barbers.

Mexican dollars are current in China.

India has immense coal deposits.

Piquette made of American dried apples is a popular drink in Paris.

Vessels cannot be loaded or unloaded on the Sabbath at Hamilton, Ont.

Ether drinking has become so prevalent in northeast Germany that the authorities are taking steps to suppress the habit.

The German post office at Kaio Chau, China, forwarded 236,288 letters, papers and packages during the first year of its existence.

More than 400 men and women have been frequently counted at one time during the past summer at the gambling tables at Ostende.

Great Britain's post office authorities are considering the question of doing away with postage stamps entirely, and using some form of automatic cancelling machine instead.

Card playing has increased of late in Britain. The number of new packs brought into use last year exceeded 2,250,000, an increase of 250,000 on the year before and of 300,000 on 1896.

Soup in France.

It is rumored that the French, after having taught the world the merits of soup, are themselves falling off in their love for the traditional national dish. Until the Franco-Prussian war soup was regularly taken at luncheon as well as at dinner and the older custom included breakfast No. 1 as well, but it is now coming to be the fashion to restrict its use to dinner. In this country the soup habit has increased prodigiously within the past ten years, though less importance is attached to it than in Europe.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

FIRE IN THE UNITED STATES.

Last year 6,891 incendiary fires occurred.

Lightning caused 3,470 conflagrations in 1898.

Natural gas was the cause of 94 fires last year.

Friction in machinery started 295 fires last year.

Last year 14 fires originated in dust explosions.

There was no assignable cause for 12,294 fires last year.

Of the fires last year spontaneous combustion was the cause of 1,179.

Defective flues were responsible for over 11 per cent. of the fires last year.

Five fires last year were caused by the sun's rays passing through window glass.

The average loss by fire in the United States has been reduced in ten years from $6,922 to $1,860. The insurance loss in the same period was reduced from $3,993 to $1,056.

The prevailing use of electricity has brought about a large increase in fires, owing to crossed wires. Ten years ago there were only 66 such fires, and last year there were 958.

His Life Was Saved.

Mr. J. E. Lilly, a prominent citizen of Hannibal, Mo., lately had a wonderful deliverance from a frightful death. In telling of it he says: "I was taken with typhoid fever that ran into pneumonia. My lungs became hardened; I was so weak I couldn't even sit up in bed; nothing helped me; I expected to soon die of consumption, when I heard of Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle gave great relief; I continued to use it and am now well and strong; I can't say too much in its praise." WRENTHAM.

Arthur Fuller was knocked down Monday night by two unknown men who secured a silver watch and a sum of money. He was unable to identify his assailants.——The Italians who are to work on the electric railway have arrived in town and are quartered all over the village. There are now 150 in town. The surveyors are at work on Franklin street and the rails are laid as far as the residence of Mrs. Laura Noyes.——Edward Bailey of Montreal, Can., is visiting his sister, Mrs. Henry Morrison.——E. F. Newell, formerly principal of a high school, but was obliged to relinquish his position in that city and bought a farm at Blake Hill, is to teach at the Blake Hill school.——Samuel Leonard of this town and Miss Myrtle Grant of Franklin were married by Rev. Mr. Minchin on Wednesday.——There will be a special Easter service next Sunday morning at the Congregational church and a special Easter concert in the church in the evening.——A large delegation from Wampum lodge will visit Foxboro this evening as the guests of Reliance lodge, I. O. O. F., and will have two candidates to take the first degree.——The selectmen met Wednesday and drew the name of J. J. Eiden as juror for the May term of court.

Try Grain-O! Try Grain-O!

Ask your grocer today to show you a package of Grain-O, the new food drink that takes the place of coffee. The children may drink it without injury as well as the adult. All who try it like it. Grain O has that rich seal brown of Mocha or Java, but it is made from pure grains, and the most delicate stomach receives it without distress; one fourth the price of coffee; 15c. and 25c. per package. Sold by all grocers.

A Little Too English.

Chum—What! You are not engaged to Miss Hightone! Well, I declare! I thought surely that would be a match.

Young Tremolo—I backed out. She was too much a slave of fashion—too English, you know.

"You amaze me."

"Fact. She wanted me to go by myself and ask her father's consent."—N. Y. Weekly.

Church Services.

Methodist church — Preaching at 10.30 by S. A. Cook, pastor; theme, "The Resurrection of Christ." Sunday school Easter concert at 7.

Universalist church.—Rev. Dwight M. Hodge, D. D., pastor, will preach at 10.30; Easter service and communion. Concert service at 5. Y. P. C. U. at 6.

St. Mary's Roman Catholic church.—Low mass at 9; high mass at 10.45; meeting of sodalities and Sunday-school at 10. Rev. M. J. Lee, rector; Rev. M. J. Sullivan, curate.

Congregational church—Preaching by the pastor, Rev. I. W. Sneath, at 10.30; theme, "Resurrection Truths." Sunday school at 12. Y. P. S. C. E. at 6.30. Sabbath school Easter concert at 7.30; special music and recitations.

Baptist church—Preaching at 10.30 by Rev. Frank B. Sleeper, pastor. Theme, "Christ the Supreme Force Over Life and Death." Sunday school at 12. Young People's meeting at 5 45. Easter concert at 7; the ordinance of baptism will be administered; short address by pastor on "Raised to Newness of Life."

The Editor's Mistake.

Editors have their troubles. One of these men who presides over the destinies of a western newspaper is mourning the loss of two subscribers. No. 1 wrote asking how to raise his twins safely, while the other wanted to know how he might rid his orchard of grasshoppers. The answers went forward by mail, but by accident the editor put them into the wrong envelopes, so that the man with the twins received the answer:

"Cover them carefully with straw and set fire to it, and then the little pests, after jumping in the flames for a few minutes, will be speedily settled."

And the man with the grasshoppers was told to "give castor oil and rub their gums with a bone."—Columbian.

His Own Error.

"Did you ever make a serious mistake in a prescription?"

"Never but once," answered the drug clerk, as a gloomy look passed over his face. "I charged a man 30 cents for a prescription instead of 35."—Washington Star.

Her Mistake.

"They say she married for money."

"That's where they're wrong. She thought she married for money, but she was mistaken."

"Then what did she marry for?"

"She hasn't found out yet."—Chicago Post.

No Right to Ugliness.

The woman who is lovely in face, form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. If she is weak, sickly and all run down she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation or kidney trouble her impure blood will cause pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. Electric Bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth, velvet skin, rich complexion. It will make a good looking, charming woman of a run-down invalid. Only 50c. at A. C. Mason & Co.'s drug store.

Another Man Made Happy.

Harry—I have about decided not to get married next month.

Herbert—What's the matter, old man? Getting shaky?

Harry—No; but I don't want to bother about the groceries.

Herbert—Oh, that is easy enough. All you have to do is to have the FALES order team call and your wife won't have a particle of bother about the amount or the quality of the goods.

Harry—That's all right, and it's just what I'll do. Much obliged.

FRANKLIN NEWS IN BRIEF

Latest Local Events and Personal Items of Interest to Readers.

Rev. Mr. Koehne tonight.

It was indeed a joyous Easter.

The electrics were well patronized on Sunday.

Thursday, April 28, has been selected as Arbor Day.

Mrs. Celestia Ballard is convalescing, after her long illness.

A. W. Leslie of Coney Island spent a few days here last week.

From Franklin to Boston by trolley within six weeks? It looks that way.

There will be half-hourly service on the Woonsocket electrics on Thursday.

W. H. Jackson has been appointed assistant inspector of the G. A. R. for 1900.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Healey of Lynn spent the Sabbath at "Sunnyside farm."

Miss Mary L. Smith of Lewiston, Me., has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Mason.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Applebee of Cambridge spent the Sabbath here with her parents.

A select social dance will be held by invitation in Odd Fellows' Hall this evening.

The schools and some of the stores and business establishments will be closed on Thursday.

The latest report from Henry Bemis is hardly as encouraging, his old age being against him.

The directors of the Milford, Attleboro & Woonsocket street railway company met here today.

Fred W. Haslam has secured a situation in Adams, Sutcliffe & Co.'s printing establishment in Pawtucket.

Frank Pendergast entered upon his duties with the Combination Clothing company Saturday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Spencer spent the Sabbath with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Lincoln, Alpine street, extension.

Lucien B. Newell of Bowdoinham, Me., and formerly many years a resident of Franklin, was in town over Sunday, the guest of relatives.

Dean proved altogether too much for the English High on Saturday afternoon, beating them 20 to 1. A large crowd watched the game.

The electric line to Bellingham is about completed and cars will soon be running there from Franklin and Woonsocket. Then on to Milford!

The barn on the premises of Mrs. W. F. Ray on Union street is being torn down and will be replaced by a handsome stable of modern architecture.

Miss Ethel McFarland, aged 12, of City Mills school, has a very creditable original poem in the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, entitled "A Happy Pair."

The Franklin National bank and the Benjamin Franklin Saving bank will be closed Thursday, and the postoffice will be closed from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.

The members of Franklin Relief Corps wish to thank the public for so generously patronizing their sale held April 10 and 11. It was a grand success in every way.

Every one who has heard Dr. Crowe of New York will be sure to be present at Dean Academy next Thursday evening, when he delivers the gem of his lecture collection, "Shakespeare at Work and at Play."

Little Lillie Martin was the lucky winner of the doll given away at the W. R. C. sale. Angelia Whiting, the contestant, also received a present of her own choosing.

Messrs. George W. Bacon and E. S. Cook will represent the Congregational church at the Mendon conference at Norfolk tomorrow and Mrs. Ada L. Rockwood the C. E. society.

The members of St. Mary's Dramatic society have decided to postpone the presentation of the drama, "Nan, the Mascot," from Wednesday evening next to Thursday evening, May 3.

The next regular meeting of the Alden club will take place April 23, it being Magazine evening (original) in charge of Misses Whiting and King, editors. A large attendance is requested.

If sufficient power can be obtained from the power house at Woonsocket Franklin people will be enabled to take a trolley ride to Wrentham within a few weeks. Then on to Attleboro!

Franklin sent a good delegation of the Eastern Star to be guests of Quinobequin chapter, West Medway, upon the occasion of its institution last Friday evening by Grand lodge officers.

The Ladies' Benevolent society of the Congregational church have decided to place a veranda upon the front and side of the parsonage, and appointed a committee to take the matter in hand.

When Rev. F. A. Everett left his pastorate at Oxford for Uxbridge his parishioners presented him with an easy chair and some silverware at a farewell reception tendered him by his people and his friends in town.

William H. Wales is a juror in the manslaughter case at Dedham, where Mrs. Mary E. Ross of Sharon was acquitted of shooting her husband during a quarrel. There is also another case of killing which is expected to come before the present term at Dedham.

Contractor Grant is to build a new mill at Unionville for the Norfolk Woolen company upon the site of the present building, which is to be taken down. The new mill will be larger than the old one to meet the growing demands of the company, and will be two stories in height. The small building near by will be moved further away.

Dr. A. J. Gallison was called to North Woodstock, Vt., last week, by the very severe illness of his father, J. M. Gallison, who was suffering from pneumonia. Word was received here yesterday that death ensued on Monday morning, and the funeral will be held there on Thursday. He was 83 years of age. Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Gallison and also Dr. A. J. Gallison will attend.

The Y. P. C. U. will hold a colonial party and sale in the Universalist church parlor and dining room tomorrow evening. Refreshments and fancy articles will be on sale and there will be a museum of old-fashioned and curious articles. Appropriate music will be rendered through the evening. A small admission will be charged; doors open at 7 o'clock. Come and see Paul Revere's musket.

The announcement of the sudden death of Mrs. J. B. McKinnon yesterday forenoon came as a shock to the many who knew her. She had never entirely recovered from the birth of a child some time ago, though she was able to be about. It is an especially sad case, as there are four children left to the care of the bereaved husband. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning from the Catholic chapel.

The employes of the Textile Company at Unionville have organized a base ball team for the coming season, under the management of Henry Tebo, with Irving Cross captain. The team is composed of the following players: E. Cross, c.; I. Cross, p.; P. Lanigan, s. s.; H. Tebo, 1b.; R. H. Potter, 2b.; A. Desmarais, 3b.; E. Lavalle, l. f.; D. H. Johnson, c. f.; Wm. Burgess, r. f. The team will be known as the Textiles.

Fred. Sherborne, the veteran expressman between Milford and Boston, who changes cars here daily, allowed his train to go off and leave the other morning. The laugh was on him, and Conductor Moulton saw to it that he was later presented with a huge nickel watch, with a steel chain and a long wire nail as a bar. Mr. Sherborne is an inveterate joker and proposes to get "square" with his tormentors.

Easter services at the M. E. Church were well attended. The pastor preached in the morning on "The Resurrection of Christ," a helpful and deeply thoughtful sermon. There was singing by a quartette and violin solos by Miss Razee. The S. S. concert in the evening was in every way a credit to the musical director, Mrs. C. L. Stewart, and the committee in charge. Mrs. Mark Knowlton sang soprano in the quartette very acceptably.

The congregation of St. Mary's parish attended Easter services in the chapel in basement of the new building, which has been put in neat order and is commodious, having a seating capacity of nearly 1,000. The ceiling is of metal and will be painted white. The walls are built of white enamel brick. The place is well lighted and heated and presents a cheerful appearance. The altar was artistically arranged in the usual Easter style, with potted plant, ferns and flowers.

Mr. Koehne's closing lecture, to be given in the Congregational church this evening upon "The New Aristocracy" is spoken of in the Pittsburg Times, as follows: "Men and empires long in the dust were called forth to tell their part in the development of human society. The mission of prophets—great reformers—the principles they advanced, the cause of the downfall of illustrious nations, the ideas which gave birth to political revolutions, and their effect upon modern times were outlined and grouped together in a magnificent combination."

Mrs. E. K. Ray, Mrs. C. L. Stewart, Miss Myrtie Whiting and Miss Gould were guests as well as entertainers at the Round Table, the women's club of Attleboro, last Tuesday afternoon, providing for the occasion a "Mendelssohn afternoon." The ladies of the club made it the society event of the year, over three hundred being present, and the occasion was a notable one indeed. The Franklin ladies were greatly pleased at the reception tendered them as representatives of the Alden club, and the Attleboro ladies were equally pleased at the merit and pleasure of the affair.

Easter services at the Baptist church last Sunday were attended by large congregations and were very interesting. The audience room was finely decorated with potted plants and lilies, the Episcopalians and Baptists uniting in this. There was excellent singing by a chorus choir. Rev. F. B. Sleeper gave a discourse on "The Resurrection and the Spiritual Body." In the evening the church was crowded to its utmost. There was a fine program for the Easter concert and well carried out. Five candidates were baptized, one young man and four young ladies, the latter robed in white. The closing baptismal ritual was a fitting benediction for the worship of the day.

Rarely has the Congregational church looked more charming upon an Easter day than it did last Sabbath. The attendance was unusually large and the Easter sermon by the pastor appropriate and interesting. The music was excellent. The decorations were in charge of Miss Mabel Ray and Miss Caroline Rockwood, whose taste and decorative skill delighted every beholder. It was not the profusion, though there was an abundance of flowers, but it was the harmonizing groupings, colorings, etc., that made it so pleasing. In the evening the Easter concert was given by the little ones, in charge of Miss Amy Briggs, who had labored indefatigably for its success. Every number, both recitative and musical, was given without hesitation or hitch, and the large number present enjoyed the occasion fully. The chorus choir rendered efficient assistance. In every way the day's exercises were profitable and interesting.

At the meeting of the selectmen Friday evening bills were approved. M. J. Hart, Jr., was given a permit to move a small building at Unionville. A plan of the street railway from the Medway line to Emmons street was received and considered. It was generally satisfactory, except in two or three places, and a conference between the company, engineer and the board will probably adjust those points. A representative of the New England Telephone and Telegraph company appeared and asked a permit to erect poles on King and Summer streets and the petition was granted. Supt. Blanchard of the lighting company was given leave to repair and put in some new poles, under approval of the selectmen. The secretary was instructed to transmit to the representatives and senators from the district a copy of a vote declaring that the board was opposed to any enactment which would abridge the rights of towns in their own highways. The matter was considered on account of some proposed telephone legislation now under discussion in the legislature.

Somewhat Confused.

We stated Friday that J. B. McKinnon had taken possession of the Hotel Briggs. On Saturday he learned that a portion of the furniture had been obtained upon a lease and therefore did not go to him. He immediately placed an attachment upon such furniture as he was able for $300 for groceries furnished the house, and A. B. Chilson placed an similar attachment for $500 for meats and provisions. Officer Fitzpatrick served the papers and placed E. S. Mosenger in charge of the house. It is understood that a portion of the furniture is claimed by Austin S. Cook of Woonsocket, having been sold upon a lease. It is needless to say that the Misses Modjeska are very much distressed over the state of affairs, and how matters will turn out is very problematical.

The Auxiliary's Reception.

As anticipated, the reception given at the Opera house last evening under the auspices of Ladies' Auxiliary, Div. 12, A. O. H., was a complete success, and afforded pleasure to a large number of resident and out-of-town guests. The ladies managed all the details themselves and managed them well, seeing to it at the same time that the guests were entertained in fine style and made to have pleasant recollections of the event when it was all over. The hall was tastefully decorated and cut flowers, ferns and potted plants were neatly arranged upon the stage, where also were displeyed conspicuously displayed the American and Irish colors.

A pleasing feature of the affair was the concert by the Savoy orchestra of Providence, assisted by excellent local talent, the programme being made up as follows: March, "The Man Behind the Gun," orchestra; duet, Master M. Carney and Miss Bessie Walsh; violin solo, Miss Katherine Dalton, Miss Margaret Dalton, accompanist; "Fortune Teller," orchestra; medley of popular airs, orchestra; solo, Miss Elizabeth Pendergast; "Bohemian Girl," orchestra; solo, Miss Agnes M. Sullivan; march, "American Volunteers," orchestra. Each number was finely rendered and received due recognition from the audience.

The concert was not concluded until 9.30, when preparations began for the march. This was started at 9.15, with Master M. Carney and little Miss Bessie Walsh in the lead, followed by Bernard J. Callahan and Miss Mary O'Sullivan, president of the Auxiliary and floor directress; the other officials and escorts came next and were followed by fifty couples, the two little leaders retiring after the second circle of the hall had been completed. Following the march, dancing was the order for the remainder of the evening, with an intermission at 12 o'clock for supper, which was served in the hall. There were 20 numbers on the dancing programme and the last number was executed at 3 o'clock this morning. Many out-of-town guests were present and remained to the close.

Miss O'Sullivan, the floor directress, was ably assisted by eight Auxiliary members, and the reception committe and committe of arrangements consisted of Mrs J. H. Riordan as chairman and seven assistants.

Easter at the Universalist.

The Easter services at the Universalist church were of great interest and well attended. The church was appropriately decorated with Easter lilies, callas, jonquils and violets. The choir at the morning service gave some well-rendered and appropriate music by the quartet, assisted by Mr. Shipman, son of the Rev. Dr. Shipman of Tufts college, who gave two violin solos. Mr. Shipman is an exquisite performer on the violin and his playing was indeed a treat. Dr. Hodge's sermon treated the subject of the resurrection in the broadest and most inclusive way. After this sermon three persons were baptized, two were confirmed and six persons in all united with the church. The service closed with the communion.

At the afternoon service the choir was assisted by an admirable chorus. The principal musical feature was the cantata of "The Resurrection" divided into two parts, between which came the Sunday school concert program, the young people acquitting themselves very creditably. A solo by Miss Jessie Corbin was a special feature. The cantata was very finely rendered and was much appreciated. It showed painstaking work on the part of the chorus and its director. At the Y. P. C. U. meeting which followed Mrs. Haslam gave an interesting talk on "Newness of Life."

Mass. State Federation of Women's Clubs.

By invitation of the Newburyport woman's club the Mass. State Federation will meet in the Unitarian church Friday, April 20. Subject, "Arts and Crafts and Village Industries." Speakers, Prof. H. Langfred Warren of Harvard university, "The Relation of Art to Manufactures;" "Village Industries," "The Abnekee Hand-made Rugs," Mrs. Helen Albee; "The Deerfield Blue and White Needlework, Rugs and Basket-making," — Indian Industries — Miss Sparhawk. An interesting feature will be an exhibit of these village industries. The olive-colored federation ticket can be obtained of club secretaries. Round-trip tickets from Boston $1,15. The New Telephones.

Below we append the list of new subscribers to the telephone exchange which have recently been secured through the efforts of the solicitor, R. E. Healey. Spasmodic efforts to increase the exchange have been made before, but nothing of any moment has resulted, three or four having been added at a time, perhaps. But Mr. Healey came here determined to make the Franklin exchange worthy the town, even though his time was short. His efforts have been rewarded, and it is certain that more will be added by further work. Mr. Healey proved himself the right man for the place and he has made a number of friends during his stay here. He was well versed in telephone facts, was gentlemanly and as persistent as it was wise to be in dealing with prospective patrons. In a word, the company has had a good representative, as the result of the work will show—twenty-three new house phones, four offices and three changes in service:

Franklin to Boston.

The Medway and Medfield Street Railway company is negotiating with the owners of the steel edge plant of Millis for its purchase, to be used as a power station, car stable and repair shop. The building is the very best on the line of the railroad for the above purposes, as it is a long building, one story high.

Thirteen new, long, open, double track, air-brake cars will be on hand by the first of June, and the present plan is to run cars from Franklin center to Forest Hills. The company will run certain cars from Dedham to Franklin with only five or six stops, connecting at Dedham with the steam cars from the city. The time between Medway and Dedham will be one hour for the fourteen miles. The track is the very best, and is laid in firstclass gravel all the way.

There is now a bill before the legislature authorizing the joint use of street railway tracks, so that passengers will not be obliged to change cars at Forest Hills between Franklin and Boston. Quite naturally the Boston Elevated opposes the bill, but it is in the interest of the people and ought to pass. The bill provides that whenever the board of aldermen of a city or the selectmen of a town shall determine that public necessity and convenience require, and the board of railroad commissioners confirms and sanctions such determination, the provisions of Chap. 113 of the Public Statues, in sections 48 to 55 inclusive, shall be applicable to connecting street railways operated by electricity or other motive power.

Going Abroad.

Dr. A. J. Gallison has for some time been planning a trip abroad for study and rest, and has at last been enabled to make his arrangements looking toward that end. He will leave here Friday, April 27, sailing from New York the next day upon the "Statendam" of the Holland-American line, disembarking at Rotterdam. From there he will go to Vienna, where he will remain a month or more, thence to London and possibly spend a short time at the Paris exposition. He will be accompanied across by Walter A. Hawkins, who returns to his duties at Carlsbad, in the interest of the firm with which he has been connected for a number of years. Dr. Gallison has made arrangements for the care of his patients during his absence, and has secured the services of Dr. William Elliott of Hanover, N. H.

A Half-Fare Law.

The people of Franklin will be pleased to learn that the state legislature the past week adoped the half-fare law and it has received the governor's sanction. The act provides that "the rates of fare to be charged by the street or elevated railway companies in this commonwealth, for the transportation of scholars of public schools between any given point necessary for them to ride to and from the schoolhouses in which they attend school, and their homes, whether said schoolhouses are located in the city or town in which said scholars reside or in any other city or town, shall not exceed one-half the regular fare charged by said street or elevated railway company for the transportation of passengers between said points. The tickets for the transportation of said scholars shall be sold in lots of ten each, and shall be received on said street and elevated railways on the days on which said schools are in session. Any railway company violating this act by refusing to transport a scholar or to furnish a package of the tickets as aforesaid shall forfeit the sum of $25 for each offence." The last section of the act exempts the Boston elevated railway from its provisions.

The United States Census.

The census enumerator of the United States will begin June 1, and is to be completed in a month. The questions to be asked relate to name, age, condition, as married, single, etc., native or foreign birth, naturalization, birthplace and nativity of parents, occupation, time employed during the past year, and regarding ownership of a home, the records all to be made in ink on large sheets so they can be bound in volumes. Each applicant for the position of enumerator has a test card, which he is required to fill out and send to the supervisor. The test contains several of what are sometimes called catch questions, designed, probably, to test the judgment of the applicant, as they are capable, under certain conditions which may be assumed, of different answers. In Franklin no great increase of population over the census of 1895 is looked for, but the number will probably not vary a great deal one way or the other. After the census of 1895 it was estimated that the population decreased for a time when business was dull, but that falling off has been made up by a gain during the past year.

A movement is on foot to put a one-half cent coin in general use in the United States. Several suggestions have been made to the government, and last week a document was presented, signed by the heads of the big department stores of New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Pittsburg, showing the need for this money in making change where articles are sold at 3 1-2 cents, 7 1-2 cents, 12 1-2 cents and at similar prices. The half-cent coin has been in use in Chicago for the last two years, and last week one of the New York stores ordered 500,000 one-half cent coins. These coins are to be made of copper, size one-half inch in diameter, or just two thirds the regular size of one-cent piece. So far the United States government has nothing to do with issuing this new money.

Men with Schemes.

Men who have been prominent in public life and have retired to the fields of quiet business are in constant demand by the man with a scheme, says the Chicago News. If the promoter can only secure the name of some well-known man in connection with his money-maker, either as stockholder, director, or president, the public is ready to take an interest. Ex-Mayor George B. Swift was talking with a party of friends in the rotunda of the Great Northern and telling of the army of men with schemes who called upon him. "Before Col. G. R. Davis died we were discussing this ever-present man," said Mr. Swift. "The colonel had them call upon him by the score. It is rather funny to listen to some of their stories. All he wants is just your name, not a cent of money, you know. He will make you president of the company, which will make anywhere from $2[illegible] to $1,0[illegible]0 a year. You do not need to sign a paper, all you need do is to draw your pay and spend the money. Sometimes I find myself nearly believing these fellows, as their yarns are so good."

Things Looked Dark.

A very agreeable talker, an educated colored man, addressed the students at Adelbert college the other day, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. He talked interestingly about his experience in his chosen profession, that of a lawyer, asserting that on but one occasion he ever met with discourtesy at the hands of white men during his legal experience in his native state, Virginia. This happened in a backwoods hamlet, where the general ignorance of the inhabitants was some excuse for their boorishness. In the course of his remarks he perpetrated an unconscious humor that brought a smile to the students' faces, and drew a laugh from the speaker himself as soon as he realized the suggestion in his statement. "I started out in my profession with somewhat gloomy anticipations," he said. "When I reached Alexandria, where there were 7,000 colored people, everything looked dark." It was at this point that the smile ran around.

Several days ago Dr. Alvey, says the Morganfield (Ky.) Sun, of Waverly, drove to town in a buggy. Upon his arrival here he discovered that one of his hens had ridden all the way with him in the back end of the buggy. The doctor had to go further down the road, so he "shooed" the hen out of the vehicle and left her here. Dr. Alvey was gone all that day and night and a part of the next. The hen, in the meantime, found her way to Jailer Snodgrass' chicken coop, where she spent the night. When Dr. Alvey returned to Morganfield the next day he put his horse in a livery stable, and, of course, the buggy belonging to the medicine man was only one of a large number about the stable. But, strange to say, that old hen seemed to know when the doctor returned, and, with a remarkable display of animal instinct, picked out his buggy, got back into her place and waited for the doctor to start back home.

A barn in Aroostook, Me., has long gone unshingled because the farmer who owned it was too infirm to climb to the roof, while one of his sons had gone to war in the Philippines and the other to the Klondike. The other day, however, the farmer's only daughter came home from the normal school and shingled the barn as well as any man in town could have done, and she didn't once pound her fingers with the hammer, either.

FISHING IN THE WEST.

A Favorite Place with Former President Harrison for Casting a Line.

Such streams as the Fox river of Illinois, the Kankakee, the White or the Tippecanoe of Indiana, afford at times even to-day very good sport to the fly rod.

Ex-President Harrison and a few chosen friends often take a fly-fishing trip for bass along the Tippecanoe, which was once a famous bass water and even yet is not quite shorn of its ancient glory. These gentlemen would as soon think of grand larceny or highway robbery as to entertain the idea of using anything but the fly on the small mouths of the Tippecanoe. This stream may be waded on many of its best reaches, though it is best to take along a boat, and some anglers prefer to fish it from a boat all the way. The bass of this river are very good fighters, and show the leaping instinct of the small-mouth species, sometimes springing out higher than one's head as one stands playing the fish. The average run is a pound or thereabouts, though often one will take a fish very much heavier. The bucktail flies are good on the Tippecanoe, though this seems to be also a water where one may with profit indulge in his notions for bright-colored millinery in laying out one's day's supply of flies. The Ferguson and the silver doctor are sometimes used effectively, and the Seth Green, with a cinnamon wing, has been found good upon occasion, though as to these matters it is not well to set forth dogma. There is no ultimate truth discoverable in the matter of bass flies in stream fishing. This method we may as well call "broad fishing," since it is followed at all times of the day and on all parts of the water. This is late spring and summer fishing, when the bass are lying about in the weedy pockets, under logs, or close to sharp banks, and this method, of course, ends when the cold weather comes and the bass begin to congregate in the deep holes.

The Fox river in the summer time offers an occasional evening of good fly fishing at such points as the reefs near Clintonville or Elgin, when the bass are taking the natural fly in the cooler part of the day, and on this river as well as the Kankakee one may now and then pick out a bass from midstream even in the middle of the day, while the fish are lying pretty well down and only looking up lazily at the panorama which sails past them outlined against the sky. This sort of fly fishing, not restricted absolutely to any part of the water, but intended for any fish that may happen to be lying about loose, is the most common form of fly fishing, and is sometimes very successful when the bass are in the humor.—Chicago Record.

Anti-Climax in a Mine.

Prof. Weed, the noted geologist, recently had a thrilling and hair-raising experience in Butte. He was descending a mine on a ladder and when several hundred feet down the ladder parted, leaving him suspended in the dark. He hung to the round with all the tenacity his being was capable of, determined to strain the very last drop of his vitality in the hope that succor would come. He cried out for help, but the deep, dark walls returned his voice unanswered. His whole life came back to him in vivid retrospection; perspiration dripped from his forehead as he realized that only for a short time could he withstand the awful strain. And then he dropped. Four inches below him he struck a heavy body, which afterward proved to be the globe.—Chicago Chronicle.

ACCIDENTS TO BANKNOTES.

Used as Gaslighters, Chewed by Dogs and Boiled with Cabbage.

"While it cannot be stated that it is an American habit to light lamps and gas with money," explained an official of the redemption division of the treasury department to a Star reporter, "there are a number who appear actually to have money to burn, and who now and then burn it. There are more money burners, too, than come to the front and demand a redemption of their partly destroyed money, for some people hesitate before they are willing to appear in such an indefensible position. I don't want to be understood as stating that it occurs every day, for that would probably be stretching it somewhat, but it is a fact that it occurs many more times than would be supposed. A case of the kind came to the division last week, where a fellow lighted a match at the door of his room and from that lighted what he supposed was a piece of paper which he had in his pocket. He started with the lighted paper to find the gas jet. He found it, and as he blew out his lighted paper he ascertained, to his surprise and disgust, that his taper was a ten-dollar bill, more than half of which had been burned. In his communication to the secretary of the treasury, to whom he was advised to write, he admitted that he was a fool and deserved a kick instead of anything else, but said as grass was rather short with him he would have to appeal for redemption. He furnished the necessary affidavits which under the law have to be filed in such cases, and a new bill was sent him for the half-burned note which he sent in for redemption. Lots of times people burn money, but make no claim for redemption, supposing that they have no redress in the matter. But the treasury department does not as a rule hunt up trouble, so unless the claim is made none is suggested.

"I had a case somewhat in the same line recently, and there are frequent similar occurrences, as where a one-dollar dog puppy ate up two-thirds of a five-dollar note. 'The pup was of a playful disposition,' wrote the man who owned it, 'and, though I saw him playing with the note, I did not recognize it as money. But he won't play any more in my back-yard.' Later on, when the puppy got tired playing with it, the owner discovered that the dog had been amusing himself with a note which had by accident fallen on the floor. The affidavits in the case were very amusing, but the man got his remnant of a note redeemed at its full value. The lamp and gas-lighting people are by great odds in the majority. Out of a number of such cases the percentage of women sufferers is so small that it can almost be said they don't lose money by using it as lighters. I knew of a woman who boiled almost out of existence several bills which by some means got in the folds of the leaves of a head of cabbage. The money dropped into the basket on her way back from the market. The notes were pretty well wrecked, for the cabbage was being cut up when they were discovered, but there was enough left on which to base a redemption."—Washington Star.

Some of the meanest men on the face of the earth live in this town.

We have the patience of a saint, but we can't live on patience and acorns.

We've got to have some money on subscription, and we've got to have it right now.

Uncle Dave Billingsworth paid us one dollar for the Blizzard yesterday. Uncle Dave will go to Heaven.

Rev. Hathaway has our thanks for a gallon of the best sorghum molasses we ever sweetened our inside with.

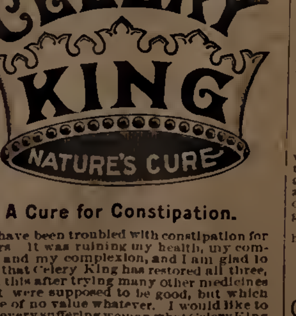
Link Bumblethorn paid $75 yesterday for a match for his sorrel filly, and he has a team now that can do its mile in 2:97.

The Hawville Clarion has a good pair of shears, but no pen and ink. It clips our editorials right along and never gives credit.

We will give the Blizzard for a year to the person who brings us the biggest pumpkin. Some small-minded people say we do this in order to get a winter's feed for our cow for nothing. This is a stupendous falsehood. We haven't any cow. We can't afford to keep a cow. We want the pumpkins for our own feed.



A Cure for Constipation.

I have been troubled with constipation for years. It was ruining my health, my comfort and my complexion, and I am glad to say that Celery King has restored all three, and this after trying many other medicines that were supposed to be good, but which were of no value whatever. I would like to tell every suffering woman what Celery King has done for me.—Nellie Gould, Medina, Ohio.

An ex-judge is cashier of a certain bank. One day recently he refused to cash a check offered by a stranger. "The check is all right," he said, "but the evidence you offer in identifying yourself as the person to whose order it is drawn is scarcely sufficient." "I've known you to hang a man on less evidence, judge," was the stranger's response. "Quite likely," replied the ex-judge; "but when it comes to letting go of cold cash we have to be careful."

Dangers of the Grip.

The greatest danger from la grippe is of its resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for la grippe we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that this remedy is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. It will cure la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

COLOR SCHEMES IN THE HOME.

Much can be done to promote health and a happy, cheerful disposition by a proper regard to the tone in which the rooms of a home are furnished.

If a room be large and it is desired to make it appear smaller and more cozy it can be done by having the ceiling and walls decorated in a dark shade and the draperies in harmony.

If blue be the predominating tone of a room it will have the effect of making the room look larger than it is, and it can be introduced in some degree in a small room for that purpose. It must be used judiciously, however, for if it be in excess or of a wrong shade it will give a room a cold, cheerless appearance.

Red makes no difference in regard to size, but it always gives the idea of warmth and comfort. It will always accentuate any tint of green that lurks in the other colors employed. Red in some tone or another might be used to advantage in a room that was not lighted from without, or in one that had a north light. On the other hand, green should never be used under such conditions, but only where a room is powerfully lighted, or a flood of sunshine penetrates. This serves to light up the yellow tint that would be otherwise inappreciable and gives a cheerful color tone.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Li Hung Chang has a $100,000 collection of furs.

Miss Rebecca Lash celebrated her ninety-sixth birthday with a reception to the people of Chelsea, Mass., to whom she related personal recollections of Paul Revere.

Fred J. Mauren, who looks after Uncle Sam's mails at Portland, Mich., is the youngest postmaster of the presidential class in the United States, being only 30 years old.

When Edward J. Victory asked to be excused from serving as a juror in New York he gave as his reason that he is a man of bad character and that he had been arrested three times.

One of Mr. Chamberlain's favorite recreations is to hear his daughters read French aloud. He is very particular in the choice of their reading and likes to be consulted about every new book that comes into their hands. He is also very strict in the matter of their theatrical attendance, and will never allow them to witness any play to which the most fastidious taste could object.

Some one asked a friend of Alfred Beit how much the South African billionaire was worth. "He probably could not get out more than a thousand millions now," was the response, "but if he would let the price of rough diamonds go below 28 to 32 shillings per carat no one knows how much he would realize. For no one else except Rhodes knows how many barrels of diamonds they have salted away down there to keep the market steady."

An unusual marriage was witnessed at Perry, O. T. A swollen creek separated Albert Perry, a cowboy, from Emma Moyer, about the time they were to be married. The clergyman was with him. The groom plunged in and swam the creek, but the clergyman feared to follow. The happy couple and their friends assembled on one side of the stream and the clergyman howled his questions and benediction from the other side, and thus they were married.

AMERICAN TIMBER.

One and one-quarter million square miles is the estimate of the timber area of Canada, as given by the United States consul general at Montreal.

One of the most valuable timber trees in the great northwest, the red cedar, grows to a maximum height of 300 feet and a diameter of 14 feet.

Some historical trees have lately come into the New York lumber market from the Wilderness battlefield of the civil war. The bills of lading showed that the trees had been felled and the lumber sawed there. In some of the planks the minie balls can be seen plainly, the wood directly adjacent to the bullets being discolored or rotten, but not enough to damage the lumber.

The portion of the state of Washington west of the summit of the Cascade range is covered with the heaviest continuous belt of forest growth in the United States. This forest extends over the slopes of the Cascade and Coast ranges, and occupies the entire drift plain surrounding the waters of Puget sound. Excepting the highest mountain peaks and the sand dunes of the coast, which are treeless, the valleys of the Cowlitz and Chehalis rivers, which are dotted with small oaks and other deciduous trees, and the stunted yellow pines occupying with open growth the barren Steilacoom plain, all of western Washington is covered with a magnificent forest.

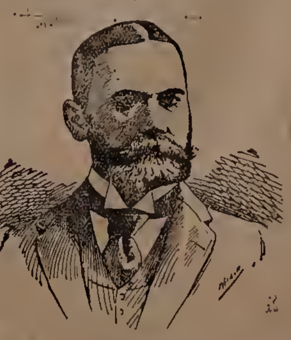
NEXT TO PRESIDENT.

Death of Vice President Hobart Elevates John Hay.

In the Event of McKinley's Passing Away the Secretary of State Would Become the Nation's Chief Executive.

John Hay, who, by reason of his position of secretary of state, would become president of the United States in the event of Mr. McKinley's death, is a man of wide experience and attractive personality. He was born in Salem, Ind., 61 years ago, but spent most of his boyhood days in Urbana, Ill. His father was the leading physician of that section of Illinois, and stories are still told about the "old doctor" by the older residents of Champaign and adjoining counties. The doctor and his sorrel horse were famous for 50 miles in any direction from Urbana. He was a man of affairs and gave his sons fine educations and a good start in the world. John Hay graduated at Brown university, and early in 1861 was admitted to the practice of law in Springfield. Won by the young man's pleasing address and by his evident strength of character, President Lincoln asked him to go to Washington as his private secretary. Thus, at the age of 23, he was thrown into the midst of mighty events—the most important in the nation's history.

John Hay remained with President Lincoln until the assassination. He then tried the army for a time, but soon went abroad, spending two or three years as secretary of the American legations at Vienna and Madrid respectively. In 1870 he became editorial writer on the New York Tribune, which position he held for five years. In 1875 he removed to Cleveland, O., where he married the daughter of Amasa Stone, the king of lake navigation and iron interests. He was active in politics for several years and in 1879 was appointed assistant secretary of state, a place he held about 18 months. He was appointed ambassador to Great Britain by President McKinley early in 1897 and in the autumn of 1898 was invited to become secretary of state. He is now in line of succession for president. It will be seen that for nearly 40 years Mr. Hay has been in the whirl of national politics and diplomacy. He is equipped by nature and training for the discharge of the duties of any office to which he might be called by choice or circumstances.



SECRETARY OF STATE HAY.
(Official Next in Succession to President McKinley.)

Secretary Hay lives in a fine mansion on the north side of Lafayette square, fronting the white house and two short blocks distance therefrom. It is a four-story brick and stone house surrounded by generous grounds. Across Sixteenth street is situated St. John's church, the fashionable Episcopal establishment in Washington. On the north corner of the square is the famous Corcoran mansion, occupied for many years by the celebrated philanthropist of that name. The Hays have been social leaders in the capital for 20 years or more. They are very popular there. Personally Secretary Hay is affable and courteous under all circumstances. He is approachable and easy without inviting familiarity.

The elder Miss Hay is what is known as a new girl. She writes and is athletic, but she is also quite a society girl, for she dances and enjoys her chances to the utmost.

Not long ago she wrote this poem:

Sigh not for love, the ways of love are dark.
Sweet child, hold up the hollow of your hand
And catch the sparks that flutter from the stars.
See how the late sky spreads its flushing bars:
They are dead roses from your own dead land
Tossed high by kindly breezes, lean and hark
And you shall know how morning sheds her lark
The Timid Dawn, herself a little child.

Mrs. Hay and Mrs. Hobart, the two richest women in Washington, were accused of measuring swords, each trying to outdo the other in hospitality, but the utmost good feeling existed, and no one regretted the serious condition of the head of the Hobart family more than Secretary and Mrs. Hay.

Not Troubled That Way.

Because of a little family tiff he was still disgruntled when he reached the club.

"Say," he said to the first man he met, "does your wife need a new bonnet every two weeks?"

"I don't know," was the reply. "I married an heiress."—Chicago Post.

To cure the common ailments that may occur in every family as long as life has woes.

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT has been used and indorsed since 1810, to relieve or cure every form of Pain and Inflammation. Is Safe, Soothing, Sure. Otherwise it could not have existed for almost a Century.

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT

Is strictly a family remedy for Internal as much as External use To cure Colds, Croup, Coughs, Catarrh Cramps and Colic it acts promptly—

ORIGINATED BY AN OLD FAMILY PHYSICIAN

There is not a medicine in use which possesses the confidence of the public to a greater extent than Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. For almost a century it has stood upon its intrinsic merit, while generations after generations have used it. The best evidence of its virtue is the fact that in the state where it originated the sale is steadily increasing. You can safely trust what time has indorsed.

I. S. JOHNSON, Esq.—Fifty years ago this month, your father, Dr. Johnson, left me some Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. I have sold it ever since. I can most truly say that it has maintained its high standard and popularity from that time to the present.

WAY STATIONS.

About 3,000 miles of railway must be constructed to complete the line from Cape to Cairo.

The Baltimore & Ohio railroad recently placed an order with the Pullman Palace Car company for 1,500 box cars and with the South Baltimore car works for 1,000. The cars are to be built according to the B. & O. standards. This makes a total of 8,860 box and coal cars ordered for delivery within the next six months.

A western railroad company has adopted the method of making up its passenger trains with the sleepers next to the engine; the coaches come next and the baggage cars last. This reverses the usual practice. It is claimed that this arrangement makes the sleepers ride steadier, and there is also less dust.

John I. Blair in his earlier days owned a western railroad, along the route of which he established a series of lunchrooms, at which the employes were to be charged 50 cents and all passengers 75 cents. Mr. Blair once dined at one of these places, and, concluding his meal, laid down a half dollar. "Hold on!" cried the cashier. "You don't belong to this road." "I know that," replied Mr. Blair; "the road belongs to me."

The use of steel ties for experimental purposes on the New York Central railroad has not given satisfactory results, says the Engineer. They are durable, but hard to line; the ballast shakes away from them and they give a rattling sound from the stone ballast and from the bolts, and this sound is disagreeable to the passengers. Some have proved to be so unsatisfactory that they are now being removed and are being replaced by oak ties.

Scrofula, salt rheum, erysipelas and other distressing eruptive diseases yield quickly and permanently to the cleansing, purifying power of Burdock Blood Bitters.

Simply Had to Do It.

Tommie—Mamma, see where sister struck me.

Mamma—Did you strike your brother, Tillie?

"I couldn't help it, mamma."

"Couldn't help it, child?"

"No; you see, we were playing house, and Tommie was papa, and I was you, and Tommie did something I told him not to do."—Yonkers Statesman.

PUT TO THE TEST.

Public Endorsement is what Counts.

Everybody has their hour of trouble,

But people having any itchiness of the skin

Have many hours of trouble.

Nothing so annoying. Nothing so irritating.

Scratch it, it becomes worse.

Leave it alone and you can hardly stand the misery.

Itchiness comes in many forms.

Eczema and horrid itching piles.

Relief and cure are here at last.

Thousands have put it to the test

Doan's Ointment cures every form of itchiness of the skin.

Read the following statement.

Mrs. E. L. Robinson, of 20 Dillingham street, Bangor, Me., says: "Two very wonderful remedies are Doan's Kidney Pills and Doan's Ointment. Anyone troubled with any of the ailments for which Doan's Ointment is indicated are unwise if they fail to give it a trial. It performs wonders in allaying and curing itchiness of the skin, from whatever cause. Doan's Kidney Pills also proved to be all that is claimed for them. Both preparations are so valuable that we would not be without them in the house, to have in case of need."

Doan's Ointment and Doan's Kidney Pills are sold by all dealers; price 50 cents a box. Mailed on receipt of price by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N.Y., sole agents for the U. S.

Remember the name, Doan's, and take no substitute.

ON THE STAGE AND OFF.

London is importing American ballet girls.

Mrs. Le Breton, Mrs. Langtry's mother, lives in Jersey and is still one of the best looking women in the island in spite of her advanced age.

"Cyrano de Bergerac" is at present being played in Brussels, Moscow, Vienna, Madrid, Rio Janeiro and Buda-Pesth. It has been translated into eight languages.

Richard Mansfield was examining the Shaw monument in Boston the other day when he noticed a man with a kodak pointed at him. He thundered loud protests at the impudence of the photographer, and was then apparently still more annoyed to find that the man only wanted to get a picture of the state house.

An actress playing in small parts in a Berlin theater has turned her marriage to some account. The usual formal invitation has been suppressed in favor of something that reads like this: "Fraulein X—— invites all her friends and admirers to see her debut in a piece called 'Marriage.' The other part will be taken by Herr X——. It will depend on the latter whether this play turns out a comedy or a drama." One admires the courage of a man that could read this and then walk to the altar.

VEGETABLES FOR THE TABLE.

The onion was worshiped by the ancient Egyptians.

Asparagus was fashionable 200 years before the Christian era.

Parsnips were much thought of by the ancient worshipers of Venus.

It was the custom of the Greeks to offer beets on a silver tray to Apollo in his temple at Delphi.

Lord Bacon loved the onion so that he declared the rose would be sweeter planted in a bed of them.

Asparagus promotes the appetite while furnishing little nourishment and is a good substitute for clams.

Egg-plants, with the inside scooped out and filled with bread crumbs and butter, are favorite vegetables for the table.

The cauliflower is a patrician among vegetables and was taken from its Cyprus home in Italy and England in the reign of Elizabeth.

Parsley should always garnish a dish containing onions, as it takes away the odor most people object to. It even prevents the aftertaste if eaten by the individual who loves onions and must have them.

One Exception.

The Philosopher—A young man should begin at the bottom and work his way up.

WRENTHAM.

Easter services were held Sunday at the Trinity, Catholic and Congregational churches. At the latter church the platform and front of the pulpit were beautifully decorated with potted plants and flowers. Mrs. C. E. Brown was the soloist. The pastor announced that the church debt had been paid and the sum of $1,200 raised by almost voluntary contribution. In the evening a Sunday school concert was held. Clarence M Dunbar gave several cornet solos and Ralph Nowell was the soloist.——Chas. B. Perry of Holyoke is visiting his brother, Lewis B. Perry.——The funeral of Mrs. Augusta George was held in the Congregational church Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.——Joseph J. Mora, who is at work illustrating a new edition of "Aesop's Fables," has arrived in town for the summer and taken the Elliot cottage in Gilmore row, Lake Pearl. A large delegation of Odd Fellows paid a visit to Reliance Lodge at Foxboro Friday night.——Miss Mary S. Stone entertained the Kipling Club Monday evening ——An inventory of the estate of the late Lucas F. Mendell has been made. The amount of the estate is $2,396.84 ——Miss Amelia B. Cook, who has been visiting this winter in New York with Rev. William B. Allis, has been in town for a few days before leaving for Lawrence. Miss Cook will spend the summer at her house on South street.

Cordoroy Roads.

What a pleasant ride together through Alpena county! — pleasant save for the corduroy roads, which set us both aquiver, as with the old-time ague, recalling the days when they rang the church bells every half hour in Alpena to remind the settlers to take their quinine, and when sawmills (so runs the tale) were operated solely by fever and ague power. Curious sights met our unaccustomed eastern eyes as we rode—log homesteads chinked with plaster, root houses half buried in the earth, sheds thatched with straw, "stump-pullers" (immense portable derricks) at work "clearing up," frequent "dreens," huge mounds of cobblestones newly plucked out of the fields, wagons loaded with cedar ties moving cityward, splendid crops on every hand; so, bless you! who minded the corduroy?—R. L. Hartt, in Atlantic.

Queer Breed of Foxes.

Gilbertsville, Pa., can boast of either the boldest liar in the country or a breed of foxes hitherto unknown to natural history. A hunt club started a fox in that vicinity the other day and reported that after a chase of seven hours the fox, being hard pressed, took refuge in a tree, from which the hunters took him alive.—Chicago Chronicle

Twenty-three miles of aluminium cable will be used to transmit 2,000 horse power at a pressure of 10,000 volts from Tariffville to Hartford, Conn. The cable is three-fourths of an inch in diameter and consists of seven strands, each made of seven wires.

Followed His Instructions.

"In editing copy remember to cut out all superfluous words," said the managing editor to the new copyreader. "Very often there are many words such as 'still,' 'but' and the like used in a way not only useless but absolutely bad. Now, remember and knock 'em out." Not long afterward the copyreader was editing a short story sent from a fishing resort up north. The copyreader never went fishing in his life and didn't know one piscatorial term from another. In the copy he found "the men finally quit still fishing and began trolling." He remembered very distinctly the instructions of the managing editor about "still" and such words and with one sweep of the blue pencil obliterated "still." The men to whom the story referred were rather surprised to read in the account of their fishing expedition in the paper that "they finally quit fishing and began trolling."—Chicago Chronicle.

Shipbuilding in 1899.

The year 1899 produced 2,447,538 tons of new shipping, Great Britain leading, with 1,763,914 tons. The United States followed, with 283,964 tons, and Germany came next, with 179,235. One of the remarkable achievements of the year was the Oceanic, one of the largest vessels ever built. Another novelty was the steam turbine torpedo boat destroyer Viper, which makes some 35 knots an hour. A striking feature of the year's record was the increase of tonnage built on the great lakes. Seventy vessels, of 72,094 tons, were built on the great lakes. On our seaboard 75,313 tons of steel steam vessels were built, the largest output in our history.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century: discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

Old-Time Life Preservers.

Many years ago a fire occurred on a Staten Island ferryboat which created a panic similar to that which was caused by the sinking of the Chicago. But in those days women wore balmorals and hoopskirts, and all who had the courage to leap into the water were saved, for their hoops ballooned their clothes and kept them afloat until help arrived A woman once tried to commit suicide by leaping from a bridge, but, having neglected to remove her crinoline, she floated around as lively as a duck while half the population of the town derided her. For three hours she was kept in the water, most of the time crying and promising, and when hauled out was completely cured of the self-destructive mania.

PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin, creditors and all other persons interested in the estate of Sabin Hubbard, late of Franklin, in said county, deceased, intestate:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said court to grant a letter of administration on the estate of said deceased to Ernest E. Hubbard of Boston without giving a surety on his bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Brookline, in said county of Norfolk, on the 25th day of April, A. D. 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And the petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper published in Franklin, the last publication to be one day at least before said court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esquire, Judge of said court, this 29th day of March, A. D. 1900.

H. W. Thayer represented the Congregational Sunday School at the Meudon conference on Wednesday, and reports a very helpful meeting. Report later.

J. B. McKinnon has given up the idea of taking Hotel Briggs, and his claim and that of Mr. Chilson have been arranged. The Misses Modjeska continue.

Some of the farmers have done a little plowing, but not much of the early spring work has been completed. Peas and some early vegetables have been planted.

A solemn high mass was celebrated at the funeral of Mrs. J. B. McKinnon on Wednesday by Rev. Frs. Lee, Sullivan and Riordan, in the presence of many sorrowing friends.

Mrs. Henry Poor's new farmhouse at South Franklin, to replace the one burned, is plastered and will soon be ready for the occupants. It is a roomy, two-story structure, painted sage green with white trimmings.

A number from here are planning to attend the Clifford Eccles entertainment in behalf of the Christ church guild in Medway next Tuesday evening. In addition to a fine entertainment there will be dancing and refreshments.

Rev. Chas. J. White, D. D., of Woonsocket, has withdrawn his resignation as pastor of the Universalist church there, at the unanimous wish of his parish. He was proffered a vacation, but may not accept one.

An Italian who was charged with attempting to make away with a pair of overalls that were hanging outside the store of the Providence Clothing Company on Monday evening was fined $3 by Justice Doe in the district court Tuesday.

There is something of a sensation in Worcester where Fred. Fulton, aged 16, was married the other day. He told the authorities that he was 21. Young Fulton is a brother of Mrs. Jacob Quilter of this place. The bride was 18. The parents are furious.

Mrs. Robert Souther, formerly of this place, died at her home in Providence yesterday. The remains will be brought here for the funeral on Monday at the Methodist church at 1 30. She was the wife of Contractor Souther, who was in business here about six years ago.

The past two or three months have been noticeable on account of the comparatively large number of elderly people who have died in the vicinity. The generation that numbers its years from sixty to ninety is fast leaving places vacant for the younger generation to fill.

Two or three applications for concrete sidewalks, according to the vote of the town to pay half, have been received and placed on file. The amount appropriated this year is $400. With the like amount paid by abutters it will make the sum available for the purpose $800.

After an interval of six weeks the regular meeting of the Greenhalge Literary society was held on Friday afternoon. The program was as follows: Roll call; piano solo, Miss Billings; reading, Miss Morey; piano solo, Miss Helen Thompson; reading, Miss Nixon; reading, Alden Abbott.

At the Republican caucus held in the Town hall Wednesday evening, L. L. Burrington was chairman and John E. Barber secretary. and these delegates were chosen: State, L. L. Burrington, B. M. Rockwood and Charles J. McKenzie; congressional, Nathan C. Nye, Herbert W. Thayer and George W. Wiggin.

The petition for opening the school at South Franklin has been sent to the school committee, but no decision announced. If the petition is granted it will require some time and money to put the school building in condition for use. General repairs are needed and to some extent new desks will probably be required.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles William Knapp issued cards for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Lucilla Breed Knapp, to Henry Steward Bosson, last Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock, in the Congregational church, Auburndale. Miss Knapp will be remembered here as the granddaughter of the late Stewart Brimblecome.

The Medfield & Medway Street Railway company has submitted a plan of the proposed extension of the line to Franklin with the selectmen. A conference will probably be had and the line gone over and the plan thoroughly understood before it will be signed. Except, perhaps, at one or two points the plan appears to be satisfactory.

There will be a special service at the Baptist Church next Sunday forenoon in connection with giving the hand of fellowship to new members. Rev. F. B. Sleeper will preach on "Fulfilling Our Church Covenant." In the evening the pastor will give a short discourse on "The Backslider — An After Easter Thought." The testimony meeting following in the vestry is of great spiritual interest.

Dean played a picked nine from town yesterday afternoon, affording sport for a large crowd. The town boys were a trifle ragged in their work at first, settling down somewhat later on. Gilroy umpired and was a trifle erratic, both sides "catching it." The town won by a score of 13 to 12. Dean's regular pitcher, Jennes, did not pitch, saving himself for tomorrow when they play Tech. sophomores.

The Hayward house is one of the oldest in town, probably much over a century in age, and practically retains the outlines of its younger days. It has been kept well painted and its old oak timbers hold together in good shape. Although the building is on what is now Summer street, the original road to Wrentham was around this way and Cross street, instead of where the street railway is laid.

Coming April 28, at Morse Opera house, Capone's band of twenty-five pieces, from Providence, R. I. This will be the finest concert of classical and popular music that has been given in Morse Opera house since Brooke' Marine band of Chicago was here. There will be solos, cornet, trombone and clarionet. The band has a first-class reputation and is giving great satisfaction to large audiences in their concerts. Don't miss the treat.

The local society of King's Daughters have been working hard for the home for aged people. The committee on location has just received a tempting offer from Virgil S. Pond, a prominent business man of Foxboro, who offers a large estate in Pondville to the association for $1, provided certain minor restrictions are agreed to. Mr. Pond desires that it be named, if the offer is accepted, the Pondville Old Folks' Home, and that the home be continued for fifty years.

The closing lecture on "The New Aristocracy," by Rev. Mr. Koehne at the Congregational Church on Tuesday evening, was the masterpiece of his series, and he held the interest of a large audience to the close. His bursts of eloquence, sound common sense, humor, literary style, etc., were marvelous, and all who heard him testified their appreciation by abundant applause. Arrangements have been made for his six lectures upon six successive nights in Wrentham for week after next, when a number from here will attend. Particulars later.

A very novel and interesting affair was the Colonial party at the Universalist church Wednesday evening, by the Y. P. C. U. The museum of colonial curiosities was worthy of much larger attention than on a rather unpleasant evening it received. There were many things there familiar to our grandfathers, but strange to this generation, and the number would have done credit to a much more pretentious occasion. Cake and ice cream, a reading by Dr. Hodge of a wonderfully clever parody on Kipling, and a sale of fancy articles, confectionery, etc., made up the rest of the features of the evening.

Dean Academy has recently received a very beautiful picture, the gift of the class of '74 to the school. It is a reproduction in color of three of the best-known works of Sir Frederick Leighton, combined artistically in one large frame. The central picture is the "Garden of the Hesperides," which is flanked on either side by a figure representing "Solitude" and one called "Lachrymose." The picture is perhaps the most valuable one in the school, and gives a representative selection from the works of a great modern artist. The money for the picture was raised through the interest of Mrs. A. D. Thayer, a member of the class.

Passed Away.

The funeral services of Gertie Cook, who died Monday morning, were held at the residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Cook, Bullock Place, Thursday afternoon, Rev. I. W. Sneath officiating. A quartette, composed of Misses Myrtie and Flossie Whiting and Messrs. Hosford and Hartshorne, rendered two selections. The bearers were Messrs. Nathan Hayward of Milford, Arthur Bigelow of Whitinsville, William Kester, Lester and Edward Stewart of Franklin.

Gertie had been an invalid from her birth, being a great care to her loving parents, who have done all that lay in their power to make her life pleasant and comfortable, and they have nothing to regret now that she has passed into that life where there is no pain or suffering. Although they will greatly miss the care she has been for almost sixteen years, they have the great comfort of knowing that "He doeth all things well" and that it is well with her.

The floral tributes were as follows: Fifteen pink and white roses from Mrs. Delilah and Miss Dora Cook, grandmother and aunt of the deceased, representing her age—fifteen years. A wreath with the name "Gertie" in blue immortelles from her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Cook. Basket of flowers, Mrs. Jennie Everett. Wreath, Mr. and Mrs. James D. Stewart. Bouquet of carnation pinks, Mrs. W. H. Baker of Milford. Fifteen white pinks, Miss Bertha A. Hood. Bunch of pink carnations, Clifton Crooke of East Woonsocket. White carnations, Miss Edith Hamilton. Variegated pinks, Mrs. J. D. Hatch. Bunch of violets, Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Holden of Boston. H.

A Fine Showing.

The directors of the Milford, Attleboro and Woonsocket Street Railway Company held a meeting here Tuesday at Director Wiggin's office and after a business session made an inspection of the Foxboro, Wrentham and Attleboro ends of the line. One of the officials stated that the construction of that part of the route named above will be completed by May 30, and that the company will then turn its attention toward building from Bellingham Four Corners to Milford and thence to Hopkinton and Westboro.

The line to Milford by way of Caryville will be running by May 1, and by June 1 it is expected the power house will be in running order. A most gratifying financial statement was presented to the company, showing that the single Woonsocket line, with two cars, had earned about $9,000 in six months, paying all expenses, including interest upon the bonds, and leaving a surplus of nearly $2,000. The officials selected at the meeting are as follows: President, George W. Wiggin, Esq.; treasurer, E. K. Rey; clerk, W. H. Tylee; directors, Messrs. Wiggin, Ray, Tylee, J. F. Ray, A. D. Thayer, Wm. S. Reed, C. W. Shippee.

Laid at Rest.

The funeral of Vitaline Longua took place Saturday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. Rev. M. J. Sullivan performed the service for the dead at the parental home on Fisher street. Delegations from the senior and junior sodalities of Children of Mary attended and a number of beautiful floral tributes were received, among them being the following: Hayward weavers, pillow, with inscription, "Shopmate;" Henry Jordan, anchor, with the inscription "Vitaline;" Mrs. Charles Whiting, cross; bouquet twenty-three white pinks, representing the age of the deceased, Filomena Cataldo; bouquets, Mrs. Hugh Murphy, Mrs. Patterson; bouquet twenty-three pinks, Mary Kenney.

The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery, where there was prayer by Father Sullivan and responses and appropriate hymns by the Children of Mary.

> The cold, cold hand of cruel death
> Upon her good life fell;
> No more on earth we now can hear
> The voice we loved so well.
> The sunshine of our happy home
> Will ever clouded be,
> But Thou, Oh Lord, hast sent this cross,
> We bear it all for Thee.

Has Honor Abroad.

A Wallingford, Conn., paper makes the following reference to A. L. Pierce, formerly of this town, at present superintendent and general manager of the Wallingford municipal electric light works. "Not one man in a thousand can fill the place of Supt. Pierce who combines such a list of qualities that not only makes him a good public servant, but a very desirable citizen. As a mechanic he knows every bolt in his machines. As an electrician he might be safely given charge of a thunderstorm plant. As a bookkeeper and accountant he can grace any kind of a roller top. As sagacious business man there are but few who could better have popularized the system among its very opponents, and as an indomitable worker he earns his salary on an eighteen hours a day schedule, and it will be some time before his services will be exchanged for anything local that is in sight. We have no desire to flatter Mr. Pierce, but in addition to the above enumeration, he is the best natured cuss we have ever struck."

Largely Attended.

Vicar General Byrne, representing Archbishop Williams, was here on Wednesday evening to investigate the matter relating to the abandonment of the Catholic church because of its condition. Both sides of the matter were presented, Selectman McCarthy, Postmaster Conroy and D. F. O'Sullivan speaking for the repair and retention of the church. Father Lee expressed his views in favor of abandonment, William Cody and Thomas Neelon speaking in a similar vein. While the sentiment of those present appeared to be in favor of retention, the vicar expressed the desire to have a committee appointed by Father Lee to hold a further consultation with him (the vicar) this week to see if some amicable agreement might be reached. If it could be shown that the church could be repaired to advantage, he would so advise the archbishop, whose decision in the matter would be final.

A MOUNTAIN HERMITAGE.

William Gillette's Cottage, "The Thousand Pines."—The Lynn Valley.

OAK HALL, TRYON, N. C.,
March 6, 1900.

This little hamlet of about 500 inhabitants nestles beautifully among the foothills of the Tryon range of mountains, 1,500 feet above the level of the sea. Virgin forests of pines and resinous gum trees clothe the great heights to their tops and fill the air with Nature's balm for delicate throats and lungs, and as the temperature is ten degrees warmer than surrounding resorts, violets bloom freely in the gardens all winter.

Mountains 4,000 feet high make a wall around us, tempering the wind to the shorn lamb, indeed. But coming down those mountains to get bare! Are you fond of a real thrill? A feeling of awe, fright, dread and yet fascination? Do you like to tremble and be afraid, and yet gaze with eyes of delight at what scares you? We go to the theatre to get that—we look upon tragedy with an intense desire to actually feel it,—for, with Tennyson, "Life, more life, is what we want," but all the time we know that it is a play! The curtain will go down, the lights will go out, and we shall discuss crab salad and tutti-frutti at some agreeable place in half an hour!

But coming down over this Spartanburg branch from Saluda to Tryon we get the real thing—we feel the dread—we shrink and yet we gaze, or dare not gaze, at the wild, gorgeous scenery we pass over,—the narrow shelf cut along the winding, quick curves of the mountain side hanging perilously over valleys so far below, with rivers and rocks of threatening grandeur rushing and defying beneath us, while over our heads seem to topple such boulders as would crush to powder the little caterpillar of a train in which we breathlessly creep along! It is a grand, an emotional ride and full of that element which we seek in vain save among great heights and the sublimity of great hills.

Facing as we do a splendid height, where, eight miles up, shines against the sun a white building, called "Skyuca," from an old Indian who dwelt there in his skysy wigwam, we glance over the valley of Lynn, a place of such exquisite and restful beauty that no wonder the delightful poet of the South, Sidney Lanier, sought it and loved it so well. Here, amid the scent of the rich vineyards, amid the million pink blossoms of unnumbered peach trees; here, where, amid a thousand acres of yellow corn, flows the clear mountain stream he celebrated—the poet-musician, who lived in sweet sounds, breathed his last sigh, while the mountain airs

> "And short-breath'd winds, under the gracious moon,
> Doing mild errands for mild violets,
> Or carrying sighs from the red lips of June,
> What happy way the odor-current sets, caught it and wafted his spirit on and up—to higher flights of being.

The director of the Peabody Symphony orchestra of Baltimore, thus characterizes his genius: "To him as a child in his cradle Music was given: the heavenly gift to feel and express himself in tones. His human nature was like an enchanted instrument, a magic flute or the lyre of Apollo, needing but a breath or a touch to send its beauty out into the world." The ladies of this charming little hamlet have paid a tribute of appreciation in forming a library association in his honor.

If Lanier loved the Valley our beloved author-actor, William Gillette, equally loves the obscure and secluded hill-top which he discovered and visits periodically for absolute rest and silence, the opportunity to think, read and write and the blessed indulgence of exquisite scenery, unbroken quiet and only the whisper of his thousand pines to suggest that murmur of applause which for many years has greeted his every appearance before an assembled audience.

Some years since, exhausted and nearly prostrated with the long strain of public work, management and authorship, he sought out this point of vantage and securing a spot a mile up the hills, with the aid of a servant and a single mechanic built with his own hands one of the most roomy, rustic, unique "lodges in this vast wilderness one could find in a lifetime. It is literally pinned together with wooden pins! So is the furniture, substantial and firm and positively comfortable, and made of the beautiful woods that give out their odor night and day. The huge chimneys, built right through the rooms, are of boulders and queer-shaped stones set firmly in cement and forming convenient shelves and niches, while every door is fastened by huge, carved latches, whittled out by the master as he sat dreaming by his blazing hickory fire.

Screens and doors of fret work and rich carving, tables and walls ornamented by the same handiwork, draperies hung on bolts cut by a jackknife, and even the piazza rail pinned with wooden points, shows the labor and pains and thorough enjoyment of the man who could ward off nervous prostration by such happy and natural means. It was here that "Too Much Johnson" came into its hearty, laughable being, and under the swift pen grew to be a play that has shaken the sides of thousands. And who shall say that it is not due to the brightness and sparkle of the skies and streams, the gay call of the Kentucky cardinal, who flits all winter in his scarlet coat among the pines, and the rich glow of mirth that perforce grows within one on such heights, that this smart little production of his struck home with such sympathetic success?

As a winter resort Tryon is equipped with all those necessities which alone make such places acceptable to the traveling public. No matter how delightful a place may be in itself, if you cannot get satisfactory bread and butter, bed and bath, if you are wordly wise you skip from it as from the plague. For after all, "nobody can live upon a view," and the tourist of today demands a fine table and civilized accommodations. Tryon lacks nothing of all this. Massachusetts people, with the ideas prevalent in the Bay state, have come here bringing their household with them, and their hospitality, even to the traditional "baked beans," is shared by us who come and linger and pass on, or by those who can find no more attractive place in the coveted dry, high atmosphere of an equable climate, than this wherein to spend a winter. Very many of the permanent inhabitants are from New England, and almost all the guests are from Boston or its suburbs.

Two or three millionaires are building up this quiet spot with a sort of enthusiastic recklessness. Fine stone villas, beautiful stone bridges, rustic arbors and graceful bowers give a touch of elegance and refinement even to the common roads. As the vicinity abounds in small game it is a perpetual shooting preserve, and the hunter is supplemented by the artist who pitches his umbrella like a tent and works and dreams before the beauty of the scene. And I, standing beneath an enormous pine which towers to heaven like a cathedral spire, repeat the lines of Lanier, gazing across a sunlit plain on to the blue mountains beyond:

> "Airs sway in sighs from Florida's Spring
> Or Carolina's Palm—
> What time the mocking-bird doth bring
> The woods his artist's-balm,
> Singing the Song of Everything
> Consummate—sweet and calm."

The Way It is Done.

O. G. Cash, chief of the Westfield police, writes thus of the Curfew law: "We have had the law since 1897, and I consider it the best possible way to deal with the children. We use a whistle which blows at 9 p. m. from April to October, and at 8 p. m. from October to April. After the whistle sounds the children all leave the streets except such as are with their parents or sent on errands of importance. Whenever we find a boy who does not intend to obey the law we take him over to the lock up and give him a good talking to, and we seldom have any trouble afterward. We have never found it necessary to lock a boy up. I want to say that the parents can aid the police very much in this matter. I find that the boys soon fall in line and as a rule they mean to do pretty near right. I can say that the curfew law is a success here in Westfield."

Card of Thanks.

FRIDAY, APRIL 20, 1900.

Every true Yankee should look with a great deal of quiet, internal pride upon the Yankee-evolving south, says the Criterion. That an Englishman under a southern sun should ever become a genuine Yankee has often been despaired of. It is now a swelling fact. When the Spaniards called Lee a Yankee a year ago it pleased the whole south, though there is as yet a comparatively small spot on the southern map where the Yankee, sprung out of the very soil, threatens to outstrip his own blood elsewhere. This soil out of which the southern Yankee is springing with such robust energy extends from Lynchburg, Va., on the east, and Bristol, Tenn., on the west, to Eufaula and Birmingham, Ala., on the south. It is about 500 miles in length, and from 200 to 300 miles in breadth. It embraces the iron, coal and cotton mill site, and decidedly the most interesting phase of all this energy here is the cotton mill, for this phase is the latest and is developing more of the genuine characteristics of the New England Yankee in the southern man than elsewhere in the country.

Hartford, Conn., has had a man with a marble heart. The heart was partially covered with a deposit of calcium salts, of which marble is composed. It felt like stone, and when struck gave out a sound as of stone. It offered the same resistance a piece of stone or marble would. Calcareous deposits about the heart are common, but no case is known here where so much of the heart was turned into a substance resembling stone. The man who had this marble heart died in the Hartford hospital. He would not tell where he was in pain. Little is known of the history of his case. He was a tailor, 50 years old.

If you are at a loss to know what to give for a wedding present to some one you like very much, follow the example of a well-known New York merchant. whose granddaughter left him to set up a home of her own the other day. He made the bride hold her dainty hands together and then filled them brimful and flowing over with $20 gold pieces. You will not find that those philanthropists to the newly wed, the purchasers of duplicate wedding presents, will ever be called on to put your gift to same practical use.

The year 1900, according to the Gregorian rule of intercalation for centurial years, is not a leap year because it is not divisible by 400 without a remainder. The object of this rule is to make the calendar year coincide with the solar year. The last leap year was 1896. The next leap year will be 1904. February of 1900 will have only 28 days.

The most unique experiment in medical annals as a cure for insanity has been successfully tried in Philadelphia. The cure is starvation. For 45 days a young girl, whose mind was unbalanced, went without food; and at the expiration of that time she had recovered her reason.

OVERWORK

You know all about it. The rush, the worry, the exhaustion. You go about with a great weight resting upon you. You can't throw off this feeling. You are a slave to your work. Sleep fails, and you are on the verge of nervous exhaustion.

What is to be done? Take

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

For fifty years it has been lifting up the discouraged, giving rest to the overworked, and bringing refreshing sleep to the depressed.

No other Sarsaparilla approaches it. In age and in cures, "Ayer's" is "the leader of them all." It was old before other sarsaparillas were born.

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

Ayer's Pills aid the action of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. They cure biliousness. 25 cts. a box.

"I have used Ayer's medicines for more than 40 years and have said from the very start that you made the best medicines in the world. I am sure your Sarsaparilla saved my life when I first took it 40 years ago. I am now past 70 and am never without your medicines."

KNOWS EVERY DOG IN TOWN.

Former Lightning Calculator of the Treasury Can Tell the Ownership of Washington Curs.

The man who knows everybody, and the way to every place in the town where he lives, is quite common. But there is a man in Washington who was "born and raised here," as the native Washingtonian speaks it, who knows everybody's dog, and the dog's name. He will stand on a corner and point them out as they travel hither and yon. He was in front of Willard's the other day when a cur of low degree poked his nose around the corner, says the New York Sun.

"That's Beriah Wilkins' dog," he said to his acquaintance who also prides himself upon knowing a good deal about everything in Washington.

"It looks more like Jim Riley's dog," said the acquaintance.

"Jim Riley's dog don't wear any collar," replied the authority.

"'Cause that dog wears a collar it's no sign he's Beriah Wilkins' dog."

"No, that's so. But Beriah's dog has got a goitre in his neck, and is a little off in one eye."

The authority whistled to the cur, and when he came up familiarly, the authority showed his friend the marks of Mr. Wilkins' dog. This led to a bet that the authority could name the owner of every dog that passed the corner, and in 30 minutes he called the ownership of 14, and offered as testimony of his claim to follow the dogs home. It may have been a bluff, but people who know say it wasn't. Not only does he declare that he knows these things, but he offers to wager that he can tell the ownership of the dogs by their bark.

This man was at one time known as the lightning calculator of the treasury department, and now sells dogs for a livelihood.

ASKED TO TEACH THE QUEEN.

How a Young Jewess from America Lost an Interesting Opportunity.

"This is a brand new stitch," said the young woman, holding up a dainty piece of embroidery, "and if you will come some day when we can be alone I'll teach you how to do it."

"That reminds me of a good story," said her companion. "You know that Queen Victoria is a crank on the subject of needlework, and spends much time learning new things in embroidery and crochet work. Well, a few years ago she was spending some time at Wiesbaden, and she used to drive to the bazar and look at the needlework, while people looked at her and wondered why she would persist in wearing the old, rusty bonnet. One day the young woman who usually waited on her showed her what you just showed me—a brand new stitch—and was asked to call the next day and teach her majesty how to make it. She was to make a second call to finish the job several days later, but in the meantime was taken ill, and the proprietor of the establishment was beside herself, and worried as to how and where she would get a substitute.

"On the day before the appointed time a young girl from a western city in the United States came to the bazar and saw and admired the piece of needlework, and told the saleswoman that it was the first she had seen since she had finished a similar piece.

"'Then you know how to do the stitch?'

"'Certainly,' said the young woman. 'Why?'

"Well, there was a whispered consultation, and then the girl was asked if she would act as substitute the next day and teach the queen. You may imagine that she did not hesitate. She went to the hotel and, radiant with joy and excitement, told her mother of her good fortune, and, after she had received the congratulations of her friends, her mother shattered all her plans by reminding her that the next day was Saturday, and that, as a good Jewess, she could do no sewing on that day. And now the young woman tells the story of how near she came to teaching Queen Victoria a new stitch."—N. Y. Tribune.

Wreck of a Wreck.

In the space of a single year Sable island claimed more than 200 lives. In fact, so many wrecks line the shoals of this ocean graveyard that the new pile up on the old, like bodies heaped in one ditch. The Crofton Hall, an iron sailing ship wrecked two years ago on the northeast bar, broke in two about amidships. The pieces have drifted together again and the islanders suppose that she struck crosswise upon an old submerged wreck, and is settling over it, which accounts for the two parts coming together. Nor is the island satisfied with the awful tribute which it exacts from the living. The same informant who writes me about the Crofton Hall adds that the bark John McLeod, which was wrecked off Devil's island at the entrance to Halifax harbor, has drifted ashore on Sable island bottom up—a wreck of a wreck!—Ainslee's Magazine.

Zulu Servant Stories.

The Zulu boy servants are much appreciated in Africa, but they have difficulties with the English language. Their special weakness is the confusion of the letters "l" and "r." As a result, instead of saying that "breakfast is ready" they announce, to the astonishment of the stranger, "Black-faced lady, lbsas." They make excellent servants. One particularly faithful boy was always very careful as to whom he admitted into the house. One day three visitors called, one of whom had come without a card. He ushered the first two into the drawing-room, but insisted on the other staying in the hall. "Two misses," he explained, "got ticket; you got no ticket, you wait outside!" The wise boy knew quite well that he himself wouldn't be allowed in a saloon without a ticket; why, then, should he admit white ladies?—London Globe.

DISEASES OF CORN.

They Are Not Only More Numerous But Also More Destructive Than Is Generally Supposed.

The corn plant is subject to rust that is similar to the red rust that affects wheat and oats. Usually its presence may be noted about the middle of summer, by the appearance of blotches on the leaf of the plant. These blotches are dust-like, and contain the spores of the disease. Near the end of the summer the blotches become blackish. Fortunately the disease does not attack corn until the plant has arrived at a stage of growth when it will not suffer as much injury as it would if it were attacked in the earlier stages. It has never been regarded as economically important, yet a healthy plant is always better than a diseased one.

Prof. Burrell's bacterial disease of corn is a more serious matter. It causes a dwarfed condition of young plants on areas of a few yards to an acre or more, and more usually than otherwise upon the richest soil of the field. The plants that are attacked are sickly in appearance, being more yellow than a healthy plant. Especially is this the appearance of the lower leaves. The lower and older roots are badly affected as is also the lowest portion of the stalk which often dies. On the surface of these diseased stalks may be found spots that are of a brownish color and are corroded. After the middle of the summer the sheath leaves of the stalk will be found to be spotted on the outside. But on the inside they are much more affected.

Sometimes the ears become diseased. In bad cases everything connected with the ear, husks, cob, kernel and silk are reduced to a condition that may be called nothingness, and such ears often become moldy through and through, the fungus being very white. The juices the ear, husks, cob, kernel and silk, are shown by the microscope to be alive with bacteria. It was at one time thought that cattle feeding upon such diseased corn would be poisoned, but, like smut, it has more recently been shown to be harmless.

Like smut in wheat the remedy for the disease is probably rotation, though we are not prepared to say just what the rotation should be. However, if the disease is bad on any part of the farm, it would prove profitable to experiment as to the proper rotation. It is not often that diseases of this character will attack crops that are dissimilar in character.—Agricultural Epitomist.

Chinese Visiting Cards.

The Chinese visiting cards consist of a large sheet of bright scarlet paper bearing the name of the owner in very large letters, the larger the better. The paper is folded ten times, and the name is written on the right-hand lower corner, prefixed thus: "Your unworthy friend, who bows his head and pays his respects," "Your very stupid brother," or something to that effect. In place of "Yours truly," "Your stupid" is written on the Chinese card. The return of these cards to the visitor is considered etiquette. They are too costly for general distribution. So it is necessary that each card should do duty several times.

Giraffe Is Disappearing.

A good giraffe skin is worth from ten to twenty dollars in South Africa to-day, and much more in Europe. On their hunting trips ten or fifteen years ago it was a common matter for one hunter to kill 40 or 50 of these graceful animals in one day.

FAMED IN HISTORY.

The House in Which "Yankee Doodle" Was Written.

Greenbush Manor House on the Hudson, Near Albany, Is Still Standing and Is a Landmark of Great Interest.

Upon the right bank of the Hudson, opposite the city of Albany, stands an ancient mansion, known since 1708 as the Greenbush manor house, before that as the Patron's fort, Crailo. Recently it has been called the "Yankee Doodle house," from the fact that the lines of the famous song were composed there.

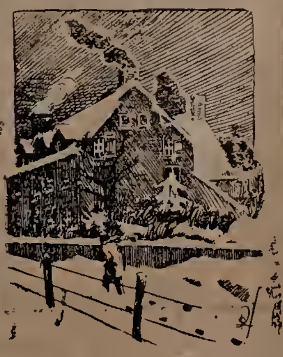
Fort Crailo, as it now stands, says the Philadelphia Press, is a massive brick structure, consisting of three stories. The third story has dormer windows, and an attic with a shingle roof.

The rude, fortress-like walls of the main building, still pierced by stone portholes, amply bear out the assertion that it was used for purposes of defense in early colonial days. The bronzed tablet on the front wall of the Crailo, above one of the ancient stone portholes, gives the date of erection, 1642, as cut in the stone on the cellar wall. It also states that the lines of Yankee Doodle were composed there.

Gen. James Abercrombie, with his staff, made the manor house his headquarters on his way to defeat at the hands of Montcalm, at Ticonderoga, July 8, 1758.

The British officers were the guests of Col. Johannes Van Rensselaer and his lovely wife, Angelica Livingston, daughter of Robert Livingston, Jr., for nine years mayor of Albany. On Abercrombie's staff was a young surgeon, whose derision was excited one day by the sight of the raw American recruits straggling in from the country side, clad in all kinds of motley garb.

Sitting on the edge of the well in the rear of the house, he scribbled the few lines of doggerel which alone preserve his name and were destined to be adopted and proudly sung to the stirring quickstep which led so many of those despised country lads to victory when the spirit of '76 called and found their glad response.



CRAILO ON THE HUDSON.
(Old Mansion in Which "Yankee Doodle" Was Written.)

The author's name is given variously as Schuckbergh, Shackberg and Stackpole.

In June, 1775, the continental army held its cantonment in the gardens back of the manor house, on its way to Ticonderoga, taken by a handful of Americans under the gallant Ethan Allen, May 10, 1775. The despised Yankee Doodle had gone to the front with a vengeance.

Welcome guests were these to the proprietor, Col. Johannes Van Rensselaer, who had ranged himself with the radicals in the Twenty-first provincial assembly as far back as 1737. He had seen Abercrombie march by while yet he owed allegiance, grudgingly given, to an English sovereign. He was captain of a company of foot in 1743. Now his country was struggling to cast off the hated yoke, and to him and his compatriots it often seemed as though there were naught to gain and all to lose.

Too old himself for active service, his three sons, Robert, Henry and James, held commissions in the continental army, as brigadier general, colonel and major, respectively. Killian, the youngest brother of Col. Johannes, held a commission as second lieutenant in his brother's company of foot, November 10, 1743, under the royal governor, George Clinton, and received his commission as colonel from George Clinton, governor of the state of New York, in April, 1778.

All of these, with others too numerous for detailed mention here, were born in the old manor house, and went in and out on their country's errands until the end of the war.

A brother, therefore, three sons and eight nephews of Col. Johannes Van Rensselaer served in the continental army; some with distinction, all with credit. The active part in military service taken by so many members of the family and his relationship as son-in-law to the aged proprietor, would naturally operate in the selection by Gen. Schuyler of this old house as his headquarters when the American army, moving north under his command, took up its temporary station upon the Greenbush estate.

The many scions of the younger branch all looked to Greenbush manor house as the ancestral home, and were welcome within its walls, when baptismal and marriage feasts called together a joyous company. Geo. Washington dined there and Lafayette also, while in later times, Daniel Webster, Harrison Gray Otis and many other celebrated men were numbered among its guests.

Millions Given Away.

It is certainly gratifying to the public to know of one concern in the land who are not afraid to be generous to the needy and suffering. The proprietors of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, have given away over ten million trial bottles of this great medicine; and have the satisfaction of knowing it has absolutely cured thousands of hopeless cases. Asthma, bronchitis, hoarseness and all diseases of the throat, chest and lungs are surely cured by it. Call on Albert C. Mason & Co., druggist, and get a trial bottle free. Regular size 50c and $1. Every bottle guaranteed, or price refunded.

April Showers

Wash away the filth and waste that have accumulated during winter.

In like manner Hood's Sarsaparilla expels from the blood impurities that have been deposited during the season when there has been but little perspiration and perhaps constant confinement in impure and vitiated air. It is a boon to tired mothers, housekeepers, teachers and others who spend their time indoors.

It gives the blood richness and vitality, fitting it to nourish and strengthen the nerves, muscles and all the great organs of the body. It cures all spring humors and banishes that tired feeling.

It is the best medicine money can buy for all diseases caused by impure or impoverished blood. You should begin taking it today.

Working Night and Day.

The busiest and mightiest little thing that ever was made is Dr. King's New Life Pills. Every pill is a sugar-coated globule of health that changes weakness into strength, listlessness into energy, brain-fag into mental power. They're wonderful in building up the health. Only 25c per box. Sold by A. C. Mason & Co.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

is a food medicine for the baby that is thin and not well nourished and for the mother whose milk does not nourish the baby.

It is equally good for the boy or girl who is thin and pale and not well nourished by their food; also for the anæmic or consumptive adult that is losing flesh and strength.

In fact, for all conditions of wasting, it is the food medicine that will nourish and build up the body and give new life and energy when all other means fail.

Should be taken in summer as well as winter.

50c. and $1.00, all druggists.

Mortgagee's Sale
—OF—
REAL ESTATE
In Franklin, Mass.

Pursuant to a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Henry B. Kimball to the Benjamin Franklin Savings Bank, dated the fourteenth day of May, A. D. 1892, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 678, folio 570, and for the purpose of foreclosing said mortgage, will be sold at public auction, on the premises hereinafter described, on

SATURDAY, the FIFTH day of MAY,
A. D. 1900,

at nine o'clock in the forenoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage and therein described as follows, to wit:

The following described pieces or parcels of real estate situated in said Franklin, with buildings thereon, bounded and described as follows:

1st. A certain piece or parcel of land on the westerly side of Forest street and bounded, beginning on Forest street at the center of the brook and land of Ernst E. Holmstrom, et al.; thence running westerly by the center of said brook four rods; thence turning and running southerly five rods, more or less, to a fence; thence running westerly by said fence and said Holmstrom's land to land of heirs of Adin Sargent; thence running westerly on said land of Sargent's heirs to land known as the Peter Adams farm; thence southerly various courses on said Adams farm to land of heirs of Fenner Grant; thence on said land of said Grant's heirs to land of Charlotte M. Woodward, formerly of Providence County Savings Bank; thence easterly by said land of Charlotte M. Woodward various courses to said Forest street; thence northerly on said Forest street to place of beginning, being part of the "Bradford Farm," so called, containing fifty acres, more or less; also

2. A certain piece or parcel of land on the westerly side of said Forest street, bounded on the north and west by land of heirs of Fenner Grant; on the south by land of heirs of George Grant and on the east by said Forest street, containing eleven (11) acres, more or less; and also

3. A certain piece or parcel of land on the easterly side of said Forest street, and bounded, beginning at the northwesterly corner of the premises on said Forest street; thence running southerly on said Forest street forty (40) rods, more or less, to an old rail fence; thence running easterly forty (40) rods, more or less, to a stone wall; thence running northerly by said wall to land of this grantor, formerly of Gilmore; thence on said land formerly of Gilmore westerly to said Forest street and the place of beginning, containing seven (7) acres, more or less. Reserving to the grantor the right to pass and repass with teams or otherwise along the northerly side of said land last above described; also reserving the wood and timber on the lot first above described and the right to Jason Tower to remove the same at any time prior to December 1, A. D. 1888.

4. A certain lot or tract of land situated in said Franklin, on the westerly side of the road leading from West Wrentham meeting house, so called, to Franklin Centre, and bounded, beginning on the westerly line of said road at the northeasterly corner of land late of Joseph and Fenner Grant; thence running northeasterly with said road forty (40) rods, more or less, to land now or formerly of Abner Fiske; thence running westerly with the southerly line of said Fiske's land one hundred and twenty (120) rods, more or less, to a turn of said Fiske's land; thence southerly with said Fiske's land forty (40) rods, more or less, to land late of Joseph and Fenner Grant; thence easterly to the said land of said Grants one hundred and twenty (120) rods more or less, to said road at the place of beginning, containing thirty (30) acres, more or less, and is known as the "Choice Lot," and the same premises described in a deed from the Providence County Savings Bank to this grantor, dated January 28th, A. D. 1880, recorded with Norfolk Deeds, lib. 517, fol. 230, to which deed reference is hereby given for more particular description; reserving and subject to the right of Jason Tower to remove the wood and timber lying on said land at any time prior to December 1, A. D. 1888.

5. A certain piece or parcel of land, with the buildings thereon, situated in the southerly part of Franklin aforesaid and on the westerly side of Forest street, and bounded and described as follows, viz: Beginning at a point on the westerly side of said street at land now or formerly of Amos P. Woodward; and thence running westerly on a stone wall about sixty (60) rods to a corner in the fence; thence southerly on land of said Woodward as the wall now stands to land of the heirs of Adin D. Sargent; thence continuing southerly by said heirs' land until it reaches an old stone wall and fence; thence continuing southerly across the wood lot and pasture to a corner; thence turning and running easterly on a fence and wall to a corner at a stake four (4) rods westerly of said street; thence turning and running northerly in a straight line to the center of the brook; thence turning and running easterly again by the center of said brook to the westerly side of said street; thence running northerly on said street to the point of beginning; containing twenty-five acres, be the same more or less.

Being the same premises which were conveyed to Ernst Erlwin Holmstrom, Charles Holmstrom and James Holmstrom by Amos P. Woodward by a deed dated the twenty-ninth day of March, A. D. 1887, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 590, folio 551, to which deed reference is hereby made for a more particular description of said land.

Terms made known at the time and place of sale.

Levi C. Lincoln of Woonsocket, well known here and manager of the Franklin Electric Light company, has just purchased the handsome residence of Dr. George H. Baker on South Main street in that city.

Deputy Sheriff Fitzpatrick arrested Dennis Long Friday and took him to Dedham jail for failure to appear when a charge of assault against him was called in Dedham court last week. He will be tried today.

Col. George W. Nason of Boston sends us his annual souvenir of the "Minute Men of '61," which is a remarkably well gotten up affair, evidencing a good deal of ability and "hustle" on the part of our veteran friend.

The members of St. Mary's alumni held a pleasant social at the home of Miss Catherine Sheehan on Union street Friday evening. There was a good attendance and the members were handsomely entertained.

James Connors, residing on Union street and employed at the Colonial rubber works, had his right arm badly bruised in a fall at the factory Saturday morning while assisting other employes in the work of repairing the flywheel of the engine.

A memorial brochure embodying the death and funeral exercises of the late Joseph G. Ray, as published in the SENTINEL, letters of condolence, together with a remarkably fine portrait, has been prepared by the family for distribution among friends.

The Boston board of health received the other day a communication bearing the address "Border of helth, Boston, mass." And on the other side was this interesting communication:—"Dear Sir—Please come at 19 F—street· down stairs to hear the smell."

Medical Examiner J. C. Gallison was called Friday to examine into the sudden death of an infant child whose mother lives in New Hampshire and is visiting a French family on Fisher street. Death was due to convulsions and a permit was given for burial.

A business directory, covering the Attleboros, Wrentham, Franklin, Foxboro, Medway, Medfield, Millis, Mansfield, Canton, Walpole, Norwood, is being compiled, and will be distributed free, by Mr. Anthony, connected with the New Bedford Standard.

Mrs. E. K. Ray is to entertain the Mothers' Section at Elm farm on Thursday afternoon, when Dr. Kate Sanborn of Medway is to speak upon a subject of interest to all who have to do with the bringing up of children. A most delightful afternoon is promised.

Postmaster Conroy has received a supply of two cent postage stamp books containing twelve, twenty-four and forty-eight stamps. The books are sold at one cent advance over the price of stamps. The stamps are protected from sticking by parafine paper. They will be found very convenient.

A subscriber calls our attention to the fact that he has two kittens 10 months old, each of which recently gave birth to kittens. All of them being destroyed but one, the two mothers now take turns in providing for the little one, one of them staying at home while the other goes out foraging.

An exchange says that a girl, named plain "Mary" at her birth, dropped the "r" when she grew up, and became Miss May. As she began to shine in a social way, she changed the "y" to "e," and signed her letters Mae. She was married, and now she has dropped the "e," and it's just plain "Ma."

It is told that a Franklin merchant who does not advertise was dozing in his store the other day when a little girl came in with a pitcher and asked for a quart of molasses. The merchant yawned, stretched himself, opened his eyes, and then said in an injured tone: "Well, ain't there nobody what sells molasses in Franklin but me?"

James McParland, who was arrested two weeks ago on two charges, one for cruelty to animals and the other for drunkenness, was tried before Judge Doe in the district court on Saturday. The complaint of cruelty to animals was dismissed, and on the charge of drunkenness McParland was adjudged guilty and fined $15. He paid.

G. I. Partridge, aged 73, is to assist in a concert given by an old friend in Grafton, on Tuesday evening, May 1. The latter is Dexter B. Hathaway, aged 83, who celebrates his 75th anniversary in connection with music. Other friends, well along in years, are to assist. Mr. Partridge and Mr. Hathaway formerly played together "on the road."

Franklinites going to the Paris exposition should get vaccinated before they start. According to the New York Tribune, private letters from that city say that smallpox prevails in an epidemic degree. It will be prudent to take precautions against this, and, as far as possible, against other infections and contagions which great miscellaneous gathering of all classes of people from every quarter of the world are apt to contain and propagate.

If close closets have moths in them in spite of your careful spring attempts to keep them out, burn sulphur in them. Put the sulphur in an old porcelain dish and set in a wide pan of water, light the sulphur and shut the closet up. Don't go far away or leave the blaze long unheeded. With the pan of water there is, however, next to no danger that a spark will fly off and set anything on fire. The scintilla of possibility, though, should not be overlooked.

At the M. E. church Sunday morning Rev. S. A. Cook preached on "Tithing, or Systematic Giving," a very logical presentation of this important subject. Incidentally he paid the local church a pleasing compliment by saying that in his experience of several pastorates and observation of many others he had never seen the equal of the Franklin M. E. church in liberal, willing and spontaneous giving, circumstances considered. A pleasing feature of the service were duets by Mrs. Stewart and Mrs. Knowlton.

Those who miss hearing Dr. Crowe in his "Shakespeare at Work and at Play," at Dean, on Thursday evening, will lose one of the intellectual treats of the season. Dr. Crowe has a host of friends here who always give him a cordial welcome, knowing that he more than gives them adequate return in his addresses, and his topic this time is one that is full of interest to everyone. The lecture will commence at 8 o'clock, and the prospect is that the hall will be more than filled. The public is cordially invited; admission free.

Capone's band will appear in the Morse Opera house Saturday, April 28. This famous organization is composed of firstclass musicians some of the soloists as fine musicians as ever appeared in this town. The music, both popular and classical, is just the kind to make a very enjoyable entertainment. As this will be the last concert of the season, don't miss it. Miss Helen Green, the soprano singer, in addition to the band, makes a very strong attraction. Tickets at Dana's, on sale Wednesday: Orchestra 35, balcony 50, general admission 25.

At the meeting of the selectmen Friday evening Michael J. Costello was appointed the Democratic registrar of voters for the term of three years, and the present board of engineers were reappointed, as follows: John G. Cunningham, J. B. McKinnon, Charles H. Corbin, L. J. Kelley and William F. Buckley. Forest firewards were appointed as follows: William F. King, Chas. R. Gowen, James M. Parker, Charles E. Woodward, Fred H. Johnson, T. J. Daniels, H. T. Gates, Albert J. Newell, Frank S. Hill, E. P. Proctor. H. M. Bullock was drawn as juryman for the civil term at Dedham.

In a rattling game of base ball on the Dean campus, Saturday afternoon, between the academy team and the sophomore nine from the Boston School of Technology, the Dean boys were defeated, 4 to 1. The game was one of the best recently played on the campus and was characterized throughout by sharp playing on the part of both teams. Both pitchers were effective, but the "Tech" twirler had rather the best of the argument, Jenness letting up in the 8th and 9th, when the visitors batted out a victory, after the score had been tied from the third to the eighth. A large crowd witnessed the contest.

No persons on earth are to so great an extent constantly at the mercy of both friends and enemies as the editors and reporters of a newspaper. They must get much of the information concerning transpiring events second or third handed or not at all. Frequently statements are received from supposedly trustworthy sources which are subsequently found to be without foundation. Not one editor or reporter in a thousand willfully injures either friend or foe by misrepresentation. Go to them and ask for a correction, and if your case is just you will be received politely and proper correction will be made with pleasure.—Ex.

George E. Duffy of Franklin Falls, N. H., who has resigned the superintendency of Stevens mills, will shortly leave for Franklin, to take the position of agent of the Charles River Woolen company, with plants in Franklin and North Bellingham. Mr. Duffy has been connected five years with Hon. Moses T. Stevens & Sons' mills, two in Haverhill and Andover and the remainder here. He is an educated, progressive manufacturer, of the up-to-date school. His career as a mill man has been one of marked success, brought about by thorough training, close application, sagacious judgment and rare executive ability.—Lawrence American.

St. John's Guild will open its annual spring fair on Monday, April 30, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at Odd Fellows' hall. It will run Monday and Tuesday evenings, and many fancy and useful articles will be for sale. The first evening there will be a May party, with a Maypole dance and sale of May baskets. There will also be a supper served in the small hall. Tuesday evening there will be an entertainment in the large hall, consisting of a dramatic sketch by a party from Mansfield and a lecture by Stanton H. King of the Sailors' Haven, Boston, on "Twelve Years Before the Mast." Mr. King will bring with him a number of seamen, who will dance sailor dances and sing the "Sailors' Shanties." There will also be a number of musicians and elocutionists from Boston.

T. B. Allen fell from the top of a load of wood, while standing upon it on Saturday last, subjecting himself to a severe shaking up, and affecting him somewhat internally. He was drawn as juror in the murder case of William J. Young charged with the murder of Benjamin F. Coolbroth of Randolph, but was obliged to present himself Monday and be excused from service. One hundred and ten jurymen were examined on Monday and only nine were accepted. An additional list of forty was made out last evening and the remaining three men will probably be secured today. W. H. Wales and Arthur A. Pond from Franklin were among the original nine selected.

The fact that Franklin is unprovided with a license law makes it easy for a stranger with two or three dollars to load a team with vegetables of unknown quality and peddle them from door to door at a supposedly small price. The profit is made by the short measure employed, and when the amount delivered is taken under consideration it is often found that a rate higher than the market price has been paid. Then, too, there have been a number of cases where bills were handed these peddlers to change and the only change forthcoming was a change in locality. Many of these peddlers are sneak thieves also, and clothing, etc., has oftentimes been missed after a visit of one of one of these itinerants.

The Providence Sunday Telegram has a picture and the following very flattering notice of one of Franklin's bright young men, a student in Brown university, Fred. V. Hussey, of Franklin, who has been chosen substitute debater in the contest between Brown and Dartmouth. "Mr. Hussey is a member of the senior class and is very popular among his college classmates. He is a member of the Delta Phi, and has been prominent in a good many of the student organizations. He is a good speaker and presents a logical argument. He is the president of the class, and is a member of the class day committee for the coming commencement. He played on his class base ball team during his freshman and sophomore years."

The case of Thomas Killela, who had been convicted in the district court here last winter of disorderly conduct, came up in the Dedham court last Wednesday on appeal and was concluded Friday, when a jury acquitted Killela after deliberating an hour and a half. At the time of his arrest Killela was riding from Woonsocket to Franklin on an electric car, and while on Rhode Island territory was ejected for alleged disorderly conduct. He was arrested by a Bellingham constable on the Massachusetts side, the conductor making the complaint, and was brought here and locked up. Killela, who lives here, threatens to bring a civil suit against the Woonsocket Street Railway Company for false detention. Attorney Henry E. Ruggles represented the defendant.

For some time the board of selectmen have recommended selling the engine owned by the town at the gravel pit on Pleasant street because it was not powerful enough to run a stone crusher of the size wanted if the town bought one. But at the annual town meeting in March the town voted not to sell the engine and and at the same meeting appropriated money to buy a crusher. Nothing was said about a new engine, and now the problem before the selectmen is this: If a crusher is bought there is no power provided to work it, and under the present conditions the expenditure would be useless. And as there is no money provided for an engine or authority to purchase one the board feels that nothing should be done.

Medway Guild Entertainment.

Christ church guild of Medway will present an entertainment at Sanford hall, Medway, this evening, consisting of the following noted Boston talent: Miss Flora H. Clifford, reader; Miss Bertha C. Smith, zither soloist; Walter Eccles, impersonator; also, Miss Alice J. Grover, of Mansfield, violin soloist, and Roy M. S. Hartshorne, of Franklin, baritone. The entertainment will begin at 7.45 and will be followed by dancing till 12. Ice cream and cake will be on sale.

People are very forgetful. They have to think pretty hard to remember the vice-presidential candidate two campaigns back, and yet he was pretty well advertised at the time. It has been truly said that the time to advertise is all the time. In business there is no such thing as standing still. A business man must go forward or he will fall back. Even if you do just as much business this year as you did last, some other fellow is doing more business and he is getting ahead of you. Each year's efforts should be to exceed last year's sales. The only sure way to do it is to advertise. Advertise in busy times because the iron must be struck while it is hot, and advertise in dull times to heat the iron. It can be done.—Charles Austin Bates.

There has been a great amount of sickness in town this winter. There has not for many years been the great amount of what might be termed serious cases in town, as there has been this winter. And while the number of serious cases has been large, the number of cases which have not been termed serious, but which has had the effect to keep the patient indoors for a time, have been something enormous. The doctors have been more than busy. They have been kept on the jump night and day, and many of them have been obliged to keep on the road most of the time. The principal trouble seems to have been grip, which manifested itself in various forms, sometimes resulting in pneumonia and at other times congestion of the lungs.

With more than 100 miles of highway in the limits of the town to look after and keep in ordinary repair, and from $7,000 to $8,000 to do it with, each year the road problem is a vexing one at the best, and when we remember the liability in this climate to big snow storms, which make many hundreds of dollars' extra expense necessary to shovel out, the problem becomes still more perplexing how to make ends meet—money and expenses. No man is a perfect road builder and repairer, able to see all definite results of his practical work before actual trial, and there is naturally a certain amount of criticism always on tap whatever is done, much of it no doubt honest, even if illogical. So the problem goes on from year to year without a perfect solution, but this year, with a little more money than last year and no large deficit for snow to begin with, and an experienced road builder as pilot, there may be as near a satisfactory ending of the annual campaign as could be expected.

Approaching Franklin.

The laying of the tracks of the new Medway and Medfield Street Railway Company in Medway was completed Saturday evening. The tracks were connected with the tracks of the Milford and Medway Street Railway Company, and now there is a continuous line of track from Milford to Medfield, a distance of thirteen miles. The switch that will connect the Medway and Franklin street railway with the Medfield and Medway line was also set in place. Considerable grading on Village street yet remains to be done to level the road. It is expected that the poles and wires will be in position by Wednesday, and in the meantime a new generator is expected to arrive at the power house in Norwood, the generator at present in the power house being unable to furnish power hardly for the cars running between Millis and Medfield, as they run very slow. Work will also be commenced immediately upon the Franklin road, which will probably be completed in June. Next Sunday bids fair to see the missing link between Milford and Boston supplied.

A Treat Promised.

Mrs. E. K. Ray is planning to attend the General Federation of Women's Clubs' biennial of 1900, to be held in Milwaukee, Wis., June 4 to 8, inclusive. It is the generally accepted verdict that Milwaukee is a beautiful city, conveniently located as regards railroad facilities (reduced rates, etc), with fine hotel accommodations and private homes available if required. The finely appointed building known as the Athenæum (of interest to club women as the result of the pioneer women's stock company) is to be made a center for the informal intercourse of delegates and visiting club members.

Card of Thanks.

Pictures at W. M. Thayer Building.

Miss Reilly's and Mr. Frazer's rooms have been most successful this year in picture decorations. The pupils have shown untiring zeal in the good work. Miss Reilly's pupils purchased a beautiful picture, Pharoah's Horses, by earning a few cents each, in ways interesting as well as amusing. Mr. Fraser's scholars, by selling old rubbers and giving a magic lantern exhibition, operated by Master Johnnie Desmond, bought the magnificent picture, Sir Galahad and His Horse.

At the suggestion of Supt. Daniels, Miss Reilly and Mr. Frazer, with the assistance of friends and pupils, gave a benefit entertainment, from which over $30 was netted. One most pleasant feature was the willingness of all those taking part to give their services. The heartfelt thanks of the pupils and friends of the school is assured. As a result of this entertainment the public are invited to see in Miss Reilly's room the following pictures: John Alden and Priscilla; Song of the Lark, by Millet; Reclining Lion, by Bonheur; The Shepherdess, by La Rolle; Holland Windmill. In Mr. Frazer's room are: Ploughing, by Bonheur; The Horse Fair, by Bonheur; Aurora.

Furthermore, by the generosity of Dr. Hodge, twelve steel engravings have been presented to the Thayer building, six of which have been framed: King Lear in the Storm, Leander, Music are in Miss Reilly's room, while Homer, The Centaur and Achilles, The Fight for the Standard hang upon Mr. Frazer's walls. Dr. Hodge has helped to sweeten the school life environment of the Thayer students and has their appreciative thanks.

Somewhat over a year ago Mrs. Thayer presented to Mr. Frazer's room a portrait of her late husband, Rev. William M. Thayer, which picture is a benediction to each child as he looks upon it. A few days ago Mrs. Thayer also presented some pictures taken from her former residence—The Old Oaken Bucket, Home on a Furlough, Signing the Agreement in the Cabin of the Mayflower, Emancipation Proclamation, and the late Mr. Thayer's certificate as a member of the Pilgrim Society.

Friends of the school and pupils alike are grateful to her for ministering to the adornment of the uncomely schoolroom walls and for the pleasant way in which she gave the pictures.

The citizens of Franklin are most cordially invited to visit the schools and note their attractiveness. We try to do our work faithfully and any just criticism will be gratefully received.

In behalf of the above-named schools, their teachers and school authorities, allow the writer to thank you, one and all, for your generous support in our good cause, and it is the hope that other rooms in town may be more beautifully adorned by the efforts of school friends. The good work has an excellent start; may it go on!

Pupils

of any of the schools intending to avail themselves of the school discount should plan to come in as soon as possible. The possibility of bad weather, added to the rush of class work near the end of the term, makes delays unsatisfactory to all concerned. "Come early and avoid the rush."

STILL the Kentucky shooting matter "hangs fire." It's a pity the gun didn't.

WILL the killing of Filipinos be ended before election? It will have to be, or else it will have its effect.

IF you don't find anything in your favorite paper now but base ball remember that you have had a respite all winter.

* * *

GET ready to tell the census enumerator all that he asks you and don't "keep back part of the price" or you will suffer.

* * *

CAN it be that Kitchener and Roberts have fallen out? That was too strong a team to have any pulling apart. Perhaps that's only a diversion of the enemy.

* * *

GEN. OTIS will be here soon. Will he go the way of Dewey? By the way, what has become of the admiral's presidential aspirations? Have his "managers" called him off?

* * *

SENATOR HOAR may not have convinced the country that he is right, but he has added another star to his galaxy, indicative of honesty of conviction, however mistaken it may be.

* * *

CLARK of Montana won't be allowed to remain in congress, and it will long be remembered that this congress has had three memorable contests on its hands, that of Mormon Roberts, Boss Quay and Briber Clark.

* * *

IT appears that the British are not willing to exchange prisoners, man for man. It would seem as if they did not care to have any more Boer sharpshooters holden among the Vaal rocks, picking off the British "Tommies." That's natural.

* * *

THE collection of our indemnity of $90,000 from the Sultan of Turkey for the destruction of missionary buildings looks as far off as ever, from the fact that the sultan has a number of cards up his sleeve which he can play which look like trumps.

THEY are having a hard time in the third congressional district to find a man willing to run against Congressman Thayer, and it looks as if there would be warm times before the matter is settled. In any event this Republican district ought to send a good, staunch Republican to fill Walker's shoes.

SECRETARY LONG is still a "long" way ahead of the other candidates for the vice presidency, but we do not believe that New England will capture the plum, after all. The politicians hope to stampede the convention to Roosevelt, but the latter declares that he won't be stampeded, any more than he was at San Juan.

HILL has risen from his political grave long enough to advise Bryan to drop his free silver and turn his attention to the trusts and imperialism. There is no question but that would be Bryan's trump card, but it is a question whether he can be made to see it. These are the days when the party should make the platform and the candidate stand upon it.

THE Schley Sampson matter has again risen to the surface, owing to an article by the editor of the Baltimore American, insisting that pressure has been brought upon President McKinley to do Schley justice. This matter seems as little likely to down as Banquo's ghost, and neither side is willing to give the other any credit. Perhaps the line will eventually be found about midway between the claims of each.

NEARLY every British general who went to South Africa with a long military record has proven unable to sustain it there, fighting against civilized men. Unfortunately many of these famous "records" were secured in wars with semi-civilized peoples. South Africa has always been known as the "grave yard" of reputations. Will Roberts himself be able to conquer the hoodoo? At present he is England's only hope.

Doan's Kidney Pills

Make well kidneys—they are not a new medicine—not an experiment—they've been tested and thousands endorse their merit. Here's a case of it:

Mr. J. W. Parker, carpenter in the wood turning department of the Fitchburg Car Shops, Fitchburg, Mass., says: "In the month of February, 1896, I was asked by a gentleman who called on me to publicly give my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills. What I gave him for publication has appeared in our Fitchburg papers. I was interviewed a second time over two years afterwards when I told my interviewer the following: Ever since my original statement appeared in the Fitchburg papers, I have been repeatedly asked by people in the shops where I work, on the street, and by callers at my house if the said statement were true. I often wished it were in Halifax, and in allowing my name to appear as an endorser of Doan's Kidney Pills during the coming year, I want it thoroughly understood that they proved of great benefit and from my experience I can conscientiously say they are one patent medicine upon which people can depend to do as represented."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers; price 50 cents a box. Mailed on receipt of price by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

LEM MADE A HIT.

The Office Boy Comes to the Rescue of the Editor at a Critical Moment.

"Lem," said the proprietor of the Podunck Clarion, "let's wake up."

"What's the matter?" asked the office boy, as he wiped his hands off on his apron.

"We're gittin' behind the times agin. We ain't keepin' up with the percession. We've got to give our readers something up to date."

"Somethin' about Admiral Dewey," suggested the boy.

"That's the idea. Let's write up a lot of anecdotes about prominent folks for our next week's issue. Maybe it'll do the circulation good."

"Every family in town takes the paper now. And puttin' in anecdotes won't make 'em pay up."

"Well, it'll look well, anyhow. You go to work, and I'll see what arrangements I can make about a load o' wood that a big advertiser has promised me."

He was absent an hour, and on his return Lem laid on his desk a proof slip containing the following:

A GOOD ONE ON DEWEY.

When Admiral Dewey first went to the Naval academy he was a very young man. As he grew older day by day, he began to get whiskers which he was obliged to cut off. For this purpose he was accustomed to use a razor. Another student, who was also a young man, came in and found the future admiral shaving. Of course, young Dewey did not know he was going to be an admiral then. But then if he had known it he would no doubt have joked familiarly with those around him, just the same. Such is the delightful simplicity of his character.

"What are you doing?" asked his class mate.

"Cutting off my whiskers."

"But you haven't any whiskers yet."

"No. But I expect to razor few."

Little did young Dewey dream that he would wake up to find his words thus treasured in history. It all goes to show what an American boy can do if he will only try.

"Lem," said the editor, as he looked at the office boy over his spectacles, "that's great. Write some more of 'em. That sounds just like the real thing."—Washington Star.

Baked Apples Glazed.

This is a pretty, though simple, dish. Choose some small apples of an equal size, remove the cores, peel them and let them boil in water acidulated with lemon juice or citric acid and sweetened. Do not let them boil too fast or the apples will break. Keep them covered. Drain when they are soft, place in a basin and pour a little sirup over them and let them cool. Well coat them with apricot or apple marmalade and decorate on the top with angelica cut into rounds. Fill the center of the apples with preserved cherries and fruit jelly and dish in a group, with strips of angelica cut to represent leaves at placed around the dish.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Cocoanut Bread Pudding.

Cut a small stale baker's loaf in one-third inch slices. Butter generously and put in a buttered baking dish, sprinkling each layer with shredded cocoanut. Beat three eggs slightly, add one-half cup sugar, one-quarter teaspoonful salt and one quart milk. Strain and pour over the bread. Let stand one hour. Bake in a slow oven 45 minutes, covering the first 15 minutes. Serve with hot or cold sauce.—Detroit Free Press.

Safe Advice.

Be sure you are right—then hold the stakes while the other fellows bet.

Will Was Her Own.

"You sign this deed of your own free will, do you, madam?" asked the notary public.

"What do you mean by that?" demanded the large, red-faced woman.

"I mean there has been no compulsion on the part of your husband, has there?"

"Him?" she ejaculated, turning to look at the meek little man sitting behind her. "I'd like to see him try to compulse me!"—Tit-Bits.

Woman's Prerogative.

A Fair Inference.

"It is said," remarked Mrs. Small at the breakfast table, "that the Zunis prefer tough meat, that they may enjoy the pleasure of mastication longer."

Do you not sometimes labor under the impression that you are keeping a Zuni boarding house?" asked Mr Watty, in reply.—Harlem Life.

WOMAN WASHES SOCKS.

A Chicago Wife Cleans and Mends Friends' Fancy Hose and Handkerchiefs for a Living.

A young married woman of Chicago residing on the North side has recently kept herself busy with an occupation which promises to be successfully remunerative, says the Chronicle. Her husband was unfortunate, which necessitated the sale of their home and most of the furniture. The remaining furniture was placed in a small house. The clever wife had two rooms left unfurnished save for a gas stove and a table she intended to use in her business. When settled in her new small quarters she sent letters to her friends and acquaintances intimating her desire to undertake the washing of their fancy handkerchiefs, laces of all kinds, silk stockings, waistcoats and all dainty articles that could not be intrusted to the usual laundress. In a very short time she had more work than she could undertake single-handed, so she employed the services of a woman, whom she allowed to wash the articles and do any of the rough work, while she devoted her spare time to the careful ironing. Very soon the energetic wife was earning quite a sum of money in a quiet way. The rooms devoted to the occupation were kept quite apart and the family put to no inconvenience.

A New African Town.

The Westminster Gazette tells of an English night editor who found in a dispatch this information: "The Boers have taken umbrage," and who wrote for it a displayed headline, starting off in this style: "Capture of Umbrage by the Boers." He tried to pad his dispatch by giving an account of the location of Umbrage, but was unable to find a town of that name in the gazetteer. It may be observed that the exploit of this night editor throws ordinary newspaper blunders into the shade.

A SAILOR'S YARNS.

How Liquor on Board Ship Plays Havoc with the Discipline of the Crew—Awful Experiences.

The secretary of the American Seamen's Friend society says in the Sailors' Magazine: One day not long ago an old sailor came into his office and spun the following yarns to him, and they are here reproduced as a specimen of "life on the ocean wave."

"We were on the Jason from Liverpool to Calcutta. We had good winds and set all sails, even the studding sails on both sides of the ship. We couldn't find a yard for one, and the second mate sent me and another to the hold to find a yard. When we got down there we saw boxes of spirits, and knocked the lids off some of them. I took a bottle out and handed it to him. The fore hatch being off, I jumped up and he passed the bottle up and I put it in the leg of one of my sea-boots; that night we drank it. One of the watch asked me where I got it. I told him. That night the watch went down and got a case up. We kept it quiet for two or three weeks, and the other watch did not know of it. One day one of our watch gave a drink to a man in the other watch. They found out we had liquor, and stole it from us. The mate's watch all got drunk on deck and got to fighting. While the men were fighting-drunk, a German sailor was at the wheel for four hours. When I took the wheel from the German the wind blowing off the starboard side, the captain stood close to me on the lee side to smell my breath, but smelt no liquor on me, because the other fellows had stolen it. I stayed at the wheel two hours, till two o'clock, and the man who took the wheel from me was half full, and he told me that my watch mates had been down the hold and stole another case of gin and had it in the forecastle head. He told me to be careful when I went forward. When I went I had a drink. We picked out one man as the man who stole the liquor while we were asleep. Some wanted to take him out of his bunk and throw him overboard, when the vessel was sailing ten or eleven knots an hour. 'No,' said I, 'if we do, we'll be tried for murder. We'll just get his chest and throw that overboard.' We got it and threw it over the side. A German was asleep on the chest rolled up in a white blanket. When he was rolled over they thought he was awake and would tell on them the next day; so they determined to throw him overboard. 'No,' said I; I drew my sheath knife and said: 'I'll cut any man who touches him and I'll call the mate.' They left him alone. The next morning the man who owned the chest went to the captain. Fighting went on then every day for two months. The captain knew about the liquor, but couldn't stop it. At last we got to Calcutta, and the captain hoisted a flag for the police, and we were all taken before a magistrate and tried for mutiny and broaching cargo on the high seas. Some got three months, some six, some nine, and some 12 months.

THE MATE'S WATCH ALL GOT DRUNK.

"There was a ship going to New Zealand with emigrants aboard, and the crew got hold of cases of candles and matches; and they lighted three or four candles in the hold to look for liquor. They found it, and went down night after night and became crazy from the effects of the liquor, and left burning candles in the hold. The ship caught fire, and out of 360 emigrants there was only one boat's crew saved, 12 out of 22 being seamen. There was nothing in the boat—no water, no food. A sick woman in the boat was killed and eaten to save life. Days after the boat was picked up by the British Princess and the saved were landed in St. Helena. This was in the seventies.

"I worked four or five nights on a ship to get off the planks that covered the cargo so as to get at the liquor. Got one or two planks down, and I got inside, but there was little room to move, but I got hold of one case, but it turned out to be jam. I passed it up, took the jars out and threw the empty case overboard. Found out the liquor was at the other end of the ship. Got another case, which looked like a long trunk and had a padlock on it. I broke it open and found it filled with fancy slippers, and divided them among four of us toughs, each taking 50 or 60 pairs, and threw many overboard. Had jam enough to last all the way to Sydney. Two weeks before we got there the captain found out we had been broaching cargo. My mate told me the carpenter told him that. I told him I didn't believe it, and that he was frightened because he had 60 pair. He and his partner threw away what slippers he got. Me and my partner got ours into Sydney and the captain never knew about it. We sold them to a Jew shop night after night.

"Three years ago, when I was 67 years old, I was on a vessel at pier 9, New York, and the German cook belonged to the Mariners' church, and he took me up there several nights, and he was a good Christian. I went with him just to pass the time. Heard many sailors give their testimonies. When I went back the devil said to me: 'Don't listen to those men—they get their living out of that.' The German cook talked to me night after night. I heard Mr. Boult, and his words made a great impression on my heart, and he made things plain and made me feel that there was a God and another world. His words made an impression that I didn't want to hear anybody else preach. For two or three months this went on, and then I came to Christ. I never knew a day's happiness until I came to Christ. And now I want to do all the good I can."

This is the sailor's yarn, almost word for word. The editor has looked up his record since his conversion and finds that he is an earnest out-and-out Christian. What hath God wrought!

THE SOCIAL FEATURE.

Proves the Greatest Attraction of the Saloon—Experience of a Patron of Saloons.

A correspondent of the New York Sun touches upon a vital point in the saloon business when he says: "An experience of about 15 years as a patron of saloons qualifies me to speak with knowledge, if not with authority, on the subject, and my observation is that the saloon keeper derives a large part of his revenue by conducting his place in such a manner as to meet the social wants of his customers and to foster the convivial spirit among them. During the first five or six years of this experience, what drinking I did was done wholly in the convivial way, and not either from the need or the desire of alcoholic stimulation. In time, of course, the desire and perhaps the need of the stimulation was created, and I visited the saloons for drink as well as for social recreation, but even then, under the influence of the attractive surroundings, absorbed more alcohol than I needed, and left more money in the proprietor's till than would have been the case had the drink been the sole object of my visit."

DELAYED THE WEDDING TOUR.

Sad Story of a Young Man's Downfall on the Night of His Marriage.

There were a whole lot of sensational features at a recent swell wedding on the West side, which, for obvious reasons, never got into the society columns of the papers. They are too good to remain in obscurity, however, and are here related, the names, of course, being fictitious.

Hawkins was the groom, and the bride was the only daughter of a wealthy family, who are fervent members of the Methodist church. After the ceremony a reception was held at the house, the departure of the young couple on their wedding tour being set for 10:30 o'clock. About 9:30 o'clock Hawkins stole away from the house to a saloon about a block away.

As it happened, two of his acquaintances, who had not a very high opinion of him, and had a grudge to satisfy, were in the saloon. They noticed Hawkins' full-dress suit, and he, in an unwonted burst of generosity, asked them to take something.

"Give us a small bottle of champagne," said Hawkins.

"Why all these togs?" asked one of the men.

"Been getting married," responded Hawkins. "The old folks are teetotalers, and it was pretty dry around at the house, so I just slipped out to get a bracer. You know I seldom drink anything, but I feel pretty nervous tonight."

The two acquaintances congratulated Hawkins, and in honor of the wedding insisted on buying another bottle of wine, which was followed by another. By the time the third bottle had disappeared, Hawkins insisted on a fourth, and when that had been disposed of he was decidedly overcome. It was then 10:30 o'clock.

"Better go home, Hawkins," said one of his companions.

Hawkins wept at the suggestion. "Goin' sthay in here," he announced. "Giv's 'nother bot'l."

The bottle was duly finished, after which Hawkins sat down in a chair and went to sleep. The other two men, who were pretty gay by this time, began to undress the unconscious bridegroom. They took off his collar and white tie, then his shirt and undershirt, after which they replaced his vest and coat. Then they removed his shoes and stockings, after which they put his shoes on. Last of all, they blacked Hawkins' face and then they roused him from his sleep.

"Come on, Hawkins, we'll walk around to the house with you," they said, and almost carrying the staggering Hawkins they sallied out, one on each side of him.

When they reached the house there was a scene. The bride was standing on the steps, almost distracted, and her parents had blood in their eyes. The wretched Hawkins was oblivious to everything, however, and had to be carried upstairs and put to bed, while the bride had a fit of hysterics and her mother snapped out: "I told you you'd regret this. I never was satisfied with the match."

As the two conspirators left Hawkins' room after putting him to bed, the mother-in-law stopped them and asked how he had got into such a disgraceful condition. They professed entire ignorance.

"We were coming along Madison street," they explained, "when we saw him sitting on the curbstone, with a lot of boys tormenting him. We drove the boys away, and after finding out his name and address brought him home. He is an entire stranger to us."

How Hawkins squared himself is not known, but he did eventually, and the wedding tour began two days later than the date set for it. It is believed that the teetotal principles of his wife's parents have been adopted by him, as he has not been known to take a drink since that night.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Knew the Sex.

"I don't see how you ever won that cold Miss Snow."

"It was really quite easy."

"How did you do it?"

"I made her think I didn't want her, and it became a matter of pride with her to get me."—Chicago Post.

Not at All Strange.

Mrs. Bronxborough—I really believe that Mrs. Roxe loves her husband more than she did when they were first married.

Mrs. Richmond—That is quite natural. He has more money than he had at that time.—N. Y. Journal.

Not Realism.

"I thought you said that you believed in realism in literature."

"What makes you think I don't?"

"Because in your last story you said they were married and lived happily ever afterward."—Chicago Post.

Dangers of the Grip.

The greatest danger from la grippe is of its resulting in pneumonia. If reasonable care is used, however, and Chamberlain's Cough Remedy taken all danger will be avoided. Among the tens of thousands who have used this remedy for la grippe we have yet to learn of a single case having resulted in pneumonia, which shows conclusively that this remedy is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. It will cure la grippe in less time than any other treatment. It is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

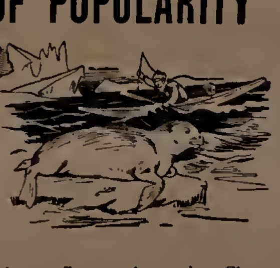
THE PENALTY OF POPULARITY



sometimes is death, as in the case of the fur seal.

He is very well thought of.
What is the result?
He is sought after, even under the cannon of revenue cutters.
Men risk fine and imprisonment to make his intimate acquaintance, but it means death to the seal.
There is another sort of seal that may be cultivated without risk to any one concerned.

It is the seal used to indicate the best coffees on the market, Chase & Sanborn's.

This is the seal that has become valuable because the public know when they see it that the cans or richly colored parchment-lined imported bags on which it appears contains a coffee to which there is no superior.

Like everything else, you must pay a few cents more for the best, but purity, quality which means health and satisfaction, which only can come when the best is used, is worth the difference in price.

Chase & Sanborn's Seal on coffee packages signalizes the endorsement by a firm who have built up an enviable reputation of being dealers in the finest coffee imported into America.

Face About.

Face about, I say, because, although for nearly half a century the church and the saloon have been at war, they have never faced each other in an open field Which means, of course, that the saloon has determined, for both itself and its antagonist, a policy for the conduct of hostilities.—The New Voice.

CHARACTER OF THE BOERS.

Natural Result of the Difficulties and Dangers They Have Gone Through.

Though au fond their natures and characters may be much alike, there is at this day a considerable difference in many of their ideas owing to the different life they have led for several generations; and it must also be remembered that the Transvaal Boer is of a rebel stock—his band against every man, and every man's hand against him. In 1835, when the great trek from the colony took place, these men's ancestors were the men who defied the government—with great good cause in many instances—and whose hearts were filled with bitterness and loathing, whose one idea was to get away from their oppressors, says Mrs. Lionel Phillips in "Some South African Recollections."

The difficulties and dangers that they went through, fighting wild beasts as well as Kaffirs, although it gave them a rugged independence, at the same time developed some of the very qualities possessed by their new foes—namely, treachery and a callous cruelty. Hence, one has to distinguish between them and the colonial Boer, who during the same period has gradually been enjoying the advantages of settled government and contact with a superior class of persons. The Boer living on his solitary farm has been so exempt from laws and has gone his own way for so many years that now force is the only argument that appeals to him.

The Eminent Kidney and Bladder Specialist.

The Discoverer of Swamp-Root at Work in His Laboratory.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Then the richness of the blood—the albumen—leaks out and the sufferer has Bright's Disease, the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root the new discovery is the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases, after all other efforts have failed. At druggists in fifty-cent and dollar sizes. A sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling about Swamp-Root and its wonderful cures. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. and mention this paper.

Apple Sauce for Roast Fowls.

Quarter and core tart apples, bake until tender in stock seasoned with salt, white pepper, stick cinnamon and a little cayenne, and press through a fine sieve; when cool beat with a wire egg whip until light, add the stiffly beaten whites of eggs, allowing two to each pint, beat well together and heap in a pretty serving dish.—Boston Budget.

Quinine.

Two-thirds of the quinine consumed is produced in the island of Java, from cultivated trees, the young plants having been procured by the Dutch government from Peru in 1852. The English government also started cinchona plantations in India, which now produce large quantities of quinine.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

DEADLY SEASONINGS.

They Are Sometimes Used in the Orient to Assassinate Objectionable Persons.

The ways of the east are devious, and an intelligent anticipation of coming events is a marked feature in Indian palace rule. The dreaded cholera is an ever present disease, but more men die "officially" of it than is actually the case. The cholera morbus kills its tens of thousands, no doubt; but powdered glass, finely cut up camel's hair and bamboo chips assist in the fell work, says the New York Journal.

Is a resident inconveniently active? Then in his curry he may discover pulverized glass, which, once swallowed, imitates the disease sufficiently closely to account for death. The papers the other day announced the attempted assassination of a well-known Indian resident by this method; but, happily, enough, the deadly plot failed. The camel's hair and minute portions of bamboo are equally efficacious, and are exceedingly difficult to discover when cunningly mixed by a suborned cook.

These facts sufficiently explain the elaborate precautions against poisoning taken by all oriental monarchs. The sultan of Turkey actually has each dish sealed so as to avoid any tampering with the food in transit from kitchen to the dining hall.

A taster partakes of each dish before the autocrat and lord of millions can safely eat from it, and even then the haunted dread of death waits ever upon him.

WHEN NOT TO KEEP BOOKS.

Getting Ahead in the Accounts Without Anything to Show for It.

She decided that the only way to run a house economically was to keep a set of books, so she made all necessary purchases, including a bottle of red ink, and started in.

It was a month later when her husband asked her how she was getting along.

"Splendidly," she replied.

"The system is a success, then?"

"Yes, indeed. Why, I'm $66 ahead already."

"Sixty-six dollars!" he exclaimed. "Heavens! You'll be rich before long. Have you started a bank account?"

"No-o; not yet."

"What have you done with the money?"

"Oh, I haven't got the money, you know. That's only what the books show. But just think of being $66 ahead."

"Um, yes. But I don't exactly see—"

"And all in one month, too!"

"Of course; but the money? What has become of that?"

"I don't exactly know," she said, doubtfully. "I've been thinking of that, and I think we must have been robbed. What do you think we had better do about it?"

He puffed his pipe in solemn silence for a moment, and then suggested:

"We might stop keeping books. That's easier than complaining to the police."

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
NORFOLK, ss.

SUPERIOR COURT.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court, next to be holden at Dedham, within and for the county of Norfolk:

Respectfully represents and libels George E. Despeaux of Medway, in said county, that he was lawfully married to Addie E. Despeaux, now of Eastford, in the state of Connecticut, at Hopedale, in the county of Worcester, September 3, 1884, and thereafterwards your libellant and the said Addie lived together as husband and wife in this commonwealth at Medway, in said Norfolk county, that your libellant has always been faithful to his marriage vows and obligations, but the said Addie, being wholly regardless of the same at said Medway on or about the twenty-fifth day of January, 1900, committed the crime of adultery with one Nelson Tanner and has committed said crime with said Tanner on divers days and times between January 25, 1900, and the date of this libel.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Addie E. Despeaux.

Dated the eleventh day of April, 1900
GEORGE E. DESPEAUX.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
NORFOLK, SS.

SUPERIOR COURT.

On the foregoing libel it is ordered that the libellant give notice to the said Addie E. Despeax, the libellee, to appear before the justices of this court, to be holden at Dedham, within and for said county, on the first Monday of June next, by causing an attested copy of said libel, and of this order thereon, to be published once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper printed at Franklin, in the county of Norfolk, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before the said first Monday of June next, and further, by sending through the mail, as soon as may be, by a registered letter addressed to the last known residence of the said Addie E. Despeaux an attested copy of said libel and of this order thereon, that the said Addie E. Despeaux may then and there show cause why the prayer of said libel should not be granted.

By the Court.
LOUIS A. COOK, Clerk.
April 16, A. D. 1900.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
NORFOLK, SS.
FRANKLIN, MASS., April 24, A. D. 1900.

Seized and taken on execution and will be sold at public auction on TUESDAY, the TWENTY-NINTH day of MAY, A. D. 1900,

at two o'clock in the afternoon, at my office in Morse Block in Franklin, in said county, all the right, title and interest that Lawrence McGuinnis, alias McGinnis, of Medway, in said county of Norfolk, had (not exempt from attachment or levy on execution) on the twenty-eighth day of November, A. D. 1899, at ten o'clock in the forenoon (being the time the same was attached on mesne process) in and to the following described real estate, to wit: A certain tract of land situated in Medway, in said county of Norfolk, on the northerly side of Village street, with buildings thereon, and bounded as follows: Commencing at the southeasterly corner of the premises on said Village street; thence running northerly on land formerly of one Eaton, and known as the Eaton place, to land supposed to belong to one Wentworth, formerly of one Philbrick; thence westerly on said Wentworth land to a stake and stones at the northerly end of a drain at land of William Scroeder; thence southerly along the line of said drain and with said Scroeder land to said Village street; thence easterly with said Village street to the point of beginning, being the Phillips place, so called, and a part of the Dr. Brown estate, so called.

A certain tract of land situated in Medway, in said county of Norfolk, on the southerly side of Village street, opposite the above described tract, and bounded northerly on said Village street, southwesterly by Charles river and easterly by land supposed to belong formerly to Mrs. A. H. Clark, and being the second parcel described in the mortgage of Lawrence McGinnis to Margaret H. Kenny, dated August 6, 1895, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, book 744, page 522.

PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin and all other persons interested in the estate of Jane D. Fisher, late of Franklin, in said county, deceased:

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said court for probate by Metcalf E. Pond of Franklin, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, without giving a surety on his official bond,

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham, in said county of Norfolk, on the sixteenth day of May, A. D. 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper published in Franklin, the last publication to be one day at least before said court, and by mailing, postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate seven days at least before said court.

Telegraph Operator Croissant is making arrangements to obtain the base ball scores of the league teams about 7 o'clock each evening, so that lovers of the sport may not have to wait until the next morning to learn the result of their favorite game.

The new tree warden, Dr. Hodge, has arranged for the planting of three trees at the High school grounds, on Saturday morning, at 9 o'clock, with exercises by the pupils. The public is invited. The trees are two magnolias, stellata and soulangenena, and a catalpa dignonioides.

Miss Laura E. Blake gave her very instructive lecture on "Banks and Banking" before the economics class of the High school, Monday. This is the first of several lectures which are to be given to the class on economic subjects by friends of the school.

The bill of the M. A. & W. Street Railway company which passed the house was amended in the senate Tuesday by adding a clause which makes the company more or less dependent on the selectmen in the various towns through which the company is to operate.

Now that the Norfolk Western District court is to be telephonically connected it would seem to be very easy to appear before his honor Judge Doe by telephone rather than appear in person. The new 'phone cannot fail to be found of convenience and will surely be appreciated.

Mrs. G. R. Winsor, Mrs. C. B. Johnson and Miss Caroline W. Rockwood attended a reception tendered Miss Mary E. Wooley, the newly elected president of Mt. Holyoke at the Vendome in Boston yesterday. Miss Wooley was a graduate of Wheaton in 1884 and is greatly beloved.

N. B. Stone, former manager of the Town farm here, but now in charge at Medway, tells us that he is very pleasantly situated, having but about thirteen patients to care for, no farm to till and a new $10,000 establishment. At the same time he has a very pleasant remembrance of Franklin, and numbers many friends here.

The street railway committee reported Tuesday favorably to the senate the general bill giving rights of joint use of tracks of adjacent street railways when public necessity seems to require, under supervision of the state railroad commissioners. This is the action urged by the SENTINEL recently and opposed by the Boston Elevated.

There will be a social and entertainment under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid society of the Baptist church at the home of Mrs. A. F. Pendleton on Union street, next Wednesday evening. The house is large and will easily accommodate all who wish to attend. Supper will be served from 6 to 7.30. A very enjoyable time is expected.

The Milford News says of the entertainment Monday evening arranged by Rev. Mr. Miner in Medway: "The entertainment of Christ church guild, which was held in Sanford hall, was of a high order and by far the best entertainment that has been given in the hall this season and deserving of the large attendance which it had.

Charles E. Clark died Tuesday night, aged 55 years, at the residence of his mother on King street. He had been sick a long time and was a great care to relatives. At one time he was engaged in manufacturing enterprises, and was twice married. He was born in Milford, and was the son of the late Willard Clark, who carried on the meat business here for many years.

The funeral of Mrs. Bliss Cook was held last Friday afternoon at the house, Rev. Mr. Sleeper officiating. The bearers were C. W. Shippee, Charles Hull, Sanford Wales and Mr. Coates The singers were Mrs. M. F. Coleman, Fannie Darling, Roy Hartshorne and Eben Thurber. There were floral offerings from her bible class and shopmates. There was singing at the grave and the committal service.

Dean academy went to Cambridge on Wednesday to meet the Harvard freshmen, losing by a score of 3 to 1. They were up against Walter Clarkson, the semi-professional pitcher, who is in Harvard this year, and he was quite effective against our boys, striking out eighteen of them. Errors on both sides were responsible for the runs. Jennes did good work, however, striking out twelve men.

The Heliotype and Trowbridge Piano company nines are getting into condition for what bids fair to be an exciting and hair raising battle for supremacy on the base ball diamond. Both teams are taking daily practice and confidence is not lacking on the part of the players of either nine that their side is surely to be in the lead at the finish. The game will be pulled off at Indian Rock park tomorrow afternoon.

Dr. A. J. Gallison and Walter Hawkins leave for New York tonight, sailing for Europe tomorrow. As this is the doctor's first trip across the water be is looking forward with pleasant anticipations to many new and novel experiences, to say nothing of the increased facilities for pushing his medical researches. He has not settled definitely upon the length of his stay, but it will probably be a number of months. Bon voyage.

Another aged resident passed away in South Franklin on Tuesday, Herman B. Miller, aged 76. He was born here, but his boyhood was spent in Maine. He leaves two sons, George and Arthur, and two daughters, Olive, and Mrs. Wadsworth. He was an uncle of F. M. Richardson, the marketman. He was formerly a blacksmith and later a farmer, and was highly respected by all. The funeral was held this forenoon, Rev. Mr. Sneath officiating.

"Nan, the Mascot," is to be the attraction at the Opera house on Thursday evening, produced by the St. Mary's Dramatic society. This organization is composed of Thespians of unusual talent, and the play has been under excellent supervision for some time, so that its production might be at once meritorious and pleasing. There is little doubt but that the players will be greeted by a crowded house. A dance will be enjoyed after the play.

Rev. Dr. Hodge announces a list of subjects for the next few Sundays somewhat out of the usual line, and it would seem of considerable interest. "Alexander Dumas' Reasons for Being Happy," "The Psychology of the Scarlet Letter," "Kipling's Story of the Ship that Found Herself," "Ruskin's Crown of Wild Olive" and "The Man with the Hoe" are the morning subjects up to June. In the afternoon Dr. Hodge is treating the history of the doctrine of a future life along the line of its Jewish and Christian development.

The St. John's Guild entertainment next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock will be novel and interesting. Stanton H. King, superintendent of the Sailors' Haven, Charlestown, Mass., will deliver a lecture entitled "Twelve Years Before the Mast," being a detailed account of personal reminiscences and the recital of adventures in the merchant marine and naval service. Mr. King possesses great descriptive power and much magnetism, and will surely interest his audience. He will bring with him several sailors, who will sing "Shanties," or sea hauling songs and give sailor dances. An elocutionist, vocalists and a dancer, all from Boston, will add spice and interest to the entertainment. Afterwards dancing will be indulged in by those who may desire.

So delighted were many of our people with Rev. Mr. Koehne's lectures at the Congregational church recently that quite a number are planning to go over to Wrentham next week to hear him again. He commences on Sunday evening in the Congregational church, the subjects being as follows on succeeding evenings: Sunday, "The Preparation for Christianity Through Judaism;" Monday, "The Preparation Through the Gentile Religions;" Tuesday, "The Apostolic Church;" Wednesday, "The Church of the Reformation;" Thursday, "Modern Skepticism;" Friday, "The New Aristocracy." It is possible that a barge will be secured upon some of the evenings provided a sufficient number care to go.

Speaking with prominent Republicans about town every one expresses himself as being decidedly pleased with the action of the senate in turning down "Boss" Quay, on the principle that this was the first step in the purification of Pennsylvania's politics. There are plenty of other states boss-ridden, and Massachusetts is none too free from managerial dictation. In any event it is hoped that the lesson which the Keystone state is to learn will not go unheeded by other states.

Mrs. William Thayer has presented the Congregational church for its curio room some rare copies of sermons and other papers. Also the following interesting receipts: "Franklin, 23d Aug., 1770. Rec'd of Peter Whiting ten pounds for to hire men for the Rhode Island Expedition, Amos Partridge St" "Wrentham, September 7, 10, 1767, then Received of Daniel Holbrook, the first gardain of Miriam Thayer, the sum of sixteen shillings Lawfull money and sundry other things, as one Quilt, one chence gown, one silk crape gown, one white gown, one Russel gown, one Red camblet Riding hood three ribbins two pitten beers two towels two white Neccloath one black gaws Neccloath and a Vail one Velvit hood one pare of shoes and one pare of stockings two white aprons and three sheets, Six puter platters and six puter plates one Quart pot to basons two porringers one black chist with draws. I say Received by me. Samuel Morse gardein."

Full of Years.

With the death of Henry Bemis on Wednesday morning there passed from Franklin its oldest and one of its most respected residents. For more than fifty years he has resided here and has a host of friends. He was born in Lincoln and survived his wife and one son many years. In his day, when Franklin's inhabitants were few, he was undertaker, church janitor, blacksmith, wheelwright, jeweler and harness maker, and his old red shop at the north end has for years been a landmark in Franklin. It was also his duty to toll the church bell, indicating the death of residents, the stroke announcing the years of the deceased. After the introduction of the Woonsocket electrics last fall he took his first ride by that means of propulsion, and remarked that he never expected to travel by electricity. Although so well along in years, aged 91, he enjoyed excellent health until quite recently and his genial good nature made him a friend to everyone.

The funeral will be held at the house on Saturday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, Rev. Dr. Hodge officiating.

At Dean Tonight.

The Dean Literary society will hold an open meeting this evening to which the public is invited. The society will present "The Happy Pair," and a meritorious entertainment is assured.

An Afternoon of Profit.

The Mothers' section were delightfully entertained at Elm Farm yesterday. After a greeting from Mrs. Ray in her usual happy manner, Dr. Kate Sanborn of Medway was introduced. A most entertaining paper followed in which Dr. Sanborn gave the mothers present the benefit of her thought, experience and reading, the subject being "The Care of Girls from a Physician's Standpoint." The doctor was ready with bright and sensible answers for the questions put to her in the informal chat "over the tea cups" which followed. The class felt that they not only spent a pleasant and profitable afternoon, but one which they should long remember.

An Interesting Service.

There was a large turn-out of Masons at the service at the Universalist church last Sunday morning. The Eastern Star order was also represented. The choir consisted of Messrs. Sherman and Hartshorne, and Misses Adams and Stark, the latter being a Cambridge lady who sang here Sunday for the first time, and whose singing was very much admired. Dr. Hodge's sermon was upon the text, "The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner." We presume there were many things in the sermon which meant more to the initiated than to anyone else, yet the various points were clear enough to all. Dr. Hodge said all masons are builders. The practical mason builds with tangible material. His work is upon houses, temples, churches, factories, public works. The speculative mason builds with intangible material. He builds character, he is shaping the edifice of a life.

After giving the history of the text—a quotation from a psalm written after the Hebrew exile—Dr. Hodge said the head of the corner is the stone which changes the line of advance and direction. The builder builds up to that, then turns and builds another way. Jesus turns the direction of the world's thought in regard to God. God is no longer a hostile Being needing a sacrifice to put him in good humor. He is always in good humor. He will always do that which is just, that which is best for men. It is not God who needs to be changed, but men. Jesus also changes the direction of human thought in regard to man. He revealed the value of the individual soul. And it is this which has abolished slavery and elevated women. Masonry is one of the grand expressions of this new thought of man. It holds to the brotherhood of man. It puts men on an equality.

There are certain people who may not be made Masons. But among them is not the man who is poor. Whoever crosses the Masonic threshold does so, not by virtue of his wealth, his rank, his position in society, but by virtue of his humanity. Jesus changes the direction of the world's thought also in regard to the way of living. One of the earliest names of Christian believers is "People of the Way" The old way was the way of selfishness and of vindictive justice. The new way is the way of unselfish care and thought for others. It is the way of forgiveness, of sympathy. Of this new way Masonry is an expression Dr. Hodge then went on to say that a thought involved in his text was that often the people who, from their profession, might be supposed to know what is needed for the future, in reality are the ones who do not know. The priests and Pharisees of Christ's time thought they knew. But they rejected the stone which has been the turning point of the world's life and the basis of all that is best in society civilization. Over and over since then the same kind of mistake has been made.

Applying the principle of the text to the individual, Dr. Hodge said there were some who rejected the religious element from their lives. No Mason, he said, could do this without being inconsistent with Masonry. Religion is not only the greatest element in shaping the life of the world today, but it is given to man to be the great helper in the living of his life as it ought to be lived. He who dispenses with it is a foolish builder. The Masonic brethren present paid very close attention to the discourse and expressed themselves as approving It very heartily

Report Denied.

It has been commonly reported and believed by many that in a certain room corporal punishment is very commonly inflicted. "Every day a number are whipped," one parent said, and was believed by many. Schools have been in session since last September—about 150 days. One scholar punished a day would mean 150 cases; two a day, 300 cases; three a day, 450. There have been six cases only in this room in 150 days.

Are you sure that other reports have any better foundation? Is it wise to trust the gossip of the streets without investigating? E. D. DANIELS.

Fresh Lobsters.

Hear ye! A delicacy! We shall receive at 4.30 p. m. on Saturday a selected lot of freshly boiled lobsters, finer than any ever received in town. You will want one when you have seen ours. Spinach, dandelions, radishes, lettuce, rhubarb, cucumbers, Bermuda onions; fresh-killed fowls, lamb, veal, pork, choice beef, and as a delicacy we have Van Camp's celebrated concentrated soups of all kinds. Try them. Also the Brunswick canned goods.

Of Unusual Interest.

The first magazine evening of the Alden club was held on April 23 The receipts from the sale of tickets for Mrs. Murphy's recital were $18 25. Mrs Ray spoke of the annual club social, May 14, which this year is to combine the features of the musical (postponed from Jan. 22) with the usual annual reception. Notice was given of the biennial convention of women's clubs to be held in Milwaukee June 3 9

Mrs. Whittaker then gave a detailed report of the State Federation meeting in Newburyport, April 20. The general subject of this meeting was "Arts and Crafts," being chosen because of the interest taken by club members in introducing among women in rural districts methods of textile manufacture which could be employed at home. Mrs. Ray explained the duties of the club members in regard to the election of officers at the last meeting of the year, when the chief question for discussion will be that of rotation in office.

The meeting was then put in charge of Miss King and Miss Whiting, the editors of the first club magazine, which contained the following very attractive table of contents, each number of which, together with the editorials, was greatly enjoyed by all: "The Club's Influence, What is It?" Mrs. E. K Ray; "The Mothers' Section," Mrs. Belle Sherman; "Imagination or Reason," Mrs. Chapman; "A Summer Holiday," Mrs. Haslam; "Boat Song," Miss Burrington; "Life in the Woods," Mrs. Martin; "The Boat of the Blessed Ghost," Mrs C. L. Daniels; music, Miss Tippan; "Fashion and Originality," Miss Burrington; "Even Song," words and music by Miss Hodge, song by Miss Whiting.

Owing to the lateness of the hour the reading of two numbers, a poem by Mrs. C. L. Daniels, and "History of the Club," by Miss Lydia P Ray was deferred till the meeting on May 28. It was unanimously voted that the magazine be printed and placed on sale at the last meeting of the year. The meeting was adjourned till the annual social, May 14

The Tent Caterpillar.

The tree warden makes the following suggestions regarding the tent caterpillar:

It is not now of much use to band trees with printer's ink or bodlime to protect them from the tent caterpillar. After the first frosts in the fall is the right time to apply bands of bodlime. Two measures can now be adopted: First, the eggs can be found on twigs of the tree in clusters, covered with a varnish which makes them impervious to water. Cut off all such twigs and burn them Second, the trees can be sprayed now and again just before the blossoms come with arsenate of lead. Paris green may be used, but the arsenate of lead in the proportion of three or four pounds to one hundred and fifty gallons of water is more effectual. When the tents are formed they can be pulled away, but this is not apt to be a thorough remedy. Burning the nests is not recommended. The great enemy of the tent caterpillar is the Baltimore oriole He should be encouraged. Firearms and unusual noises prevent him from building where they are to be heard, and the predatory cat also influences him in his selection of a location. All birds, more or less, destroy the tent caterpillar. The warden will be glad to advise in regard to the destruction of the tent caterpillar or the canker worm.

Waste in Cornfields.

The editor of Wallace's Farmer computes that Iowa loses $8,000,000 a year in ungathered cornstalks. In making this estimate he puts the value of the cornstalks at the low rate of one dollar an acre. On the same basis of valuation how much do Minnesota and the Dakotas lose? Would not the sum at least reach the million mark? Such loss is appalling. In the corn belt it reaches a prodigious sum. It must be stopped. No nation, however prosperous, can afford to waste the gifts of a kind Providence. The man who only cuts half his hay would soon be dealt with by the authorities. But where is the difference in such a course and in leaving cornstalks ungathered? The excuse made for not cutting cornstalks is the scarcity and dearness of labor. The remedy is not an impossible one. Grow less corn and turn up some other kind of food that can be harvested at some other season. The ability to grow so much corn is fraught with promise to the live stock interests of the country. It means that two or three times as much live stock will some day be grown as we have at the present time.

Mrs. J. C. Croly, who has just rounded her 70 years, is the literal embodiment of the woman's movement, being not only the progenitor of woman's clubdom, but the pioneer press woman of the country, says the New York World. Few of her contemporaries know that her pen name, "Jennie June," is one of the sweetest reminiscences of her childhood. When she was only 12 a gentleman who had been visiting her family wrote to a friend: "She is the Juneist little girl I ever knew!" In after years when she made her first adventure into print and sought for a signature she remembered the quaint fancy and promptly became "Jennie June."

Augustus Rice, of Cleveland, aged 35 years, of stalwart form, a sailor, and steeple climber, while en route from Green Bay, Wis., to Baltimore to board ship, was run over by a train at Sandpatch and his foot crushed. Rice is tattooed from head to foot. On the leg just above the crushed foot, is a beautiful tattoo representing the stars and stripes. He begged the doctors piteously not to mutilate the stars and stripes, saying: "Please save the old flag. I love it," just as he was overcome by the anaesthetic. The doctors were able to make amputation just below the emblem, and when Rice recovered consciousness he shouted with joy to know that the flag was saved.

Oklahoma enjoys the unique distinction of being the only state or territory east of the Rocky mountains which produced more wheat in 1899 than in 1898. The government statistician at Washington gives Oklahoma credit for 1,218,000 acres in winter wheat and a crop of 16,202,000 bushels. Only 12 of the 46 states of the union raised more wheat than Oklahoma did this year. The prominent grain states which produce less than Oklahoma are Missouri, Illinois, Michigan, Kentucky, Tennessee, Maryland and Texas.

During a recent holiday in New York the price of American Beauty roses went up to the usual figure of $30 a dozen and remained there. Lilacs sold in some places for four dollars a dozen. But it was the azaleas that brought the highest price. A basket of them was made up by a certain florist for a millionaire. The millionaire was a regular customer, but his basket cost $175.

"The women of Wichita," remarks the Kansas City Journal, "have been canvassing the town for subscriptions in aid of the poor. They tackled L. R. Delaney, of the Santa Fe, in a cigar store. He had just one nickel in his pocket. He took this out, walked over to the slot machine and dropped it in. Out rolled five dollars in nickels, which Delaney piled into the apron of one of the women."

CHINESE LAUNDRY HUMOR.

The Demure Mongolians Have Many a Quiet Laugh at the Expense of Caucasian Customers.

"Most people suppose," said an ex-Californian, "that the vertical row of hieroglyphics on a Chinese laundry check are merely so many numerals. As a matter of fact, they are nothing of the kind, but constitute a brief and spicy description of the individual who left the bundle. If you will take the trouble to notice it, you will see that the laundryman always goes through exactly the same programme. He takes the package, gives you a swift, comprehensive glance and then proceeds to decorate a slip of rice paper with from two to five India ink chicken tracks. What he has really written is probably something like this:

"'Fat foreign devil who resembles a pig; squinty eyes and a wart on the left side of his nose.'

"You carry around this flattering pen portrait, innocently imagining that it reads 'No. 4-11-44,' and when you call for your wash you will find that the Chinaman who receives the ticket will invariably look you over, making mental comparison before he reaches for the bundle. A Mongolian friend of mine out in 'Frisco put me onto the scheme, and I took the trouble to ascertain whether he was telling me the truth. I got a laundry slip, copied it with microscopic fidelity and submitted it to several expert native translators. They all agreed that it ran something like this:

"'Ridiculous old man; very pompous; bald head like a speckled egg.'

"You will observe that my hair grows rather high on my forehead and I have a few freckles, although nothing to justify such an insulting description. However, it proved the point. The next ticket I got declared I was 'an elderly gentleman resembling Yun-Tai, the wind god,' which pleased me immensely until I persuaded a native curio dealer to show me a statuette of the deity. Then I wanted to murder the laundryman. The Chinese are a deep people. They look as demure as guinea pigs, but all the while they are quietly sizing us up and having a big laugh in their sleeves."—N. O. Times-Democrat.

The Merciful Motorman.

"The fellow coming out of that saloon owes his life to me," said the Brooklyn motorman to the new hand to whom he was teaching the business.

"How's that?" asked the beginner, as he piled all the passengers to the front of the car by a quick movement of the brake.

"One night," explained the motorman, "he was lying helpless across the track, and I resisted, and conquered the temptation."—Brooklyn Life.

Mr. Wedder (with eight children)—Why, no, Bobby; what made you think so?

Bobby—Oh, I heard papa tell Kate that if she married you she'd have a whole menagerie to look after.—Brooklyn Life.

Matronly Advice.

"And remember, dear," said the experienced matron to the bride, "if you wish to preserve your husband's love, do not be jealous. Merely pretend to be. That will give him a good opinion of himself, and of your appreciation of his fascinations."—Indianapolis Journal.

Needed Cheering.

Husband—Smikeson's wife is away, and I'm going over there this evening to cheer him up.

Wife—Why don't you bring him here?

Husband—Well—er—I'm not feeling very well, and need a little cheering up myself.—N. Y. Weekly.

A Plain Declaration.

Fond Mother—Has Mr. Brown, with whom you have been dancing all the evening, at last declared his intentions?

"Yes, mamma."

"Thank goodness! What did he say?"

"He declared he would never get married."—Tit-Bits.

"The Noblest Mind

the best contentment has." Yet, however noble in mind, no man or woman can have perfect contentment without physical health. The blood must be kept pure and the stomach and digestive organs in good order. The best means for this purpose is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It promptly cures all blood humors and eruptions and tones up the system.

The favorite cathartic is Hood's Pills. 25 cents.

Try Grain-O! Try Grain-O!

Ask your grocer today to show you a package of Grain-O, the new food drink that takes the place of coffee. The children may drink it without injury as well as the adult. All who try it like it. Grain-O has that rich seal brown of Mocha or Java, but it is made from pure grains, and the most delicate stomach receives it without distress. One-fourth the price of coffee. 15c and 25c per package. Sold by all grocers.

Mothers! Mothers! Mothers!

How many children are at this season feverish and constipated, with bad stomach and headache. Mother Gray's Sweet Powders for Children will always cure. If worms are present they will certainly remove them. At all druggists, 25c. Sample mailed free. Address Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.

What Shall We Have for Dessert?

This question arises in the family every day. Let us answer it today. Try Jell-O, a delicious and healthful dessert. Prepared in two minutes. No boiling! No baking! Simply add a little boiling water and set to cool. Flavors: Lemon, orange, raspberry and strawberry. Get a package at your grocers today. 10 cts.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Never Disappoints

Dyspepsia.

"I had dyspepsia in its worst form and tried many medicines, but found no relief until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills. To my great joy I found relief and a cure. I am now well and strong." MARY E. BYRD, Olney, Ill.

Behind Her Back.

"We have all heard people scoff at women who married men to reform them, and it is generally supposed that the scheme never proves to be successful, but Jaggerson used to be a fearful drinker before he got married, and now look at him. He never takes a drop."

"Well, his is an exceptional case. Almost any man would be sobered up if he were to suddenly discover that he was married to that woman."—Chicago Times-Herald.

IN CYCLEDOM.

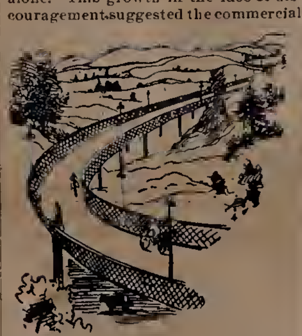
NOVEL CYCLING PATH.

An Elevated Affair Nine Miles Long About to Be Built in Southern California.

In the mountainous region about Los Angeles and Pasadena, in southern California, the lot of the wheelman is not an altogether happy one, for cycle paths are unknown there and beyond city limits the way for riders is so rough and rolling that the pleasures of cycling scarcely compensate for the pains. A change is about to come over the face of these conditions, however, by the construction of the most novel and elaborate wheelway in this country and probably in the world. An elevated cycle path of framework nine miles long has been designed to connect the two places. An account of present cycling conditions in that locality and how much of a boon the aerial structure will be is obtained from an interesting article in the Los Angeles Land of Sunshine, which, on the whole, suggests speculation as to whether in the future all things are to become possible to the bicycle.

Pasadena and Los Angeles are sister cities, and the problem of transportation between them has been slow to find solution owing to the rolling character of the intervening country and the waterways. The amount of traffic between the towns demanded facilities, and as ways to furnish these were found the travel increased, until now they are bound together by a chain of four railroads, three of steam power and one electric. After the last link was added to this chain there remained a large contingent of the population in both cities that was still unprovided for. There was not a fit route for cyclists. The common wagon roads, with their dust and mud and ruts, had to be followed over hill and along ravine, among cattle and fowl and across railroad tracks, by those who fain would wheel their way from place to place. The topography of the country and injudicious road building combined to keep wheel riders miserable.

The lack of good roads between Los Angeles and Pasadena has been keenly felt for years, and the hills intervening made the construction of an ordinary cycle path impracticable. The trip northward to Pasadena is an uphill grind. In spite of these discomforts many made the intercity trip for business or pleasure, and, notwithstanding all disadvantages, the ranks of the cyclists increased, until there are at least 30,000 in Los Angeles county alone. This growth in the face of discouragement suggested the commercial wisdom of catering to so persistent a sport, and the genius for the emergency appeared in the person of Horace M. Dobbins, of Pasadena, who organized the California Cycleway company. Capital was quickly forthcoming and plans were drawn for an elevated balcony, stretching between the sister cities, exclusively for cyclists. The franchise and right of way have been secured, the engineers' estimates completed and work begun, and now the natives wonder why some one did not think of it before.



ELEVATED CYCLE PATH.

The path will be supported by pillars of different heights, to equalize the grade, and the floor will be of boards. The width will be about ten feet, and each side will be inclosed by lattice work rising to a height of about four feet. The path will be lighted by a double row of lights, placed so as to alternate, and half way between the cities a park and casino will be established by the company. The tariff for the use of the structure has been figured down to a nominal basis, on a plan of issuing annual passes with a share of stock. The cycleway will start from a central point in Pasadena, and, winding down the Arroyo Seco on its eastern side, will cross the Los Angeles river some distance below Buena Vista street and terminate at the plaza in Los Angeles. Wheelmen and wheelwomen will be able to glide along this smooth way almost without exertion going south to Los Angeles, looking off upon the rolling scenery or down upon the woods, the fields, the hills and hollows, the heavy roads from which they are freed and the car tracks that cannot jolt them. Reversing the ride and traveling north from Los Angeles will be no hardship, for the grade has been laid out so that it is almost imperceptible.

Exempt from Execution.

In Minnesota the legislature has enacted a measure exempting from execution one bicycle for each citizen. A similar measure will be presented for passage at the next session of the Ohio general assembly.

An Insurance on Wheels.

The Ohio division offers a reward of $25 for the arrest and conviction of each thief who steals the wheel of a league member. This constitutes an insurance on the bicycles of members of the division.

Ruined by Smoking.

"The average life of an engine only 30 years?" said an astonished passenger. "Why, such a tough-looking thing ought to live longer than that."

"Well," said the engineer, "perhaps it would if it didn't smoke so much."—Tit-Bits.

LAYING UP A COMPETENCE.

Something That Practically Any Man Can Do by the Exercise of Self-Denial.

"There are some men of genius," said Mr. Nippingly, according to the New York Sun, "who accumulate great fortunes by great strokes, but by far the greater number of fortunes, including those of moderate dimensions, and these form the great majority of all, are made by the very simple process of living within one's income and investing the surplus, with more or less wisdom, but always where it will be safe.

"The older I grow the more amazed I am that more people don't lay up a competence for themselves, as most anybody can do, by beginning early in life to live within their income, and sticking to that course faithfully. Did I do this myself? No! Am I, however, having learned the wisdom of this course, now making a beginning? I am obliged to say: 'No;' I am still spending all I get and laying up nothing.

"There are some lessons that we all easily acquire, but never turn to our own advantage. One of these is of the benefits that arise from the exercise of self-denial. We get from this, at once, the direct benefit of what we save, and self-denial nourishes, strengthens and broadens the will and enables a man constantly to do and to earn more and more.

"There's simply nothing like self-denial; it is the key to every one of life's treasures; and everybody has one of those golden keys in his possession, eager to help him, and wating only for him to bring it in use."

A FIGHT TO THE DEATH.

It Was Between a Man-Eating Shark and an Alligator and the Shark Won.

Some fishermen down at Mayport, Fla., the mouth of the St. John's river, witnessed a strange fight a few days ago between a large alligator and a man-eating shark, says the Philadelphia Press.

The alligator was sunning himself on the river bank when the fishermen approached within 30 yards.

There was a roar from the alligator, which attracted attention to his presence, and he fell sprawling in the river.

Then a huge shark shot toward the bank and caught the alligator's tail in his mouth, causing the alligator to roar with pain and turn onto the shark's tail with his mouth.

The two monsters stuck their teeth firmly in each other's tail, and the shark snatched off a piece of the alligator's flesh, swallowing it at one gulp. The alligator let loose the shark and made a desperate effort to escape. The shark raised himself above the water and pounced upon the head of the alligator.

The entire head of the alligator was caught between the jaws of the shark and mangled.

Several hours later the dead alligator, without head or tail or legs, rose to the top of the water and was carried out to sea by the ebbing tide.

Several sharks have been caught at Mayport this year, and the fishermen who reported the above story will try to catch the shark that ate the alligator.

THE BUGLER WHO FORGOT.

Got a Chance to Run the Fight to Suit Himself and Made Things Warm.

It is not often that an enlisted man gets a chance to run a part of the fight to suit himself. That chance, however, came to one bugler, says a Manila correspondent of Leslie's Weekly. Capt. Hannay, finding that L company was too far away to hear orders, sent his bugler after the company to sound the charge. At the first notes L flew onward. It was right here that the bugler forgot, for the time being, that he was only the commanding officer's orderly. He saw another chance for L to move on the jump—too good a chance, he thought, to be lost. He sounded once more and Lieut. Ross, imagining, of course, that the order came from Capt. Hannay, executed it. Not even yet was the bugler's thirst for forward action sated. He sounded again and again, as the heat of generalship made his blood flow fast and hot.

By the time the bugler came to himself and relinquished the duties of fight-director the poor fellows of L company were troubled with shortness of breath. In this brisk affair, according to the official report, the dead reached a total of about 60, including some officers. It is the enemy's dead that is meant, of course. Twenty-one Mausers and six Remingtons were the spoils of this field.

Self-Protection in Plants.

Young long-leaf pines, according to Mr. Pinchot, of the department of agriculture, protect themselves against forest fires in a most interesting and remarkable manner. For four or five years the stems of the infant trees attain a height of only as many inches above the soil. During this time their bark is extraordinarily thick, and that alone gives some protection. But in addition, the long needles spring up above the stem, and then bend over on all sides "in a green cascade which falls to the ground in a circle about the seedling." This green barrier can with difficulty be made to burn, while the shade that it casts prevents inflammable grass from growing near the protected stem. Mr. Pinchot thinks that it is owing to this peculiar system of self-protection which the pine seedlings have developed that the growth of evergreen oaks in Florida has been restricted in regions where fires have raged while pure pine forests have taken their place.

ZEB'S NEW GUN.

The Boys Told Him There Was Something About It That He Could Not Make Out.

The rugged old fellow who always goes as guide and companion to a party of young men on their hunting expeditions was very proud of a new gun which he had just purchased. He had boasted of it many times before they get to his home, and lost no time in bringing it out for inspection.

"Thar," he said, as he held it out. "Ain't she a beauty?"

"Why, yes," answered his friend, as he took the weapon; "it looks all right. Say, you've never fired this, have you?"

"Not yet. I were waitin' fur you fellers all to come along so as to gin it its fust trial."

"Why, it's a handsome piece of work, and no mistake, but, Zeb, this gun shoots a blue flame."

"You don't say so."

"Yes, sir."

He took the gun back gingerly and was about to put it away, when another of the party came in.

"Now, Zeb," he said, "let's see that gun you were talking so much about."

He handed it over, and the newcomer returned it hastily with the exclamation:

"Why, Zeb, this gun shoots a blue flame!"

The old fellow's simple nature never permitted a suspicion that so small a matter as a joke could be made the subject of an organized conspiracy. He meekly took the gun back and said nothing.

A third hunter came in and said, cheerily: "Let's have a look at the gun."

"Oh, I guess mebbe 'tain't so much of a gun," he said, glumly.

"Nonsense. Don't be modest—why, Zeb!"

"That's all right. You needn't tell me. I know it a'ready. The gun shoots a blue flame."

"As sure as you're born it does. Here comes Joe," he added, as another member of the party straggled in. "Ask him. How about that gun, Joe?"

"Why," answered Joe, promptly, after a casual inspection, "it shoots a blue flame."

"You fellers kin go to bed when you git ready," Zeb said, abruptly. "I'm goin' to take a walk."

That night in the middle of sound slumber all the members of the party were awakened by a vigorous shaking. Zeb stood in the middle of the floor.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I've been sittin' out in the moonlight on a rock thinkin' it over ever since I left you. An' thar's one question I want to ask you all. S'posen this gun do shoot a blue flame. What the blazes difference do that make?"—Washington Star.

STAYIN' UP LATE.

A Little Home Incident Which Led to a Small Investigator's Disillusionment.

Everyone who has ever been a child will recall that sense of injury entailed by being sent to bed early—that conviction that you are being deprived of the most interesting part of the whole day. There is really no knowing what the elders are up to when once they get the youngsters tucked up safe in bed, but it stands to reason it must be very interesting or why would they be in such a hurry to get the youngsters out of the way?

With some children this amounts to more than mere feeling. It was a little girl of the latter sort who begged so hard to sit up just for once, that her mother one evening, not long ago, said that she might. How the little girl's eyes danced at the prospect of all the wonderful things she would see for herself upon this her first occasion of "sitting up!" How commiseratingly she regarded the other children, who were as usual packed off to bed at an early hour! She seated herself in her small chair and eagerly awaited developments.

But imagine her surprise when her parents, as was their custom, seated themselves at the library table, and unsociably, but hygienically, turning their backs to the light, began to read. For some time the small girl rocked away in her small chair in silence. Then came a sleepy, plaintive voice: "Is that all you do?"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Question of Love.

"I wonder," he said, "if I ought to be angry."

"What's happened?" asked his friend.

"Why, I went to her father and told him that because of my deep love for his daughter, I wanted to marry her."

"Well?"

"Well, he said that because of his deep love for his daughter, he wouldn't permit it. Now, do you think I ought to be mad or just disappointed?"—Chicago Post.

A Curious Collocation.

"Sat Upon."

When Johnson rolls home late at night,
Delayed by festive cup,
He finds his wife sits up for him,
And then makes him "sit up!"
—London Fun.

Learning Appreciated.

Cultivated Stranger—You advertise for a man who can speak 26 languages?

Mr. Gotham—Yes, sir. The position is still open.

"May I ask concerning the matter of its duties?"

"Certainly. I own considerable property in New York, and I want a man to collect the rents."—N. Y. Weekly.

A Solemn Reflection.

"Of course," remarked the impressive man, "we are all wayfarers together through this vale of tears."

"That's true," answered the person who continually worries for fear he is getting short measure; "but a lot of us are a long way from being fair weighers."—Washington Post.

Very Sharp.

Teacher—Now, Johnny, if the earth were empty on the inside, what could we compare it to?

Johnny—A razor, ma'am.

Teacher—A razor?

Johnny—Yes, ma'am; because it would be hollow ground.—Brooklyn Life.

How Some Men Do It.

"He told me last week that he had to economize, but I don't see that he has been doing it."

"O, well, you wouldn't notice it, anyway. You see, he economizes by cutting down his wife's expenses."—Chicago Post.

At the Woman's Club.

She feared her paper might fall flat,
Her theme was far from bright,
So donned her newest frock and hat,
And thus came through all right.

Glorious News

Comes from Dr. D. B. Cargile of Washita, I. T. He writes "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. Terrible sores would break out on her head and face, and the best doctors could give no help; but her cure is complete and her health is excellent." This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by A. C. Mason & Co., druggists. Guaranteed.

Inspiring Confidence.

"It pays to be cheerful."

"That's right; as long as you look as if you had money your creditors have confidence in you."—Chicago Record.

Ask Your Dealer for Allen's Foot-Ease, A powder for the feet. It cures swollen, sore, hot, callous, aching, sweating feet, corns and bunions. At all druggists and shoe stores, 25c. Sample mailed free. Address Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.

The Essential Question.

The Candidate—Madam, I enter your house with clean hands.

The Housewife—Did you wipe your feet?—Judge.

"Fortune favors the brave." It is also favorable to those who purify their blood at this season by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

WRENTHAM.

The two young men who assaulted and robbed Arthur Fuller two weeks ago have been caught with his watch in their possession. Fuller is still in a feeble condition from the result of his injuries.——It is reported that Principal L. V. Symonds and Miss Frances Shepard of the High school and Miss Grace Hill of the intermediate school are to resign in June.——The Odd Fellows are to give an entertainment in the town hall by the first of next month.——David Frazer of Cambridge has moved into F. P. Smith's house on Taunton street.——John Gardner dropped dead Tuesday afternoon while at work in a field at the John Jones farm. The funeral was held yesterday morning at 10 o'clock at the Catholic chapel. The interment was in Franklin. The deceased was a native of England and has resided in town for two years. He leaves a widow and several grown children.——John Odey is seriously ill.——The electric road crosses the street to connect with the Plainville end near the residence of David Hatch.——An unusually interesting programme was carried out at the meeting of the Holly club, held Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Nathan H. Fales at Rockdale. The subject was "Colonial History" and the ladies were dressed in Colonial costumes. There were readings by Miss H. Lizzie Wilkinson on "Personal Recollections of George Isaac Putnam from His Point of View," and F. A. Shepard on Tilghman's Ride from Yorktown to Philadelphia." The entertainment closed with a song, "Just as the Sun Went Down," by Mrs. C. E. Brown.

Sure Road to the Madhouse.

One of the surest ways of ending one's days in a madhouse is to stimulate a fagged brain by constant "nips" of spirits. Overindulgence in spirits injure the memory to an incredible degree. In years gone by no person who was known to have intemperate habits was permitted to appear as a witness in the Spanish courts of justice, the authorities maintaining that alcoholism was so prejudicial to the brain that it was unsafe to accept the testimony of an inebriate. There is a singular instance on record of a merchant who grew so accustomed to jogging his brain by brandy drinking that unless he could procure a "nip" he was utterly unable to work. Needless to say, he generally left his office in a state of intoxication. The day that his brain collapsed he went home and insisted on putting every member of his family to bed, under the impression that they too, had drunk not wisely, but too well.—Cassell's Journal.

A Truth Twisted.

"'It is a woman's lot to suffer in silence!' I wonder what is the origin of that sentiment?"

"Perhaps it is a corruption of the truth that a silent woman suffers a lot."—Detroit Journal.

A Life and Death Fight.

Mr. W. A. Hines of Manchester, Ia., writing of his almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles induced serious lung trouble, which ended in consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed night and day. All my doctors said I must soon die. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, which completely cured me. I would not be without it even if it cost me $5.00 a bottle. Hundreds have used it on my recommendation and say it never fails to cure throat, chest and lung troubles." Regular size 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at A. C. Mason's drug store.

Easily Amused.

Young Man—I have been—er—very attentive to your daughter for some time, and she—er—has listened favorably to my suit. If you will give your consent, I will do my best to make her happy.

Mr. Olddad—Oh, that's easy enough, my dear young friend, easy enough. Just give her a blank check-book, to fill out as she pleases.—N. Y. Weekly.

Another Great Reform.

"What reform are you interested in now?"

"I am advocating that people be paid double for the work they do when they don't feel like working."—Chicago Record.

H IS for Horrors, too good for the man
Who won't wheel the baby whenever he can.
One glance will convert him, if brains fill his block—
A glance at a Coach of the "Cook Rolling Stock."

I IS for Injun, a cruel nickname
For baby so pretty, and "dad" is to blame.
He squared himself, though, when he ran round the block
And bought a Go-Cart from the "Cook Rolling Stock."

J IS for Jingo, a child could see that;
But children are bright and know where they are at.
They don't hang themselves nor jump off the dock,
They jump in a Cart from the "Cook Rolling Stock."

K IS for Kicker just entered the world.

It's none of their "biz;" turn the key in the lock
And run for a Coach from the "Cook Rolling Stock."

Less than a week remains now before some of the anxious taxpayers will receive a call from the assessors. To those who have been unable to settle last year's account it may be rather an unpleasant call.

Mrs. A. G. E. Vose, of Manville, who will be remembered here as the very acceptable alto at the Universalist church a couple of years ago, has been selected as the director of the St. James choir in Woonsocket.

Everyone who has heard of Graham, the manager of the darkey troupes, knows he always brings a good show. That on Saturday evening will be no exception, and he will be greeted by a crowded house.

Thursday afternoon a forest fire started in the woods east of the railroad round house and made rapid progress for a short time, but a large gang of men were soon on the ground to fight it, and after a short struggle had it under control.

A statistician who has an eye for mortality figures hands us an item to the effect that out of the last thirty six deaths the average was over 73, which is something to ponder over. This is in the line of the saying that while the young may die the old must.

The open cars on the Woonsocket line give us quite the appearance of summer. Electric rides will be the fad shortly, when it will be so easy to slip over to Lake Pearl, down to Hoag, or even down the Providence river for a whiff of fresh air and a change of scene.

Postmaster Conroy announces an unexpected demand for the stamp books which have recently been issued from the local postoffices. Business men and ladies especially recognize at once the convenience of the book, and this fact accounts for the large sales.

Conductor L. H. Holmes, a former well-known conductor on the old New England road, was in town yesterday and was greeted by many who remembered him when he used to punch tickets. He was on the road for many years, but retired to go into other business.

A special funeral train passed through here on Sunday bearing the body of the late Engineer Louis Estey to East Blackstone, where services were held. About 200 railroad men were aboard, including a number of officials. Engineer Estey at one time had a Franklin run and was quite well known here.

A refreshing bit of honesty has recently come to light. Master Herbert Woolford, 8 years of age, pupil of the primary school in Wrentham, found a $10 bill in the postoffice and at once reported it to the postmaster, who shortly after found the owner. The boy was rewarded for his honesty.

Rumor had it that the machinery at the Unionville power station would be ready to start today, but there may be some things delayed, so that the actual turning on of the juice may be somewhat later. Men are at work in and around the station and car house and each day helps things along to completion.

An unusually large number are planning to attend the summer dress party to be given by Miss Razee's dancing class Thursday evening, May 10, in Morse Opera house. The juvenile class will present a fine program and there will be music by the Philharmonic orchestra.

There will be a social and conundrum supper and entertainment Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Baptist Ladies' Aid society, at the home of Mrs. A. P. Pendleton, 9 Union street. Supper will be served from 6 to 7.30, and in the evening ice cream and cake will be for sale. A very enjoyable time is expected. All are cordially invited.

Miss Myrtie Whiting assisted the Piacere club of Woonsocket at a concert there on Friday evening. Concerning her work the Reporter said: "Miss Myrtie E. Whiting followed with a delightful soprano solo entitled, "Sing, Smile, Slumber," and this showed to good advantage her strength and range of voice. She modulated her rich voice excellently."

The regular meeting of the Greenhalge Literary society was held Friday afternoon at the usual time and place. The following program was given: Reading, Miss Hutchinson; piano solo, Miss Bly; reading, Miss Helen Thompson; mandolin solo, Miss Ednah Thompson; reading, Miss Ferrer; roll call, to which every member responded with some short sketch or anecdote.

Commencing sometime during this week cars on the Medway division of the M., H. & F. street railway will run from Camp's barn, on the rails of the M., A. & W. road, to the railroad crossing at North Bellingham, connecting with the cars of that road for Franklin and Woonsocket. A new turnout will be placed beyond the trestle on the Medway road, and a change of running time will be necessary.

The Heliotype and Trowbridge piano nines met on the Indian Rock park diamond Saturday afternoon and the Helios suffered a disastrous defeat, the piano boys "warming" them to the tune of 19 to 2. Smith and McKenzie did the battery work for the piano team, while Morrill and Adams alternated in the box and Embser was at the receiving end for the Helios. A good crowd witnessed the one sided battle.

All the favorites of St. Mary's Dramatic society who have in the past delighted Franklin audiences will appear in the cast of the pleasing comedy-drama, "Nan, the Mascot," which is to be presented at the Opera house next Thursday evening. The indications are that the clever amateurs will be greeted by a large audience, and there is no doubt that all who witness the presentation will be well pleased with their acting. The curtain will rise at 7.45 and at the conclusion of the play there will be a social hop.

Ernest Green of Mansfield sang as basso at the Congregational church on Sunday and delighted every one who heard him. He sang the bass solo, "Oh, Worship the Lord in the Beauty of Holiness," and also a bass selection entitled, "Oh, Jesus, Thou Art Knocking." In both of these the remarkably fine qualities of his voice showed to decided advantage One feature of his work was his articulation, which rendered it possible to get all of the words, unfamiliar as they were to many of his hearers. He would be heard here again with pleasure.

Friday evening the selectmen approved bills, including the rolls of firemen for the past year, discussed highway and street railway matters and attended to considerable routine business. A. J. Reilly was granted a billiard hall license and E A. Labardie a victualer's license. William F. King was authorized to buy three hand pumps for the use of the forest firewards. The application of E. P. Blackmar for a billiard hall and victualing license was laid on the table for a week. A. J. Newell entered complaint against the location of a pole of the street railway company on Central street, which it is claimed is too far into the street. Hubert H. Gates declined the appointment of forest fireward.

Some of the officials of the Milford, Hopkinton & Westboro Street Railway Co. had dinner and a meeting in the Reservoir house, Hopkinton, Friday afternoon. The officers present were: President, Wm. S. Reed of Leominster; secretary and treasurer, George W. Wiggin of Franklin; directors, Edgar K. Ray of Franklin, W. H. Tylee of Worcester, C. W. Shippee of Milford and Horace and Frank Wood of Hopkinton. The capital stock is $80,000. The assessment of 10 per cent, decided upon at Friday's meeting therefore will amount to $8,000. It is expected that a start is to be made in building the road soon, as the franchise owned by the Milford, Hopkinton & Westboro road expires July 1, and if nothing is done toward building the line before that date the franchise becomes worthless.

Thursday afternoon the funeral of John Gallison was held in the little church at Pinhook, the services being conducted by Rev. Gertrude Earle. Dr. A. J. Gallison of Massachusetts was present, but the elder son, Dr. J. C. Gallison, was unable to attend to his father's funeral on account of ill health. "Uncle" John, as he was familiarly called, was 83 years old. He was a lineal descendant in the ninth generation from five of the Mayflower passengers, viz: Richard, Warren, John Howland, John Tilley, his wife, and Elizabeth Tilley. On the celebration of his 80th birthday there were present at the dinner the old patriarch, "Uncle" John Gallison, two sons, one daughter, three granddaughters, three great-grandchildren and three great great grandchildren, two of whom were held in the lap of the venerable old man. A liberal number of friends and neighbors surrounded the circle and a snap shot was taken of the group.—Oxford County (Me.) Advertiser.

Arbor Day Exercises.

At 9 o'clock Saturday morning our tree warden, Dr. D. M. Hodge, in the presence of many pupils and friends of the public schools, set out three trees upon the lawn of the Horace Mann school. The trees were two magnolias, stellata and soulangenena, and a catalpa dignonioides. The exercises opened with the singing of "America." Dr. Hodge then made a short address, speaking of the appropriateness of the location for his first work as tree warden. He leaves the trees in the care of the Horace Mann students, and suggests that the best way to care for them is to leave them alone.

Rev. I. W. Sneath offered prayer for the welfare of the schools and gave thanks for lessons taught by Nature. As the trees were set out the ceremonies closed with each one present throwing a shovelful of dirt around the trees. The tree presented last Arbor day to the Thayer school having died, the donor, C. L, Fales, unbeknown to pupils or school authorities, set out another in its place. This is certainly most kind and thoughtful of him. How helpful it is to have the public interested in its schools!

Almost a Fatality.

Judge Doe placed Johnny Leonard, aged 11, son of Liveryman James Leonard, under $500 bonds on Saturday for shooting Henry Languirand, a lad of 16. From the rather conflicting stories it appears that another lad named Blood had taken a revolver from the room of a boarder in his home and that the lads had been using it. Leonard and Languiraud were at the latter's home, in a shed containing a dove cote, and Languirand was up in the cote. He asserts that the Leonard boy asked him if he should shoot. Languirand implored him not to do so, but just as he was coming down from the cote the Leonard boy shot, the bullet entering Languiraud's leg. Young Leonard then gave the pistol to another boy, announcing that he had shot his playmate. He then disappeared and did not turn up till Saturday, much to the distress of his parents. Judge Doe continued the case till today. Too much cannot be said in regard to leaving fire arms where mere lads can get hold of them. It was only by chance that the bullet did not enter a vital spot, killing the boy instantly. He is still confined to his bed. The Leonard boy insists the shooting was purely accidental. Today the hearing was further continued till Saturday, May 12.

Now It's Clear Sailing.

The railway commissioners yesterday gave a hearing on the petition of the Medfield and Medway Street Railway company for authority to extend its railway into Franklin from Medway, and no one appearing to oppose the petition the board granted the authority asked for. Attorney H. E. Ruggles represented the company. Now it is clear sailing for the construction of the electric line between Franklin and Medway, and it is expected that the rails will arrive this week and work on the line will be commenced at once—at the Franklin end should the girder rails be shipped first, but if the T rails are the first to come work will be started on the Medway end. The company desire to have the road in operation as near the first of June as possible.

Card of Thanks.

The undersigned take this occasion to return their sincere thanks to the neighbors and friends for their kindness during the illness and death of Charles E. Clark.

A Shakespearian Treat.

Rev. Dr. Crowe of New York delighted a good sized audience at Dean academy on Thursday evening by his masterly treatment of that prince of dramatists. He proved to the satisfaction of his auditors that Shakespeare was less of a god than we have been wont to regard him; that if he was divinely inspired, he was also humanly inspired by the stirring events which were transpiring around him from 1580 to 1590, while he was living in London. Small wonder was it that a man gifted as was Shakespeare used the material which he found about him on every hand for the glory of England and for his own deathless fame, as well. While his plots were almost entirely appropriated from sources other than his own brain, yet so wonderfully did he recreate that he was less of an adapter than a reconstructor; he was, indeed, more of a builder than an architect.

He traced Shakespeare's early life, giving his hearers a hint of his parentage, his school days, his unfortunate married life, and his disgraceful encounter with law and order. This combination of circumstances drove him to London, which proved a blessing in disguise. His initial work there was of the most menial order, but the man soon rose superior to his circumstances, and he drifted into the theatre, his natural vocation. Soon he ranked with Lyly, Peele, Greene and Marlowe, rising later superior to anything the world has since produced. Dr. Crowe's glimpses of the early English theatres, his bits of contemporary English history, his general conception of Shakespeare were some of the best literary pictures that a Franklin audience has been privileged to enjoy in a long time. The gifted speaker has so forceful a manner, such a thorough knowledge of good, honest, expressive English that he never fails to entertain, and always instructs. Prof. Peirce deserves the thanks of everyone who listened for this remarkably rich literary treat.

Tempora Mutantur.

The funeral of the late Henry Bemis took place Saturday afternoon at his late residence at the head of Main street, Rev. Dr. Hodge officiating. Interment was made in the Union street cemetery. With the death of Mr. Bemis probably passes away the man who was the last in this vicinity to perform the old time rite of tolling the church bell to announce to the village the death of one of its residents. The custom was discontinued thirty or forty years ago, but previous to that to have the bell rung was as much a part of the funeral preparation as going for the undertaker; three times three strokes announced the death of an adult male, and it was followed by one stroke for each year of his age. The death of a woman or child was indicated by a different number of strokes, and the age followed the same as for a man. Those were the days when one church answered the religious needs of all the people, or, at least, when the dissenters were so few that they had no church. There was a solemn impressiveness when, upon a week day, the old bell in the steeple gave out its sad message to the farmers in the fields and their wives in the farmhouses, for in those days the message went afar; no clattering of machinery of mills disturbed the quiet of the hamlet. And with Mr. Bemis go many items of interest about the old cemetery at the corner of Central and Union streets. Many years he delved there, and he had more recollections of past burials there than anyone living in his time since the demise of Jason Fisher, his predecessor in charge.—Cor. Woonsocket Reporter.

St. John's Guild May Festival.

St. John's Guild fair opened in Odd Fellows' hall last evening with a large attendance. The booths were very handsomely decorated and were replete with many articles beautiful and useful. The supper, served in the dining hall from 6 to 8, was largely patronized and invoked the appreciative encomiums of all patrons. The May pole dance and coronation of the May queen, under the direction of Miss Emily Poupart, by about 20 young misses of St. Katherine's Guild, was very pretty and highly appreciated by a large audience. Dancing was enjoyed later in the evening.

This (Tuesday) evening the booths will again be open for the sale of goods, fine bargains being offered, and at 8 o'clock one of the finest entertainments ever offered to the Franklin public of late years will be put on by Boston talent, including the highly entertaining and humorous lecture by Stanton H. King, on "Twelve Years Before the Mast." Dances, songs and "shanties," by a company of "old salts" just in harbor from long cruises. Mrs. Nickleson, elocutionist, will read: Misses Wing and Stevens and Mr Strayhorn will sing and Mr. Kelly will execute fancy dances. It will be an entertainment well worth the small admission fee. The guild has spent much pains and effort upon it, and trust that the Franklin public will show appreciation by attending. Dancing afterward until midnight.

Powers for Congressman.

Herbert W. Thayer and Nathan C. Nye attended the convention of the Eleventh Congressional district in Wesleyan hall, Boston, on Saturday, and report a most harmonious convention. George W. Wiggin, the other delegate from Franklin, was unable to be present. The convention selected Col. E. C. Benton of Belmont and M. J. Murray of Boston as congressional delegates to the Philadelphia presidential convention. One hundred and fifteen out of the 152 delegates selected were present, a very satisfactory showing. It was understood that the delegates were personally in favor of Samuel L. Powers of Newton for congressman to succeed Congressman Sprague, who voluntarily retires. The convention was unanimously in favor of Secretary Long for vice president, and there were not a few opinions expressed that Long could win.

The total vote of the electoral college is 447, and it requires 224 for the election of president and vice-president. The solid south, including Delaware, has 154 votes, and in order to elect their candidates the Democrats must carry all of these and 70 votes in the north. These 70 votes have heretofore, until 1896, been looked for in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Indiana, which together have 67. Before the admission of states between the elections of 1893 and 1897 this number was sufficient, but now it is necessary to carry still another state.

Threshing Old Straw.

There was a large audience at the Methodist church on Sunday evening to listen to a temperance address by Rev. L. W. Lockwood of Boston. He proved a very interesting speaker, showing that there are still a great many interesting things that still remain to be said on this much-discussed subject. He took his text from the thought, "Come ye up to the help of the Lord against the mighty." His method of dealing with the traffic appeared to be through the church, since it was a fight for God and home and native land. To the church members the duty appears to be delegated, and a firm and consistent fight must be maintained if victory is to be won. W. C. Sherman and Mrs. C. L. Stewart rendered vocal selections, and the exercises were further enlivened by organ and violin selections.

Graham's Blackville Society Company.

This company is a swell organization to judge from its members and the reports concerning it. John Graham is the master of ceremonies, so that is sufficient guarantee that only real warm members are conspicuous in this ultra-fashionable colored coterie. Mr. Graham has exemplified "Blackville society" on several occasions, but this time he caps all previous efforts. Hannah Jackson is a real wench from the South. She comes North and would be a swell member of Blackville society here if she could only forget her rough and rowdy ways. But she can't. She will sing the wild rag-time songs, show how real colored Southern ladies walk for a cake, and uses a razor with a vim.

Her adventures and those of her soldier father, who is looking for his daughter in Blackville society, make the story of the play. It certainly affords every opportunity for a real new entertainment. Of course Blackville society is all represented and there is a special chorus of handsome Creole singers.

The above attraction will be at Morse Opera house Saturday evening, May 5. The entertainment is entirely different from anything seen in this town.

By Special Appointment.

Owing to the pressure of business in Boston I shall be compelled to give up my weekly visits to Franklin upon Thursdays, except by special appointment.

Norfolk County Home for the Aged.

The King's Daughters' circles of Norfolk county have formed themselves into a corporation, with a charter, for the purpose of establishing a home for the aged. On Saturday, April 21, at the invitation of V. S. Pond, the board of trustees, with other friends, visited the old Pond homestead at Pondville, near Foxboro, which the owner proposed to give them if found suitable for their purpose.

The trustees were so well satisfied that the place could be made into a desirable and restful "home" that they voted to accept Mr. Pond's generous offer. It is believed that those who have happy homes of their own will be interested in giving toward needed repairs on the "Norfolk County Pond Home," that it may soon be opened for the worthy, homeless ones of the county, and that by gifts and bequests many will wish to help sustain this much needed charity. For further particulars address the clerk of the board, Mrs. H. M. Dean, Readville, Mass.

The house is a two story building with six rooms on the front, an ell on either side, and is provided with practically an inexhaustible supply of pure spring water, fed by an aqueduct located on high ground a short distance from the house.

The buildings are located on the main thoroughfare between West Foxboro and Norfolk—known as Valley street, and the property has never been out of the possession of the Pond family since the early settlement of Wrentham. It is two and one-half miles from Wrentham Center and about one mile from the electric car tracks already laid, and which are to connect Foxboro and Wrentham.

The buildings are located a short distance from what is known as the "Punch Bowl," a natural hollow in the woods, about 50 feet deep and 80 or 100 feet across. This hole is the place where the early white settlers hid during the burning of Medfield by the Indians. From here they were able to see the signal fires of the Indians from Mt Nero, or what is now known as Noon Hill.

The outbuildings consist of three barns, a stable and carriage houses and there are about seven acres of ground connected, with garden, orchard and a beautiful natural grove. What is known as Mount Pisgah, a high piece of ground from which a delightful view can be had, is included in the gift, upon this being a large part of the natural grove referred to. It is a quiet, retired spot and the surroundings are very pleasant.

Now that the matter is decided let all who are interested in the home—and who is not?—give liberally towards the fitting up and support of it. The circles in Franklin have offered to furnish seven rooms, and probably all the rooms will be furnished by King's Daughters and Sons.

To Levy Back Tax on Druggists.

Every druggist will be notified within a few days to make up a record of all sales of wine made by him since July 14, 1898, on which no war revenue stamps were used. When the report is made to Oscar J. Winslow, deputy collector of internal revenues, he will proceed to collect from each druggist enough money to furnish a 1-cent stamp for every half-pint sold. This must be paid on or before a date which will be named or a penalty of 50 per cent will be added and the whole collected by law.

Provided the druggists cannot remember the number of sales made and underestimates the number so as to create suspicion, the government officials will take charge of things, and after discovering the amount of wine the druggist had in stock July 14, 1898, and what quantity has been bought since, the whole amount will be added, the stock on hand deducted, and one cent charged up for every half-pint of the whole.

Ancient and Royal Game of Golf

Is played with various degrees of skill, but all players agree that it is absolutely essential to have a good "tee," the little mound of sand upon which the ball is placed before the drive. Start right. The result will justify the pains.

So it is with your table.

Supply it with the right sort of tea, a good tea, the best that you can buy.

If you get Chase & Sanborn's package teas, you may be sure on this point.

Their famous Orloff is noted for its lilac flavor, the Kohinoor, an English Breakfast Tea, and the Orange Pekoe, a Ceylon and India tea, famous on account of its rich wine-like body, are all equally popular. They are the best of their kind.

These teas come only in pound and half-pound leaded forms, and are grown in tea gardens situated in high altitudes, which is an all important factor in the production of high grade leaves.

One pound makes over 200 cups.

FRANKLIN NEWS.

Nearing Completion.

Last week Tuesday the selectmen and officials of the Medfield and Medway Street Railway company rode over the line of extension to Franklin, particularly to view certain localities where there was some doubt. The selectmen ask for 15 feet of traveled way and three feet for gutter from the rail of the railway, which was readily promised. This will require the removal of some of the ledge opposite the residence of Nathan A. Daniels, and some change in the location of fences on the slope of the hill toward Franklin. The layout of Lincoln street is supposed to be 45 feet wide, but there are several places where there is less than 40 feet between the side walls or fences. Some of the construction material has already arrived and the first consignment of rails is expected any time now. If the first to be delivered should be the girder rails the work of building will begin at this end, but if the T rails are the first to arrive then construction will begin at the Medway end.

The track of the street railway to Wrentham has been laid through Wrentham Center and 150 men are employed between the Center and Plainville. The rails are going down at the rate of a third of a mile a day, with about three miles to build to reach Plainville. Between Wrentham Center and Foxboro nothing has been done, except to distribute the rails. The double feed wire from here toward Wrentham is up to the old Pine Tree tavern. From there a single feed wire extends to the Creek road, so called. The trolley wire is strung a little beyond the boundary line between Franklin and Wrentham. The poles through Wrentham Center are hard pine, squared. The poles are put up to the top of Eagle hill. It is reported in Wrentham that 300 or 400 feet of the feed wire disappeared in the night recently. Who wanted it is not known. From the Pine Tree tavern stand to the top of Eagle hill the line is mostly outside the street limits, and many places have been widened, sharp corners cleared away and the view ahead much improved.

Intoxicants Fatal in Alaska.

In a recent interview in Chicago Joaquin Miller, the poet, who has spent some time in Alaska, said: "To use intoxicants in Alaska is fatal. No one can use stimulants without serious results. Even coffee is not necessary to the habitual coffee drinker. Tea is the proper beverage there and that is the popular drink. Whisky is a deadly thing to the Indians, and they are perishing in Alaska very rapidly."

CELERY KING NATURE'S CURE

A Young Girl's Experience.

My daughter's nerves were terribly out of order. She was thin and weak; the least noise startled her, and she was wakeful at night. Before she had taken one package of Celery King the change in her was so great that she could hardly be taken for the same girl. She is rapidly growing well and strong, her complexion is perfect, and she sleeps well every night.—Mrs. Lucy McNutt, Brush Valley, Pa.

Celery King cures Constipation and all diseases of the Nerves, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys. Sold by druggists. 25c and 50c.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

Ten denominations have established and maintain missions in Alaska.

The Evangelical alliance in Boston asks for a half day off for policemen on Sunday so that they may attend church.

Prof. George T. Ladd, of Yale, has received from the Japanese emperor the third-class decoration of the Order of the Rising Sun.

The native Christians in Uganda, Africa, purchase every month more than $500 worth of books and stationery, a large part of the books being Christian.

Among the women students at German universities the most favored studies are the literature and philology of modern languages, philosophy (psychology, logic and ethics) and history.

The Hebrew Educational society of Milwaukee has recently been established under the leadership of Rabbi Caro, and has for its purpose the establishment of a school, primarily for Russian Jews.

The Gospel mission to the Tombs of New York has been at work for nearly 20 years. It is managed by a board of ministers and laymen, representing the Baptist, Episcopal, Lutheran, Methodist, Presbyterian, Reformed and Reformed Episcopal churches. The chaplain holds services Sunday and week days and visits the prisoners in their cells at all times. In this way he comes in contact with 25,000 prisoners annually.

AN EFFECTUAL EFFORT.

The Eloquence of Three-Finger Sam Proved Too Much for the Tenderfoot.

"Talkin' about oratory," said Broncho Bob, "you ought to have been out to Crimson Gulch last fall, so as to hear some of the real thing."

"We have some pretty luminous specimens in congress," ventured the man who felt it incumbent on him to show a little local pride.

"Not a circumstance. I've read some of them kind o' speeches. I've heard 'em, too. A feller come from the east and started in to tell Crimson Gulch what it orter do. Some of the boys allowed things was gettin' ruther slack, an' they says anythin' fur a change; so they took his advice an' blazed away an' organized a city council."

"I see. You held an election."

"Nary. We didn't want any bloodshed. We jes' passed the word around that the city council was goin' to be held, an' made it an open game. Everybody was there except Nevada Bill, an' he didn't dare show up because he was under suspicion of sittin' in a poker game with a private stack of blue chips which he had bought unbeknownst from a store down in San Antonio. He wasn't long until, under the instructions of the tenderfoot, we had the city council goin' in good shape. Only officers was allowed to wear their weapons durin' the perceedin's, an' nobody was barred from debate. The first business we took up was the case of Nevada Bill. We reckoned that it wouldn't be no more than decent local pride to prevent the importation of any poker chips except by the duly reco'nized authorities fur said importation. Rattlesnake Pete said the only way to make the law bindin' was ter pervide that anybody breakin' it should be shot at least once. The tenderfoot got ril'd in a minute. He jumped to his feet, an' got off the most long-winded talk about constitutionality an' the rights of citizenship an' whereas and therefore that I ever heard. He talked hard, an' he showed he had read books. But you orter have heard Three-Finger Sam's historic reply. It jes' showed how quick a man who has the gift of genuine eloquence kin end an argument. Crimson Gulch hasn't got through talkin' about it yet. Three-Finger Sam drawed hisself up to his full height and p'inted his finger at the tenderfoot. 'I don't desire to use harsher words than is necessary,' says he, 'but I'd like to know what you mean, you low-down, lop-eared jack rabbit, by comin' into this town and tryin' to tell us whether a man needs shootin' or not. Have we got to wait fur some lantern-jawed coyote to come wanderin' in off the prairie an' tell us what's good fur us? Beware!' says Three-Finger Sam, still p'intin' his finger an' growin' more eloquent every minute. 'Beware, you bow-legged burro. Don't you think you can come here an' overawe people because you wear specs. Have a care, or the fust thing you know you'll be travelin' out o' this town with a bunch of patriotic citizens on your trail, every one of whom is dead anxious to shoot a freckle off'n the back of your neck!' The tenderfoot didn't have another word to say, an' he left town the next mornin'."—Washington Star.

LIES vs. FACTS

No man wishes to buy a pig in a bag, and no one places confidence in the advertisements of Scale makers which SOUND improbable. "Something for nothing" can never be had, and when you see Scales advertised so indefinitely as to leave a BIG percentage for the imagination, investigate carefully.

Some people are fair minded, and to them we refer the Scale question. Actions SPEAK louder than words, and when you find a genuine article made of good material FOR a fair price is it not better that the facts in the case should be looked into by fair-minded men for THEMSELVES before buying any kind of a Scale?

ART IN ARCHITECTURE.

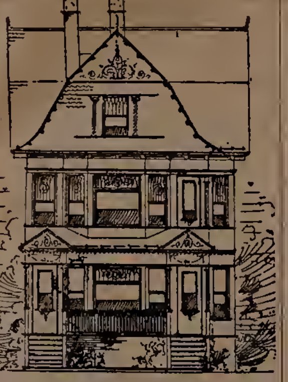
❧ ❧ ❧ ❧ ❧

DESIGNED AND WRITTEN ESPECIALLY FOR THIS PAPER.

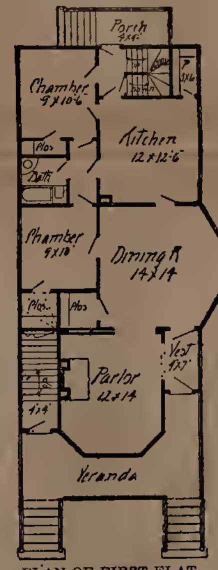
THIS very modern and artistic double flat building can be erected for $2,500.

There are five rooms on each floor not including bathroom.

The sizes of the rooms on both floors are the same, and are as follows: Parlor, 12x14 feet; dining-room, 14x14 feet; chambers, 9x10 feet and 9x10 feet 6 inches; kitchen, 12x12 feet 6 inches; vestibule on first floor, 4x7 feet; bathroom, 5 feet 6 inches by 6 feet; pantry, 3x6 feet, and three large closets.



MODERN FLAT BUILDING.



PLAN OF FIRST FLAT.

The parlors have fireplaces and the front of room is treated as a bay window. The dining-rooms have the same bay treatment at the side of the room. The entrance to the second story flat is an attractive feature and is quite separate from the entrance to the first story flat. Both flats have rear and front porches. The underpinning is built of rock-faced bluestone.

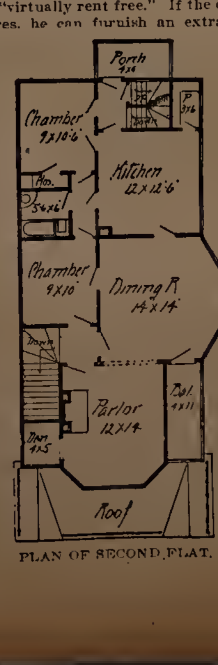
The exterior is covered with sheathing and paper.

The first story is clapboarded with 6-inch clapboards, laid 4 inches to the weather, while the second story is covered with 4-inch clpaboards laid 2½ inches to the weather. Both are painted colonial yellow, with ivory white trimmings. The roofs are painted or stained a dark red.

Dimensions: Front, 22 feet; side, 41 feet, not including porch or veranda; height of ceiling, basement, 7 feet; first story, 9 feet 6 inches; second story, 9 feet 4 inches; attic, 8 feet.

This building is thoughtfully arranged in the most complete manner for two families, and is intended to meet the increasing demand on the part of those who desire to own their own house, but feel unable to bear the burden of expense entailed by a house from which there is no income.

Houses of this class, one flat being rented, bring in sufficient income to enable the owner to occupy the other flat "virtually rent free." If the owner desires, he can furnish an extra bedroom for each flat upon the third or attic floor.



PLAN OF SECOND FLAT.

The parlors, dining-rooms and vestibules, including front stairs, are trimmed in ash; kitchens, chambers, pantries and rear halls trimmed in Georgia pine. The bathrooms are finished in white pine for white paint.

The kitchens and pantries are wainscoted, and are fitted up complete; the bathrooms are fitted up with the usual fixtures and exposed plumping. The house is piped for hot and cold water and is piped for gas. The house is heated by hot air, with a separate furnace for each flat, in basement.

The basement contains all the necessary apartments for each family.

The doors have plate glass, the windows are American glass, art glass is used in transoms as shown. Composition carving is used where shown on front elevation. There is yellow press brick facing on chimneys. The caps are of sandstone. Gutters, flashing, down spouts, etc., are complete in all details. Joist, 2x10; studding, 2x4; rafters, 2x6. Hardware used is of a neat design, and all workmanship and material the best of its respective kind. The house has two coats plastering, back plastering, the ceiling of basement consisting of one coat of brown mortar. The basement floor is cemented.

The price given does not include art glass, furnaces, hardware, gas fixtures or mantels. The owner will select these and furnish them to contrsctor and he will place them in their respective places. Contractor to leave house all ready for tenants.

A STRIKING CARTOON.

Published by French Paper to Illustrate Which Is the Greater Evil-Doer, the Saloon or the Bandit.

The current number of Le Bien Social has a very striking double cartoon, and beneath it is the question, "Which of the two is the greatest evidloer?" The one part of the cartoon shows a bandit who has seized a traveler by the throat and is pointing a dagger at his breast and demanding "the purse or the life." The other part shows the interior of a tavern, three of the tipplers turned round with terrified faces gazing at a man who has fallen on the floor and now lies full length on his back; the landlord, who has been counting his money behind the bar, looks with a horrified gaze at his prostrate customer, while the money he has been counting drops on the floor; and from the door leading to the house part of the premises the landlady peers with staring eyes, no doubt attracted to the spot by the noise and commotion consequent on the man falling. Underneath this part of the cartoon are the words: "Alcoholism demands the purse and the life." We have said that the cartoon is a striking one, but is it not also a true one? The victim of the highway robber is generally able to purchase his life with his money; the victim of the drink robber has to sacrifice both money and life.—National Advocate.

It is not so much to tell the truth as to make the truth tell.—National Advocate.

A hero knows there is danger before him, but he thinks of something of more consequence than danger.—Lever.

When a burglar or murderer is to be run down, where do the police go to look for him? To the saloon.—Epworth Herald.

Two hundred women at Chattanooga, Tenn., went to the city council chamber and defeated a movement started by saloonkeepers to extend the closing hour at night from 10 to 12 o'clock.

A Bostonian shot himself recently because he could not give up the liquor habit. It seems strange that a man who had nerve to take his own life had not the will to save it.—Albany Journal.

On the west coast of Africa and far inland, bottles of gin and demijohns of rum are used as the common currency; and on the Congo one-half of all that the natives produce is paid for with liquor.

Our military authorities in the Philippines have found it necessary already to take action against American saloons introduced in the islands. The work of these places has been a fire in their rear destroying more soldiers than the weapons of the insurgents. The American saloon carries a curse with it wherever it goes.—Christian Work.

The famous Benedictine monks at Beatty, Pa., have discontinued brewing beer for the market. For 40 years they have brewed this beer and peddled it among the saloons all over the western part of Pennslvania. The growing temperance sentiment among Catholics is responsible, though it is said they will still brew beer for their private use.

Klondike Liquor Dealers.

Champagne brings $25 a bottle in Dawson. The regular price of a drink of whisky is 50 cents, and the saloonkeeper claims that he is making no profit at this price when he has to pay $40 to $50 a gallon for it at wholesale—because the miners take such large drinks. The saloonkeepers, however, are not unable to take care of themselves. They adulterate their whisky frely with Yukon water, and they are always careful to have the balance on their side when the weigher puts the customers' dust on the scales. Underneath the scale is a piece of Brussels carpet, and any particles of dust that may accidentally fall in the operation are hidden for harvest after the closing hour.—Champion (liquor organ).

TYROLESE HAY BATHS.

A New Fad Which Is Taking Hold of "Our Best People" Who Imagine Themselves Sick.

Latest of all bathing fads is the hay bath. Some one or other in the Tyrol devised it when he wasn't thinking of anything else. It is a simple process, consisting merely of being immersed in fresh, uncured mountain hay. The hay must be in "burning" condition—that is, not cured. The bath is taken under roof, and not in the open air. The peasants of the Tyrol, the Etschlanders especially, attach great value to the hay bath, and they consider the short hay of the mountains to be particularly beneficial.

One of these "cures" is on the top of the Schlern, near Voels, at an elevation of a mile and a half. At this place the baths are free to the villagers, but others are charged 30 kreutzers, or about 20 cents American money, a week.

To take a hay bath one digs a hole in the hay and crawls into it, after having divested himself of all his clothing. The covering up process is done by a friend or a regular attendant, and only the head is left exposed. Some one must stay with the patient during the bath, to give relief, for the effect of the heat and other influences is likely to be severe. The heart or some other organ occasionally is hard hit during this curing process. When the patient has perspired enough he is dug out by the attendant and rubbed down, for by this time he usually is too weak to exert himself, though he may be able to get into his clothes unaided. At the Aidein bath two patients have been found unconscious, and their condition was serious, it being not due to a mere fainting fit.

The Heat of the Sun.

It is estimated that the earth receives not more than one thousand millionth part of the total radiation of the sun's rays. If any considerable proportion of this heat were concentrated upon the earth it would not only become uninhabitable, but become speedily consumed. If the great accumulation of ice at the north pole were placed at a point on which this tremendous heat could be focussed it would melt at the rate of three hundred millions of miles of solid ice per second, and the heat is estimated to generate energy at the rate of about ten thousand horse power to every square foot of surface.

Some Marvelous Figures.

The complexity of animal structure is marvelous. A caterpillar contains more than 2,000 muscles. In the human body are some 2,000,000 perspiration glands, communicating with the surface by ducts, having a total length of some ten miles; whilst that of the arteries, veins and capillaries must be very great; the blood contains millions of millions of corpuscles, each a structure in itself; the rods in the retina, which are supposed to be the ultimate recipients of light, are estimated at 30,000,000, and Meinert has calculated that the gray matter of the brain is built of at least 600,000,000 cells.

"The Noblest Mind the best contentment has." Yet, however noble in mind, no man or woman can have perfect contentment without physical health. The blood must be kept pure and the stomach and digestive organs in good order. The best means for this purpose is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It promptly cures all blood humors and eruptions and tones up the system.

The favorite cathartic is Hood's Pills. 25 cents.

Scrofula, salt rheum, erysipelas and other distressing eruptive diseases yield quickly and permanently to the cleansing, purifying power of Burdock Blood Bitters.

The little folks love Dr Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Pleasant to take; perfectly harmless; positive cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma.

President Patton announces that ex-President Cleveland is to be a lecturer at Princeton this year. He has agreed, it seems, to deliver the lectures called for by the Stafford Little fund of $10,000, which establishes a lectureship on themes connected with public life. There is a new chair of politics at Princeton, lately endowed with $100,000 by an unknown donor. The chair is vacant as yet, for lack of a man fit to fill it. It may be that if Mr. Cleveland does well with his lectures this chair will be offered to him.

THE CHARM OF LIFE

Is Lost When the Burden Is Too Heavy

Life is hardly worth the living with the never-ceasing aches and pains of a bad back. If you would remove the burden of backache, reach the cause—the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills will cure sick kidneys, and the cure is lasting. Here is proof of it.

Mr. Israel A. Morse, of 10 Tyng street, Newburyport, a member of the Board of Aldermen for two years, and Common Council for three years, says: "My experience with and opinions of Doan's Kidney Pills which I expressed through our newspapers in 1896, after taking a course of the treatment, have not altered. I value that preparation more highly today than I did when I first published my statement, and that is over three years ago. To my personal experience I can add that of many others in this city who one and all coincide with me in saying that Doan's Kidney Pills act as represented.'

A Hint to the Cook.

Be sure to cool all soup stock rapidly This is most necessary if you want it to keep a few days. If it is allowed to cool partially on the range before it is strained it will not keep well. The more quickly it is cooled off after the straining the better it is. Again, cooking meat at a high and in a dry temperature develops a richer and more savory flavor, and that is why in some of the brown soup stocks, when it is possible to do so, it is well to brown the meat before adding the water to it. You cannot do this with bouillon or white soup on account of preserving the transparency and the whiteness. But in the family soups, where nourishing qualities are not sacrificed for appearance, it is a good thing to do.—Sallie Joy White, in Woman's Home Companion.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

SAT NEXT TO GRANT.

And There Is Reason to Believe She Boasts About It to This Day.

Visitors to Washington will probably remember an old second-hand book dealer, who on nice days sits in front of his shop, on the north side of Pennsylvania avenue, just opposite the Peace monument, says the New York Herald. He is as much a part of Washington as is the white house, and he numbers among his friends many of those prominent in national affairs. He tells many amusing stories of the statesmen of the days just following the civil war. He relates one story in which he and President Grant figured rather prominently.

The old bookseller had received a ticket for a theatrical performance. He went early and took his seat in the parquet. Soon a family consisting of a husband and wife and several grown-up daughters took the seats to his right. A little later a man came and sat on his left, next the aisle. The old bookseller is blind in the left eye and did not pay any attention to the man on his left. At the end of the first act the lady on his right leaned over and asked him if the stranger were not President Grant. Sure enough, it was, and the lady was so informed.

"I reckon maybe you kin see a mite better from this chair where I'm sittin'," the old gentleman remarked, "and if you think you'd rather change with me I'm willing."

A second invitation was not required. "And I didn't have to change only with the woman, but with her hull family, and I thought they'd push me out in the aisle. But I'll bet that to this day the woman tells of the time when she sat next to the president," the old bookseller adds.

The Cradle in Which Each First-Born Son of Marlborough House Is Rocked.

There is exhibited in the drawing room at Marlborough house the wonderful golden cradle in which each first-born son of the house of Marlborough is rocked during his infancy, says Ainslee's Magazine. In this cradle, which is perhaps the most beautiful and costly thing of its kind in the world, the present little marquis of Blandford was placed on his christening day, when he had been given the name of John Albert Edward William Churchill. The little heir, by the way, is named for three well-known persons: John, for the great duke; Albert Edward, for the prince of Wales, one of his godfathers, and William, for his grandfather and godfather, William K. Vanderbilt.

The two children are very closely guarded in the nursery, which consists of the most charming suite of rooms in the palace. Here the young duchess, who is a most proud and devoted mother, spends much of her time with her babies. When they go out in their blue and white perambulators for exercise they are wheeled about in what is known as the "kitchen gardens," among the fruits and vegetables, for except on show days the kitchen gardens are not delivered over to tourists for inspection. Thus the two little lords may hold high carnival without fear of public intrusion and snapshooters. On other days they are wheeled about where their nurses will, within the 350 acres of private grounds, which are walled off from Blenheim park.

Beware of a Cough.

A cough is not a disease but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing the diseases which cause coughing. If it is not beneficial it will not cost you a cent. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
NORFOLK, ss.
SUPERIOR COURT.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court, next to be holden at Dedham, within and for the county of Norfolk:

Respectfully represents and libels George E. Despeaux of Medway, in said county, that he was lawfully married to Addie E. Despeaux, now of Eastford, in the state of Connecticut, at Hopedale, in the county of Worcester, September 3, 1884, and thereafterwards your libellant and the said Addie lived together as husband and wife in this commonwealth at Medway, in said Norfolk county; that your libellant has always been faithful to his marriage vows and obligations, but the said Addie, being wholly regardless of the same at said Medway on or about the twenty-fifth day of January, 1900, committed the crime of adultery with one Nelson Tanner and has committed said crime with said Tanner on divers days and times between January 25, 1900, and the date of this libel.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Addie E. Despeaux.

Dated the eleventh day of April, 1900

GEORGE E. DESPEAUX.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
NORFOLK, ss.
SUPERIOR COURT.

On the foregoing libel it is ordered that the libellant give notice to the said Addie E. Despeax, the libellee, to appear before the justices of this court, to be holden at Dedham, within and for said county, on the first Monday of June next, by causing an attested copy of said libel, and of this order thereon, to be published once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper printed at Franklin, in the county of Norfolk, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before the said first Monday of June next, and further, by sending through the mail, as soon as may be, by a registered letter addressed to the last known residence of the said Addie E. Despeaux an attested copy of said libel and of this order thereon, that the said Addie E. Despeaux may then and there show cause why the prayer of said libel should not be granted.

By the Court.

LOUIS A. COOK, Clerk.

April 16, A. D. 1900.

A true copy of said libel and of the order thereon.

Meanwhile the tree warden has been looking over South park with a view to improving the condition of some of the trees there.

Caponc's band gave an excellent concert at the Opera house last Saturday evening, being assisted by Miss Helen Green of Providence, a remarkably fine soprano singer. The concert, both vocal and instrumental, was the best heard here this season, and we hope they will come again, as they made a most favorable impression.

At the meeting of J. G. Ray Engine company, No. 3, Wednesday evening the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Foreman, T. E. Feeley; first assistant, L. E Morrissey; second assistant, P A. Collins; clerk, Albert Burgess: treasurer, L. E. Morrissey; steward, Harry Spence; standing committee, Harry Granger, P. A. Collins, John Malloy.

J. J. Stewart has just had a long distance telephone put in at his home on King street. Mr. Stewart surmounted a number of difficulties, one of which was the fact that his house was such a distance out that the company had no poles or lines running there. Mr. Stewart, therefore, purchased the poles himself, the company setting them up He will find the 'phone exceedingly convenient.

There was a large attendance at the Baptist social Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. A. P. Pendleton, 9 Union street. The house is very large and convenient for such a gathering. Supper was served from 6 to 7.30, and being of a conundrum character afforded a great deal of amusement. After this there was a watch test and a penny test. Ice cream and cake were served and sociability was unbounded. It was a most enjoyable occasion.

Bion B. Blaisdell, formerly living on the Mount and doing business in Boston, but for a year under indictment for embezzlement, was acquitted at Boston this week by order of the court, Charles Atkinson having refused to testify against his old partner. Atkinson is serving a long term in connection with the collapse of the corporation which bore his name. He refused to give evidence on the ground that his testimony might incriminate himself still further.

Miss Lizzie Pendergast entertained her friends on Tuesday evening, her 25th birthday anniversary. They presented her a beautiful May basket filled with all good things and also an elegant emerald pin, which was presented in a neat little speech by Miss Julia Curran. Miss Pendergast, although taken by surprise, responded in a suitable manner and tendered the hospitality of her home to all. Music, recitations, refreshments, etc., made it a very pleasant occasion.

William Mann is quite seriously ill at his home with heart trouble, preventing his lying down at night. What little sleep he gets he secures while sitting in a chair with his head resting upon a table. During the winter he had a severe illness, but recovered somewhat, though this attack is considered more dangerous than the preceding one. Although 80 years of age it was not till about three years ago that he knew what it was to be sick, his entire life being a continued state of good health.

It will pay one to take a drive on the Wrentham road any evening to see the Italians cooking their supper by out-of-door fires at the foot of Eagle hill. The figures flit about in the semi darkness, making wierd and fanciful pictures. A score of fires are snapping and sputtering, over which the Italians cook their frugal meal. It is asserted that they can live on a sum so small per day as would challenge belief by anyone not conversant with their methods of living. They are housed in the old mill close by.

The Medfield and Medway street railway is now in running order and will make half hourly time between Medway and Dedham on Saturday and Sunday, May 5 and 6. Indeed, the connection between Milford and Boston is excellent, as one may leave Milford at 6.50 a. m. and reach Boston at 9.10, taking steam cars from Dedham. The fare is 40 cents. The return trip takes more time, owing to a lack of close connection by the Milford cars at Medway. Later on the run both ways should not take over two hours.

G. I. Partridge went to Grafton last Tuesday evening and assisted in the concert given by D. B. Hathaway of that place, it being the seventy fifth anniversary of Mr. Hathaway's musical career. He began as a drummer boy for the Grafton militia, then he took up the fife and clarinet and became a fine performer, and his services were wanted wherever music was used. On this occasion he beat the drum and Mr. Partridge played the same old music that he drummed on Grafton common seventy-five years ago. Mr. Hathaway was in the 25th Regiment band in the war, went to California twice and now, at 87 years of age, plays the clarinet wonderfully.

Next Sunday, at the Methodist church, the pastor, S. A. Cook, will begin a series of sermons on the general subject, "The Sacred Feast, or the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper." There will be five sermons in the series, and they will be given successively on the first Sunday morning of each month, (sacramental Sunday). The following subjects will be treated: "Unity in Christ, Manifest in Church Fellowship;" "The Office of the Holy Spirit in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper;" "The Lord's Supper as a Covenanting Act;" "Eucharistic Joy;" "Anticipative Communion." Those interested in a better understanding of this important sacrament of the church will do well to be present.

The May festival of St. John's guild closed last Tuesday night with most satisfactory results. The entertainment was thoroughly enjoyed by a large audience. Four seamen from the steamship "Irishman," now in port, were present and sang their numerous "shanties" with a heartiness and spirit that was truly rousing. Mr. Strayhorn of Boston sang most acceptably. Mr. Harvey sang a sailor song. Miss Wing and Miss Stevens rendered vocal selections with fine effect and Mrs. Nickleson's reading was encored most appreciatively The lecture by Mr. Stanton H. King was a typical sailor yarn replete with incident and adventures, and was spun with great wit and fervor. After the entertainment the booths did a good business and the young people danced till midnight. A generous sum was netted by the guild to be added to the building fund.

Passes Away.

After a long illness of tuberculosis, Chester Ballou Smith died Thursday in Woonsocket. The illness of the deceased dates from March of last year, when he went to Boston on a business trip and was taken ill there. When summer came he went to Magnolia and was again taken ill and confined to the house until October, when he came home for a few days Later he went south and at Washington was seized with an attack of his malady. He was taken to the Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore, and there underwent an operation, which seemed to better his condition. He then went to Saranac Lake, and he began to fail quite rapidly while there, and about a month ago he was brought home in a very weak condition. He has not suffered to any extent, and while there for the past month has been very comfortable.

His father dying when Chester was quite young, the subject of this sketch spent his youthful days as a member of the household of his grandfather, Hon. L. W. Ballou.

On Oct. 16, 1888, he was united in marriage to Mabel Rathbun, daughter of Lieut. Gov. Oscar J. Rathbun, and a granddaughter of Mrs. Edward Harris. One child, Rathbun H., who has since died, resulted from the union. Mrs. Smith survives He leaves one brother, and his mother and paternal grandfather also survive. The funeral will be held Sunday afternoon, at 1.30 o'clock, from his late home.

A Miraculous Escape.

The terrific crash of thunder and the blinding flash which accompanied it during the thunder storm last evening sent a thrill of fear through every one, and it was felt that the bolt must have struck somewhere. This proved to be the case, as the Knowlton house, on Summer street, occupied by W. E. Scott, was badly shattered. The bolt entered the roof, ripping the boarding and actually severing the front of the house from the sides It entered an upper room where Mrs. Scott lay sick, setting clothing afire, and then went downstairs, separating plaster from lathes, circling the room, removing all the pictures from the walls by melting the cords, overturned the stove, ruined the organ and demolished the furniture generally. It crossed the carpet diagonally, went into the entry and out into the street, making a furrow in the yard as if done with a plough. All the windows were shattered in front and at the side, blinds were broken, and a more complete wreck is difficult to imagine. Although five people were in the two rooms affected, yet no one was injured beyond the shocks received, some of them requiring a number of minutes to recover. How the inmates could have escaped is indeed a mystery.

Almost a Panic.

The extinguishing of the electric lights during the second act of "Nan, the Mascot," which was being presented at the Opera house last evening when the severe thunder storm arose, came near precipitating a panic. The lighting of matches soon after the lights went out caused some one to yell, "Fire!" Then, in the darkness, some of the audience started for the door and a few made their way out. But the door was soon locked. Mr. Partridge and Mr. Cody joined with others in trying to restore quiet.

Rev. Father Lee was upon the stage urging the audience to remain in their seats and be calm, as there was no danger from fire. His words had a quieting effect on those who had become alarmed, and soon the excitement passed away and what might have been a serious panic was most fortunately prevented. The play went on with for a time with gas as an illuminator and later the electric current was again turned on. During the excitement three ladies fainted, and Mrs. Frank Woolford, who with her little daughter had made her way out of the hall, fell in a faint while descending the stairs and went down the full flight. She was picked up in an unconscious condition and taken to Winchenbach's store, where Dr. Hussey attended her. She suffered severely from shock, but revived after a time and was conveyed to her home.

Richardson's Market.

Think of it! Corned beef at 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 cents. Some of these are choice bits and cannot be beaten. Then we have the finest "green stuff" to be found in the Boston markets, all kinds. Try our new string beans. Home-killed veal, extra fine; roast beef as low as 8 cents, toothsome asparagus, fine, sweet butter for table or cooking, canned goods of all kinds.

Views of Residences.

Now, before the trees leaf fully, is the best time to arrange for photos of your home, either exterior or interior. Call and see samples and let me quote prices. Business hours during the summer, 8 to 12 a. m., 1.15 to 5 p. m., 7 to 8 Saturday evenings.

Advertising is business news. It tells the things which are of great daily importance. It is of more account to the frugal housewife to know where to get certain necessary commodities at a less price than usual than to know of the troubles in Siam and Alaska.

An Excellent Presentation.

All who witnessed the presentation of "Nan, the Mascot," by the members of St. Mary's Dramatic society at the Opera house last evening were treated to a most creditable display of amateur acting. The play itself was replete with stirring situations and the plot was a good one, being acted out in a most realistic way by the performers, who portrayed the bright and dark sides of the play with remarkably fine effect. There was a good-sized audience present, and its pleasure was made manifest at various stages by liberal applause. The only thing to mar the pleasure of the occasion—and this was really for only a few minutes—was the excitement caused by the bolt of lightning that put out the electric lights.

The presentation last evening was perhaps the best of all the previous excellent renditions given by the talented members of the society. The cast was a strong one without a single exception. The foremost characters—taken by Miss Lamont, as Nan, the Mascot; Miss Macdermott, as Mrs. Baldwin; Daniel Griffin, as Deacon Smartweed; Thomas Macdermott, as Ben Flood, and Dennis Feeley, as Caleb Baldwin—were acted out in a really professional way by the ladies and gentlemen named, and they certainly were deserving of the flattering reception tendered them The full cast was as follows:

Nan, the Mascotte	Miss Lizzie Lamont
Caleb Baldwin	Dennis Feeley
Ben Flood, Baldwin's evil genius, alias Phineas Grabber	Thomas Macdermott
Edward De Lancy Van Spread, rather dudish	James Kelley
Deacon Smartweed, a pillar of the church,	Daniel Griffin
Arthur Sherwood, Nan's lover	George Cody
Dr. Windsall, Baldwin's physician,	Frank Lamont
Uriah Fox, a lawyer	Peter Embser
Jimsey, Frackett's fool	James Kelley
John, a servant	Peter Embser
Mrs. Baldwin, who tries to shine in society	Miss Rose Macdermott
Mrs. Van Spread, leader (?) in society,	Miss Margaret Doherty
Widder Jehonnett, who has designs on the Deacon	Miss Eliza White

During the play vocal selections were rendered by Alexander Boucher, George Cody and Daniel Griffin in excellent voice. Excellent music was furnished by the American band orchestra. At the conclusion of the play the floor was cleared for dancing which was enjoyed by a large number until an early hour this morning.

A Successful Sale.

Horsemen from all over New England came to town Tuesday to attend the sale of the trotting and breeding stock in the stable of J. J. McCarthy, and Franklin has seldom been visited upon any one day by so many prosperous looking turfmen. D. W. Corson, the auctioneer, was in his element. Two things the genial "Dave" is always enthusiastic upon, horses and the G. A. R. He could talk "hoss" till the visiting horsemen were tired, and he did so, but he managed to get for nine of the equines $5,060, a remarkably good figure. He insists, also, that every horse was sold on bonafide bids, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

Lady Bayard, a bay filly, with a record of 2.17 1-2, and next to Nordeau, the best horse in the McCarthy string, was knocked down to A. Sancier of Providence for $16.00.

The other horses sold included the br. g., Young Bayard, for $650, and the bay g., Rigby Wilkes, for $550, both being purchased for the Wellington stable at Oxford; the bay filly, Miss Lewis, for $600, and the blk. filly, Mary King, for $375, bought for the Lookout farm at South Natick; the bay g., Cornish Boy, sold to T. J. Kiley, South Boston, for $225; the bay g., Royal Boone, was taken by Samuel Milor of Pascoag for $235; the blk. mare, Crescent Wilkes, to Dr. McDonald of Boston for $170; the bay g., Mack, to E. L Hopkins, for $132, and Red Roan to William Johuson of Franklin, for $140.

The Postmastership.

It now transpires that there are a number of persons credited with desiring to step into Postmaster Conroy's shoes and serve Uncle Sam with the best of their ability. We noted the fact some time ago that the former encumbent, H. A. Talbot, was an aspirant and his candidacy had secured the endorsement of the Town committee and many of the influential citizens. At that time it was not thought that there would be other candidates, but the new developments have somewhat complicated matters, and will render Congressman Sprague's position in the matter somewhat more delicate. It is understood that Mr. Talbot's petition went in some time ago, but just why no action has been taken is not stated.

Not A Candidate.

I desire to heartily thank my friends for their interest, but to prevent misunderstanding, and wishing to avoid faction feeling, I withdrew my name early in the week absolutely from the post mastership question.

Mr. Rathbun Resigns.

Since the American Woolen company absorbed the Ray mills here some months ago, the company's interests have been looked after by E. H. Rathbun, the resident agent, although it was understood at the time that he did not care to retain the position permanently.

According to plans recently made by Mr. Rathbun he has resigned his position, as his varied interests here and elsewhere demand the major portion of his time and attention. Fred P. Chapman takes the place, which is distinctly in the line of promotion, a fact which all of his friends will be pleased to learn. Mr. Chapman will have as assistant superintendent Andrew J. Griffin, the designer.

Mr. Chapman's knowledge of the detail of the business, his faithfulness and natural adaptiveness to his work make it appear a wise and practical move on the part of the company to select him for this important position of superintendent and agent.

Coming May 5th.

Owing to the unusual success attained by the Graham company in Boston recently, this organization with many added and new features plays and engagement at Morse Opera house tomorrow evening "Greater than ever" and "everything new" are the claims made for this entertainment, as we shall see it now. This is probably the largest colored organization before the public, and it is probably safe to say that it is the best. Manager Graham was the first and still leads in the effort to combine the pastimes of the Southern negro, in every variety, in such form as to be acceptable to the very best class of theatre-goers. Here is an organization which includes a captivating chorus of merry mulatto maidens, coon comedies of much native wit colored "babies" indulging in pedal pyrotechnics, black Adonises, chocolate Venuses, "high born" colored ladies who display the suppleness of the willow, fancy steppers, and prize cake walkers of national reputation. With beautiful calcium effects, giddy costuming and scenic attractiveness, one may expect some fevelations in rag-time revelries.

Are You Ready?

With the opening up of the trolley lines to Wrentham and the Medways, every one expects that Franklin merchants will receive a large amount of what is practically new business, especially from those who have heretofore been compelled to do their trading at home largely, owing to the poor facilities for getting outside. The trolley will change all that. With reasonable fares between the Medways and Franklin, and also Wrentham, the trade is coming here in much larger amount than the volume of Franklin trade which goes to Woonsocket, which is admitted to be quite an important factor in our merchants' cash balance Therefore it behooves our merchants to be ready to receive the new trade, both by invitation through a reputable medium like THE SENTINEL, and also by a quality and quantity of goods upon their shelves which will continue to induce trading here in preference to elsewhere. The right kind of work will do this.

Fresh Lobsters.

All sold last week. We shall receive again on Saturday a selected lot of freshly boiled lobsters, finer than any ever received in town. You will want one when you have seen ours. Spinach, dandelions, radishes, lettuce, rhubarb, cucumbers, Bermuda onions; fresh killed fowls, lamb, veal, pork, choice beef, and as a delicacy we have Van Camp's celebrated concentrated soups of all kinds. Try them. Also the Brunswick canned goods.

FRANKLIN NEWS.

O'Hooligan's Wedding

The greatest laugh producer on earth, with funny comedians, pretty girls, sparkling music, will be here Saturday evening, May 12. O'Hooligan's Wedding is imbued with Celtic wit and German philosophy. A comedy that brings laughter to many people who have not laughed in years. It is replete with pretty girls, funny comedians, novel specialties, gorgeous costumes and a star cast of metropolitan favorites. The specialties are high class and up to date. Among the well known performers are the following: Dupree and Dupree, the sketch artists; the only and original Pat Conroy, the Irish ambassador; the dashing soubrette, May Jackson, the clever Irish comedian, Dick Mack; the little magnets, Jackson and Douglas, character artists; the king and queen of comedy, Barr and Benton; those famous dispensers of German wit, Whiteley & Bell, and others. Secure seats in advance; on sale at usual places.

Their Pay Raised.

The street car men, comprising the motormen and conductors of the Woonsocket Street railway and the Milford, Attleboro & Woonsocket Street railway, have been notified of an advance in wages, to take effect June 3, the first in years. The advance is at the rate of two cents an hour, which gives the men twenty cents for that time where they have always received eighteen. The Woonsocket motormen and conductors have always received eighteen cents per hour, with the exception of about eight years ago, when President and General Manager Edgar K. Ray gave up control of the road for about a year. During that time the men were reduced to sixteen cents. When Mr. Ray came back into office the eighteen cent rate was restored. This restoration and the present raise were both voluntary. It will affect about fifty men of the Woonsocket Street railway, and by the time it goes into effect twenty five men will be at work on the Milford, Attleboro & Woonsocket road.

Base Ball Merely Slumbering.

Although the idea has not been abandoned by those who have been considering the scheme, it is said that the prospect for the formation of a valley base ball league, to include Franklin, Woonsocket, Milford and the Attleboros, is diminishing because of failure to secure the necessary financial backing to organize and maintain the league. There is talk of the Milford, Attleboro and Woonsocket Street Railway Company becoming interested with the base ball managers in the enterprise, but it is quite certain that the railroad people have as yet made no move in this direction. There are also rumors of intended changes in Indian Rock Park, the improvements said to be contemplated including an up to date ball ground in every detail, with modern grand stand, new bleachers, score boards, etc.

Whether the league is formed or not, Manager Carter will have a strong amateur team in Franklin this season, and it is certain that Milford and the Attleboros, with, perhaps, Woonsocket, will have independent teams, so that if the scheme of a league falls through, the lovers of the national sport in this section will not be inconvenienced thereby in the matter of witnessing games.

An alarm was rung in from box 13 at 4.30 Tuesday afternoon on account of a fire that was fast gaining headway in the woods at the northerly end of Pleasant street and that was in dangerous proximity to a number of dwellings in the neighborhood. Residents in the vicinity fought the flames for some time and a second alarm was sounded. The fire department was on hand soon after the first alarm, however, and the J. G. Ray engine company soon had streams on the burning brush and succeeded in extinguishing the blaze after 30 minutes' work before any material damage was done.

DUNRAVEN'S SECOND ERROR.

His Suspicions Were Once More Aroused Regarding Excess of Ballast.

The earl of Dunraven is a tory of the most militant, shellback type, and at the same time he ruined his reputation in America by his charges against the yacht Defender, which afterward he was unable to substantiate, he seriously impaired his popularity over here, says the Philadelphia Post. Englishmen object to a fellow countryman making an exhibition of himself, and the general impression there is that his lordship acted foolishly. Only the other day Lord Dunraven received a gentle reminder that his fatuous charges against American yachtsmen were not forgotten by any means. He is one of the reactionary members of the London school board. If only citizens of the United States knew how Londoners have to fight for popular education against thick-headed toryism they would not wonder at the ignorance and crankedness that are met with in the poorer quarters of the mighty metropolis. Dunraven was hauling a board school-master over the coals for being, as he claimed, the worse for liquor, and on investigation it turned out that the charge was quite unfounded. John Lobb, quite a character in his way, and also a member of the school board, in making a report of the matter wound it up in the following words: "In fact, this case turns out to be a second occasion on which the noble lord mistakenly believed a gentleman to have taken on an unjust amount of ballast."

WHAT LACK I YET?

The young man said unto Him: All these things have I kept from my youth up; what lack I yet?—Matt. 19:20.

I have kept the commandments and said my prayers,
Before the world I am pure and clean;
In the temple I worship and no one dares
To hint of a hunger or want unseen.
But I feel a longing—a vague unrest—
For something better than I have known;
I knock at Thy heart, good Master, in quest
Of something to satisfy my own.

The young man sorrowfully went his way;
The test was stronger than he could bear,
And with all his wealth he was poor that day,
For his soul was starving within him there.
Oh, we struggle and pray and yearning sigh
For the peace of God in our hearts, and yet
We cling to some secret idol and cry,
"Master, good Master, what lack I yet?"
—Anne H. Woodruff, in Good Housekeeping.

WHY?

Have a Purpose in Life—The Alpine Climber's Useless Struggle—A Strange Question.

Mr. Harold Spender, the Alpine climber, in his book on the High Pyrenees, recently published, tells of an unexpected climax to one of his feats.

With two companions he had scaled one of the most difficult peaks, and, descending, found refuge from the storm and night in the chalet of a goatsherd. The three men, half-frozen, and exhausted with the long and terrible strain, but glowing with triumph, crouched before the fire.

The goatsherd's wife, a dull old woman, stood looking at them silently for awhile, and then pronounced a single word:

"Per qui?" (Why?)

Spender declares that he and his companions looked at each other with an expression of surprise on each face. They had risked health and strength and life itself. "Why?" What had they gained?

There was no answer. The one word struck like a blank wall across their consciousness of useless struggle and suffering and danger.

The snow fell outside, and the mist shut out the hills. They did not talk to each other. Each was asking himself: "Why?"

There are other heights in the world beside those in the Alps, which men try to scale to as little purpose.

The man who gives his life to the gathering of millions, which he never uses or enjoys; the young wife who spends her husband's hard-earned wages in aping women of fashion; the girl trying to force her way into the "stylish set" of her town, dressing and entertaining beyond her means; the college boy who is struggling to show his manliness by leading the fast men of his class—all are climbing barren heights, at the top of which is neither profit nor honor.

Most of us have tried some of this Alpine-climbing in our day. It would have been well for us if some honest soul like the goatsherd's wife had stood in our path with the word: "Why?"—Youth's Companion.

THE HOUSEHOLD ANGEL.

Glad-Hearted Cheeriness in the Home—Christian Character Better Than Faultlessness.

The glad-hearted, cheery woman who makes the best of everything, is a treasure in her house. She may make a mistake, she may forget, she may spoil a dish in cooking or in baking, but with the mishap, she sends in a gleam of sunshine, a smile, a laugh, or some gay and kindly word, [illegible] forget their disappointments and make the best of what they cannot help.

How much better this than the unvarying precision of one who has no faults and no patience with those who have; who never makes mistakes and makes ill weather for others who do! Accuracy and precision are excellent; punctuality and promptness are invaluable, but "love is the fulfilling of the law," and Christian character is greater than faultlessness [illegible] anything else.

If you are born with sunshine in your heart, thank God for it, and let it shine [illegible] then upward gaze on the [illegible] to catch the [illegible] that beams from His face. [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] We [illegible] in the place of duty [illegible] there is never [illegible] which [illegible] first [illegible] a child of God [illegible] an [illegible] question is [illegible] the [illegible] at the start. [illegible] the danger or the safety of the [illegible] is a [illegible] after [illegible] the path of duty [illegible] protected [illegible] every [illegible] where one had [illegible] from God to be at the time. God is more interested than the man himself, or his family, or his friends, as to the safety of every child of his who is where He has summoned Him to be just now. On that point we can rest assured.—S. S. Times.

Creeds.

Creeds, they say, are changing. But to change a creed does not change Christianity. Religion was before the Bible; it is the creed that is changing. Rev. Dr. Hillis.

The Malaria Mosquito.

According to the observations of Maj. Ronald Ross in India the germs of malaria are borne, not by the ordinary brindled or gray mosquito, but by his cousin the spotted-winged mosquito. Maj. Ross was recently sent to the west coast of Africa to investigate the sources of malaria there and he reports that, as in India, the spotted-winged mosquito is the agent through which the disease is spread. Italian investigators have also shown that mosquitoes convey the germs of malaria into the blood of human beings.

Books are not furniture, and a library does not consist of cases. Bookcases are bodies necessary only for the protection of the souls of volumes within them. The less care the better, so long as it does its work. Too many persons have the furniture idea in their heads when they think of a library and will first provide a cumbersome, top heavy, over-ornamented receptacle with awkward doors, that in its massiveness dwarfs the volumes it contains and proves to be anything but an ornament to the room it is in, so much the worse for the general aesthetic effect; better plain, open shelves, that exhibit their contents and make them easy of access.—N. Y. Herald.

Raisin-Nut Rice Cakes.

Boil one-half pound of rice until tender and allow it to cool. Then add one-fourth pound each of chopped nuts and chopped raisins; mix well together. Add one well beaten egg, and form into balls. Dip in the white of egg, then in grated cake crumbs (stale sponge cake is best). Drop in hot lard and cook to a golden brown. Serve with whipped cream.—Good Housekeeping.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition: my skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying Electric Bitters, and to my great joy and surprise the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they saved my life and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them; only 50c. per bottle at A. C. Mason & Co.'s drug store.

YAVA-SUPAI INDIANS.

An Arizona Tribe Which Is Not Very Well Known.

They Live in a Beautiful Country and Are Industrious and Peace-Loving—Adepts in Many Paying Trades.

[Special Arizona Letter.]

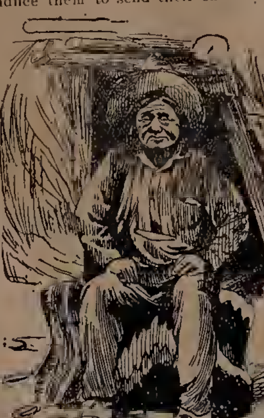
THERE has not been as much wild nonsense and unmitigated falsehood written about any tribe of Indians in the world as about the Yava Supais, or Coconincs, whose home is in Cataract canyon, one of the tributaries of the Grand canyon of the Colorado river, in Arizona. The reasons for this mendacity are clear. The home of the Supais is so difficult of access, and until within the last ten years was so almost inaccessible that not ten white men had ever reached it since the time the Spaniards first discovered the tribe, 350 years ago. They were an exceedingly shy people and most averse to leading anyone to their village, and the trails by which they did descend were so frightful that few would ever recommend their friends to brave the dangers and go.

Ten years ago I first visited them, was well received, and soon after was privileged to become a member of the family of the chief, and henceforth have been regarded as "a Supai with a white face."

The last chief of the tribe was a stern, stalwart old warrior, named Kohot, but generally known to the whites as Capt. Navajo. I once visited him at his royal mansion. He was sitting out of doors on a large deerskin, cross-legged, busily engaged in making for himself a pair of moccasins. His three wives sat near by, engaged in their domestic vocations, and occasionally helping their lord. The youngest squaw was quite good looking, and, at the command of Navajo, went out to the peach orchard and brought [illegible] large basketful of the delicious, ripe peaches, which, in such a spot, so far removed from civilization, seemed especially delicious and palatable.

Navajo, however, was by no means friendly to the white men, or perhaps I ought to say, he would have preferred that they keep away from the Supais. With the eye of a keen observer, he noticed the demoralization that followed contact with the whites amongst the neighboring tribes—especially the Hualpais—and, wisely and patriotically, he wished to avoid having his own people "civilized" in that way.

I was once present at a pow-wow held between the tribes and a special commissioner sent out by United States Indian Commissioner Morgan to investigate their condition, and, if possible, induce them to send their children to the Indian school at Fort Mojave. Never shall I forget the final decision of Navajo, translated by his son "Tom," and delivered with native eloquence and dramatic force: "Tell the great father at Washington that the Supais no want 'em white man—him come steal 'em Supai corn, teach 'em Supai drink whisky, teach 'em Supai gamble; him ask 'em Supai show 'em water hole and spling (spring), and then him no let Supai water him horses there; him ask 'em Supai show 'em mine, and then him say him belong all same white man. Him teach 'em Supai lie; him want to catch 'em Supai squaw. We no want 'em white man—Supai no like 'em." Then, with all the assembled braves of the tribe squatted on the ground around him, he and his one-eyed son the center of the group, the commissioner sitting on one side of the "ha-we," or wickiup, Navajo gave a dramatic summary of the whole question. Making a little heap of sand with one hand he called out: "White man's sugar! Ha-ne-gi!" This latter word means "good." This signified that the offer the commissioner had made of giving them sugar was all right. The whole tribe then solemnly and emphatically repeated the word "Ha-ne-gi." Then one by one Navajo named the other good things the "great father at Washington" had offered them if they would send their children to school, making a small sand heap to represent it, and naming it "ha-ne-gi." The braves repeated in chorus that it was good.



NAVAJO SUPAI CHIEF.

Then Navajo made another sand pile, naming it "white man's school," and exclaiming with vigor and disgust "ha-na-to-op-o-gi" — bad — and with one wide sweep of the hand erasing all the sand piles, the good and the bad, rose to his feet as the men shouted "ha-na-to-op-o-gi," and, bowing to the commissioner, marched silently away. The pow-wow was ended, and the offer of the commissioner refused.

Since that time, through the persistent endeavors of the best friend the Supais have ever had, Mr. W. W. Bass, the government has established a school there, where the children are taught all useful and practical knowledge, sewing, dress-making, knitting, etc., and a farmer gives instruction to the men in caring for their fields and crops. For one of the first things the visitor notices in the canyon where the village is located is the fine character of the soil, and the ease with which the creek can be used for purposes of irrigation. The soil in the whole of the tillable part of the canyon is exceedingly rich, and fine corn, melons, pumpkins, squash, chiles and peaches are grown in profusion.

That the Supais are more provident than many Indian peoples is evidenced by the fact that at certain places near the summit of their lofty and precipitous walls, paintings may be seen, representing ears of corn, which upon inquiry I found to be connected with the following tradition. Many, many years ago the valley was entirely covered with cotton wood and other trees and their flourishing cornfields, and the tribe was prosperous and happy. But one dreadful day a cloudburst came and washed away their "ha-wes" (houses), washed out their corn and drowned a large number of their men, women and children. The survivors were left homeless and without food. That year was an exceedingly hard one to them, and they barely subsisted on the few rats, etc., they could snare and the roots they could dig up. As a result the chief men of the tribe agreed in the future to lay aside a certain proportion of all their corn, peaches, mescal, etc., and store it in one of these inaccessible caves—that is inaccessible from above except by ropes, and perfectly safe from any fear of inundation from below. The paintings of the ears of corn denoted the location of those storehouses.

But of late years this custom has fallen into disrepute. Their excess of peaches and corn is sold to the white people at the nearest points on the railway, and now that they are beginning to sell their produce and the baskets they make they learn to keep the money thus gained until a "rainy day."

At the same time corn and dried peaches are still to be found in these wonderful and elevated granaries. The older men, to whom tradition appeals more powerfully than to the rising generation which is learning "white men's ways" at the school, still believe in keeping a surplus stock in reserve.

While not as accomplished basket-makers as are some other Indian women it is most interesting to watch the squaws engaged in the work of basket-making. They take the willows, strip them and then divide them into "skeins," with which they weave their baskets. They are not so elaborate in pattern, or daintily beautiful in design, execution and color as those of some of the California tribes, still they are well made, and are generally so closely woven that they will hold water. Indeed I have bought many of them that had to be emptied of mutton-broth, mush, batter for making their wafer-bread, etc., before I could bring them away. As soon as a girl is able to walk she is taught to weave.

Most white people would find it hard work to cook in a basket, but the Supais have been doing it for many generations. They have two methods. The simplest and most primitive way is to drop stones that have been heated in the camp fire into the water, or whatever other liquid is to be boiled or cooked. This, of course, requires constant attention, for as soon as a stone cools it must be fished out, placed in the fire and reheated before it can again be used.

The other method is to cover the basket with a thick layer of clay and sand, and then use it as an ordinary earthenware vessel, putting it directly over the coals.

According to our scientific experts it was by the falling from the basket of one of these clay bottoms that the art of pottery-making was discovered. Finding the bowl-shaped clay-basket separated from the wicker basket, the attention of the primitive Indian was directed to the possibilities of clay as an article for the manufacture of a vessel that would hold water, and once the principle was discovered it was easy to progress until pottery was made of all shapes and sizes desired.

The Mark of the Lydy.

The house surgeon of a London hospital was attending to the injuries of a poor woman whose arm had been severely bitten. As he was dressing the wound he said:

"I cannot make out what sort of a creature bit you. This is too small for a horse's bite and too large for a dog's."

"Oh, sir," replied the patient, "it wasn't a animal; it was another lydy."

BIG TRUCK AND BIG TEAM.

How the Heavy Cables for San Francisco Street Cars Are Transported.

San Francisco is the home of the cable road, and it contains the biggest truck for hauling the big cables used for street railway traffic and the largest team of horses ever put together to draw a single load. The numbers of cables in use in San Francisco and the frequency with which the manufacturers are called upon to move them, led to the invention of the truck, which weighs in itself 15 tons. It has two wheels behind and four smaller wheels in front, the four in front being arranged on a single line. These front wheels are on two separate axles, and the team has two tongues. This allows the two sets of front wheels to be moved independently of each other, and in case of need they may be turned at opposite angles and made to serve as an additional brake to the truck. The Fulton street cable is 31,000 feet long, and the entire load weighed 130,000 pounds. To support such a weight a wheel of special manufacture was necessary. The wheels are 16 inches broad and have a core of iron. They have two tires. Between the core and the inner tire the space is filled in with wooden wedges, so ingeniously arranged that the weight of the load has a tendency to draw the wedges together rather than force them apart. Between the outer and inner tires there is another and similar arrangement of wedges. The low body of the truck is of wood.

The cables are loaded on between the rear trucks, which are just wide enough apart to permit the passage of the reel, and the process of loading takes about an hour. They may be unloaded in 20 minutes.

The team which draws this truck varies according to the size of the cable to be drawn. The smallest is composed of 36 horses. When a cable of large size is to be hauled in rainy weather 60 horses are used. These horses are arranged four abreast, but the pair on the right of each four is attached to the truck independently of the pair on the left. This arrangement continues throughout the team, so that in reality the team is made up of two parallel teams, harnessed two abreast and drawing from independent axles and tongues. The entire line of 28 horses on the right can be swung to the right and the line of 28 on the left swung in that direction, turning the two pairs of wheels in front in opposite directions and forming an effective brake in case the strap brake on the rear wheels fails to hold on a steep grade. The horses are driven in sets of four, the drivers usually riding one horse and managing the one at the side and the two in front. Sometimes the drivers walk beside the team.

On asphalt streets, no matter how nearly level the street may appear to the ordinary load, it is always uphill work for this truck when loaded. The enormous weight has a tendency to make the asphalt pile up in front of the wheels, and it seems a constant climb. In wet weather the resistance requires extra power, hence the use of additional horses.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Meat Cooked by Cold.

Anyone who has ever picked up with a bare hand a piece of intensely cold iron knows that the touch burns almost as badly as if the metal were red hot. Indeed, the action of great heat and extreme cold are so similar that a Hungarian chemist has turned the latter to account to prepare meats for food. He subjects the meat to 60 degrees of frost, and then seals it up in air-tight cans. The result is that the meat, which is practically "cooked by cold," will keep any time, and can be eaten with very little further preparation.

L IS for Language, which baby soon learned.
And sweet were the words which betrayed how it yearned.
"Take all of my clothing and put it in "hock."
But buy me a cart from the "Cook Rolling Stock."

M IS for Mother, the angel of bliss,
Who makes home a heaven with one loving kiss
A smile lights her features when friends call and knock
To see baby's Cart from the "Cook Rolling Stock."

N IS for Naughty, the word that is clear
When papa leaves baby and calls for his beer
Just in for a quaff with the foam on the Bock.
Then off with that Coach from the "Cook Rolling Stock."

O IS for Orchard, where green apples grow.
When baby gets older he'll find them, you know.
We've been there and feel he'll need health for the shock.
Brace him up in a Coach from the "Cook Rolling Stock."

P IS for Paris, where girls put on style.
That great "Expo. free trip" beguiles us to smile.
When Brother John goes, may we wheel to the dock
The Prince in a Coach from the "Cook Rolling Stock."

Q IS for Quarter, the coin baby took
And swallowed in laughter while poor mamma shook.
She hustled the dear like a shot for the "Doc."
In a Go-Cart at hand from the "Cook Rolling Stock."

FRANKLIN NEWS IN BRIEF

Latest Local Events and Personal Items of Interest to Readers.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Feeley on Thursday.

Alphonso Briggs of Stoughton visited friends here Sunday.

Miss Hattie Porter has returned to her home in Searsport, Me.

Charles F. Nye returned on Saturday from a trip to Washington.

James Murray of Ruggles street is seriously ill with lung trouble.

Bert Turner has secured a position in a grocery store in Uxbridge.

Miss Emma Colby of Natick spent Sunday with friends in town.

The Franklin House and the J. G. Ray engine house are being reshingled.

Miss Huntress from Cambridge is visiting her sister, Mrs. C. H. Porter.

The Dean and High school teams will play ball on the campus Friday afternoon.

Dean will play the Tech. freshmen of Boston on the campus tomorrow afternoon.

Indications point to a large attendance from out of town at the Summer Dress party.

Caterer Fairfield will furnish refreshments at the Summer Dress party, May 10.

Henry Lilja and family, formerly living on Pleasant street, removed to Milford on Saturday.

The Ladies' Social circle will meet with Mrs. Lovell Metcalf, Central street, Wednesday afternoon.

R. W. Mayo of Monroe, Me., is spending a few days with his nephew, C. H. Porter, of Maple street.

Maroney Bros. moved their horses and rolling stock into their new barn on Washington street yesterday.

Mrs. W. H. Jackson will attend the sixth annual meeting of the Daughters of Liberty in Boston tomorrow.

Charles H. Partridge of Woonsocket was the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George I. Partridge, on Sunday.

Miss Katie McDougall, sister of J. B. McKinnon, has just come here from Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, to keep house for him.

E. E. Hubbard of Boston has been appointed administrator of the estate of the late Sabin Hubbard in a bond of $1,200.

William M. Comey has been appointed census taker for the town of Norfolk. A good selection, as he knows the ground thoroughly.

The walls of both the new brick tenements at Unionville are now up, the roofs are on and work on the interiors is now being done.

Workmen are tearing down the 50-foot brick chimney at the Singleton Worsted mill, it having been replaced by a fine iron structure last fall.

Miss Rose McDermott fell down the cellar stairs at her home on Friday evening and was badly shaken up. She mistook the cellar for the hall door.

If you don't want to serve on a jury do as the New Jersey man did who told the judge he "had the dyspepsia and never agreed with anybody, and didn't want the state put to expense in a second trial of any case."

Business at the textile works, Unionville, is reported as very good. All of the machines are not yet running, as the full number of hands has not been secured.

The types made us say last Friday that Mr. McCarthy's speediest trotter went for $16. It was simply a misplaced punctuation point. Of course it should have been $1,600.

The 11 months'-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ingalls of Howard street died Saturday morning. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon, the interment being in Union street cemetery.

Station Agent Judd was called into Boston this week with other agents of this division, nearly 100, to be measured for the new spring uniforms. When he appears in his new regalia don't subject him to the old chestnut by asking "where was the fire."

The Brown freshmen won from Dean on Saturday in a hard-hitting contest, the visitors having the lead from the start. The academy boys, however, made a good stand and played hard to win, but the odds were against them. Score: Brown 16, Dean 8.

Students at Dean have provided a fine entertainment for Friday evening in aid of the Athletic association, the two plays being "Thirty Minutes for Refreshments" and "The Happy Pair." These dramatic entertainments are always enjoyable, and a fine presentation is assured.

H. W. Gay has purchased a restaurant at 171 West Springfield street, Boston, called the "Griswold Cafe," and he reports it to appear to be a very desirable opening. Of course he would be glad to see his Franklin friends there at any time. C. H. Gay will be in charge.

The road department has nearly completed the spring cleaning of highways outside the village, and about a week more will finish the outside brushing up. Saturday the department was on Prospect street, South Franklin, where there is always something to do after a rain.

The Trowbridge and Textile teams played a lively game of ball on the Indian Rock park diamond Saturday afternoon, the Trowbridge experts finally taking their opponents into camp, 15 to 11. The batteries were Smith and McKenzie for Trowbridge and the Cross brothers for Textile.

A number from here saw the Boston-Philadelphia game in Boston on Saturday, the former winning, 13 to 10. The rank and file of base ball enthusiasts in town are rather against the Bostons, and therefore do not feel greatly disturbed because the one-time champions are grovelling along absolutely at the foot of the ladder.

The May meeting of the Norfolk Christian Endeavor union will be held at the Congregational church in Millis on Tuesday, May 15, and the following will be the order of exercises: Praise and devotional exercises commencing at 7.30; address of welcome; reports and business; reports of societies; address; consecration.

All the dogs have not been licensed yet, although some of them, according to the estimates of the owners, are very valuable, even up to $500. Oftentimes, however, the appraisal would vary very materially from the value on the same animals if estimated by outside parties. Some citizens claim that, like Indians, the only good dog is a dead dog.

About twenty five of the friends of J. J. Stewart called on him Saturday evening to enjoy a "surprise party" in honor of his 41st birthday. They were made to feel perfectly at home, and a most enjoyable evening was spent, with refreshments, games, music, etc. Before leaving, they presented him with a fine shaving set as a memento of the occasion.

Two mortgagee sales took place Saturday. Several lots of land belonging to the Kimball farm on Forest street were put up at auction to satisfy a claim of the Benjamin Franklin savings bank. There were no bidders, so the property goes to the bank. The McLellan place on Pleasant street, near the Norfolk line, was sold to I. E. Darling for $1,180, which covers the claim against the property.

The following citizens of Norfolk county have been drawn from this section to serve as jurors at the Norfolk Superior court, civil term, which came in at Dedham Monday morning: Hubbard M. Bullock, Franklin, real estate agent; Charles H. Cole, Medway, farmer; William L. Cook, Bellingham, peddler; Hiram A. Cowell, Wrentham, retired manufacturer; Austin A. Jones, Norfolk, farmer.

Friday evening the selectmen granted innholders' licenses to the Franklin House and to Hotel Briggs, and victuallers' licenses to Willis A. Fairfield and E. P. Blackmar. Blackmar was also given a billiard hall license. Bills were approved. When the attempt was made to turn on the electric lights it was found that the fuse was gone and the session opened and continued with the light of candles until the electric man could appear and fix things.

On Friday the members of the Mother's section enjoyed a change in their program by listening to a description of the many points of interest in a trip abroad, vividly portrayed by Mrs. Farnum, and made still more interesting by her many fine photographs which were displayed. The next meeting will be held at the residence of Mrs. Farrington Friday, May 11. Papers by Mrs. Mary Johnson, Mrs. Nye and Mrs. Estelle Stewart.

The following pupils of Primary school No. 2 were neither absent or tardy during the month of April: Gardner Barnstead, Walter Bristow, Carleton Corbin, Erwin Cummings, Irwin Daniels, Edwin Ferrer, Harry Gray, Herbert Gray, Erving Hurd, Franklyn Hurd, Carl Johnson, George Joyce, Emma King, Chester Ledbury, Esmah Metcalf, Hortense Razee, Mildred Rockwood, Grace Russell, Raymond Smith, Willard Smith, Russell Stewart, Robert Winters.

Our housekeepers will be glad to know that there never was such an abundance of fruit and produce in the Southern states as this year. There is a great plenty of peaches in Georgia, thousands of bushels in excess of any quantity grown for years. The strawberry outlook is just as good. When it comes time for Virginia and Maryland berries to be shipped north, they will arrive in such amount that strawberry shortcake will be easy eating for everybody.

Manager Partridge had a chance to book "Sapho" here, but he "turned it down." In Milford it was booked, but some doubts were expressed as to whether or not it would be allowed to be produced. Following the course taken in several other large towns and cities, a petition of remonstrance has been circulated which has been signed by every clergyman in town and by many prominent citizens. The selectmen under the circumstances refused permission for the play to be given there.

It was intended to have men go to work last week on the Milford, Attleboro & Woonsocket Street Railway company's line to Milford via Caryville, but owing to the delay in the arrival of a special piece of construction, a frog or a switch point, the work has not yet been started. The place of the delay is at Camp's corner, Caryville, at the junction of the Medway division of the Milford, Holliston & Framingham road, with extension of the Milford, Attleboro & Woonsocket Street railway. As soon as the material arrives the work will be commenced.

In reference to the curfew law the Framingham Gazette thus sizes up the situation: "One beauty about this is that it costs nothing and it may do a lot of good. There is no mistaking the fact that young ones of childish age are about nights later and oftener than is conducive to good manners and good morals. Parents ought to make the family law that calls children home before 9 o'clock, but if there are parents in Framingham who cannot or will not have their children in the house at a reasonable hour let us have a statute that will aid that end."

Base ball enthusiasts will be interested to know that the Milford, Attleboro & Woonsocket Street Railway officials have shown themselves alive to company interests by promptly appointing a committee to consult with the base ball association about local ball grounds in Milford as soon as the matter was officially brought to their attention. At a meeting of directors last week Contractor Tylee was instructed to see what could be done about securing available grounds between Milford and South Milford, and several possible locations will doubtless be inspected there within a few days.

Rev. Michael J. Sullivan, curate of St. Mary's parish, received notice on Thursday from Archbishop Williams of his transfer to St. Michael's parish, Brockton. He left Saturday noon for his new field of labor. Word of Father Sullivan's intended departure was learned with sincere regret by the parishioners of St. Mary's, and many called to bid him farewell. Father Sullivan came to St. Mary's parish from Boston last June, and he was the first curate stationed here, this being his first appointment since his ordination a little over a year ago. During his labors here the curate has earned the respect and love of all the members of St. Mary's, and regret is expressed on all sides at his departure.

N. E. Newell and Richard N. White have received appointments as census enumerators for Franklin, which comprises two districts. They are the same division as made in the census of 1895 and previously. The state census of 1890 was taken by Sabin Hubbard, now deceased, and Mr. Newell. At that time Mr. Newell's district, the same as his new appointment covers, had 850 more population than Mr. Hubbard's. The difference will probably be less now than at that time, although the latter district has not probably gained many hundreds. Most of the foreign and transient population are in Mr. Newell's district. Work begins June 1, and is expected to occupy about a month. Mr. White is a student in the Tufts college scientific department.

Sunday morning Rev. Dr. Hodge based his remarks at the Universalist church on Kipling's story of "The Ship That Found Herself," taking as a basis the words in the parable of the prodigal son, "When he came to himself." The speaker claimed that this parable shows the essential part of the declination and future of mankind; that all would finally come to themselves in a triumph of good over evil. When men learn the intention of God and understand themselves the elements of character adjust themselves to each other, just as the parts of the ship modify each other, contravening the intensity of action and making the whole a complete success.

Miss Ethel Hornick, formerly instructor in elocution at Dean, is making commendable headway in the dramatic profession. The Boston Times recently had the following pleasant note in regard to her: "It was unnecessary for the press agent to tell Boston people that Ethel Hornick, who took the part of an old maid in "Trelawney of the Wells," is in real life young and extremely good looking." Miss Hornick is a Boston girl, and her work as a student at the Emerson college, and later as a member of our fashionable amateur club, the Criterions, made her pretty well known and a great favorite in the best set here, before she took up a professional career."

Rev. Mr. Sneath observed the first anniversary of his pastorate on last Sabbath in the Congregational church. He made reference to the prosperity which had attended the church and remarked that to him the most satisfactory fact of the year was the excellent attendance at public worship. The conditions of the church, spiritually and financially, have been very good. During the year the parish expended $3,500, the Ladies' Benevolent society $187, the Sabbath school $126, the Mary Warfield Missionary society $113, and the Y. P. S. C. E. $166, making a total of $4092. This of course includes all monies for expenses and benevolences. The new year opens in a very auspicious manner. The pews have rented in a very satisfactory manner and the members of the church and congregation are enthusiastic to support all the varied interests of the church.

"O'Hooligan's Wedding," which will be at Morse Opera house next Saturday evening, will cause everybody present to laugh and laugh heartily. Some of the attractions are Conroy and Mack, the Irish aristocrats; the little magnets, Jackson and Douglas, who are big favorites; the king and queen of comedy, Barr and Benton; those famous German dispensers of German wit, Whitley and Bell; Bobby Matthews, the eccentric comedian; the cake walk of all Nations the funniest novelty on record; the celebrated comedian, George Dupree, who plays the jolly Dutchman, Klotz; that dainty soubrette, Miss Libbie Depree, as Mrs. Klotz; the Misses Gildea and Daytell, up to date song and dance artists, and a number of pretty girls in the chorus. Uneeda laugh. Ugeta scream when you see O'Hooligan's Wedding.

The New Postmaster.

Congressman Sprague has written to friends here that he sent the name of ex Postmaster Henry A. Talbot for confirmation last week, and the chances are that action will be taken upon the nomination very shortly. In a case like this, where there is no opposition, the endorsement of the congressman is equivalent to an appointment, as such cases are left by the President largely in the hands of the representative from the district. As Postmaster Conroy's term expired the first of May, it is expected there will be little delay in inducting his successor into office. There is one thing to be said: Mr. Talbot having been the former incumbent, the affairs of the office will go right on without the slightest friction or confusion which always results from a change in a public office of this nature. Mr. Talbot will pick things up just where he left them, and patrons of the office will scarcely know that a change has been made. It will be remembered that when Mr. Conroy was appointed to succeed him the change was purely a political one, Mr. Talbot's public service having been satisfactory in every respect.

Mr. Conroy will doubtless retire with the same feeling, a feeling to which he is honestly entitled. He has proven a most satisfactory and obliging official, and it is safe to say that he cannot long want for a good position. "Le roi est mort; vive le roi."

Do You Want Bargains?

You always get them when you buy "Orient" cycles, but just now we can make you a special offer. We have several sample wheels, which have only been run a few miles; they are just as good as the day they left the factory, but to close them out we will give a special price on them for the next ten days. If you are to buy this season now is the time. Call and examine.

Memorial Day.

Memorial day is rapidly approaching, and sharper and sharper grows the contest between those who feel that the day should be devoted largely to the purposes for which it was intended, and those who prefer to have the day given up to rest, recreation and sports. Of late it has largely degenerated into a day of sports, and possibly because it is the first holiday in the year in which out of door weather can be enjoyed.

Indeed, it is asserted by those who prefer the day for sports, that since these memorial exercises are so largely of a semi religious nature, the preceding Sabbath should be devoted to the annual exercises, which are now continued year by year through the loving remembrance of former comrades in arms. Be that as it may, it is a fact that the sporting side of the day is slowly obtaining the patronage and attention of the public, however much the opposite should be the case.

We have a duty to the dead and we cannot pay it by proxy. The annual exercises which the veterans conduct in no way pay our debt. The nation owes its existence to those men, and too little these days is it mindful of that debt. Whatever lack of observance there may be upon the part of any is not due to thoughtlessness. On the other hand, the profanation, if such it be, is deliberate, and therefore all the more blameworthy.

The remedy, however, is difficult to see. To so arouse our people to a realization of what we owe to those who faced the foe, endured the hardships, taking their lives in their hands and accepting their fate without a murmur because of their love of country, ought not to be difficult, but it is. As the years go by the war with its unpleasant memories is forgotten in the blessings which we accept as ours by right, forgetful of the cost to others; the sacrifices which others made and the hardships which others endured.

Youth sets the pace for the generation of today, and youth has little recollection and less appreciation of the awful days of '61 and '65. If, then, youth will not respect the day the burden must continue to fall, as it has in the past, upon the shoulders of those whose locks are whitening, whose steps are faltering and whose ranks are thinning with each recurrence of the day, till finally the memory of the past and the sight of the last survivor of that terrible conflict shall awaken the nation to its duty and, loving hearts shall consecrate themselves to a lasting perpetuation of the day.

The Last of Earth.

Adelbert D. Thayer and William H. Sweatt, together with E. Charles Francis, Charles E. Thomas and Samuel P. Cook of Woonsocket, and Walter S. Ballou of Providence, were the bearers at the funeral of Chester B. Smith in Woonsocket on Sunday. A special electric car took many from here to the funeral, which was very largely attended by relatives and friends from Woonsocket, Providence, Franklin and other places. The services were conducted by Rev. Charles J. White, D. D., of the Universalist church, assisted by Rev. William Sheafe Chase, rector of St. James' church. The ushers were Latimer Willis Ballou, Louis B. Sweatt and Charles Nourse Cook, the latter of Providence.

The music was of a very beautiful nature, Harry Ballou having it in charge, and the singing was by the St. Andrew's chapel vested boy choir of fourteen voices, in which Mr. Smith had always felt a deep interest and to the support of which he had generously contributed. The floral tributes were very numerous and exceedingly beautiful. The burial was at Oak Hill cemetery, where there was a short prayer service.

Mr. Smith was well known here, and there is general regret at his death, as he possessed the characteristics that go to create and to retain friendship. Deceased was a man of a singularly sweet and attractive disposition, a favorite with all who knew him. His death, while in the prime of his manhood, brings a feeling of sadness, and the family have the sincere sympathy of hundreds of friends in their bereavement.

More Pictures.

Again the William M. Thayer school has been most fortunate through the kindness of Miss Lydia Ray, who has just presented four beautiful pictures to Miss Reilly's and Mr. Frazer's rooms. Respectively in the two rooms you will find "Ann Hathaway's Cottage" and "Stratford-on-Avon," and "The Shepherdess" and "The Gleaners," by Millet.

The pictures are a great addition to the adornment of the rooms and Miss Ray certainly has the sincere thanks and gratitude of all connected in any way with Franklin's public schools. F.

"The Fine Arts."

Rev. F. B. Sleeper gave the first in his series of sermons on "The Fine Arts" in the Baptist church Sunday evening. His theme was "The Fine Art of Christian Love." He spoke of entering into the great art galleries both in this country and abroad, and of the thrilling interest that he realized for long hours in such places. But there is a fine art as superior to these as the stars are higher than the earth. It is the heavenly science of pure love to God and to men. An ambitious pupil is proud of being trained by a superior teacher and to interweave his instruction into the very fibres of his highest being. Our teacher is Jesus Christ, the supreme Master of the heavenly and eternal arts. And the exaltation and refinement of our life depends on our making His thought the passion and law of the soul.

He teaches and trains according to a new philosophy—love toward men and toward our enemies. Our prejudices and hatreds are childish and worse than foolish in His sight. They are a curse unto humanity and kill out the divine. The entire being is to be thoroughly impassioned with profound, unselfish love for friend and foe. Then we begin to reach the altitude of God and move in perfect harmony with the deep and everlasting affection of Jehovah who bestows His blessing "both on the just and on the unjust." The theme next Sunday evening will be "The Fine Art of Christian Development."

What the Church Carpet Cost.

The Chicago Advance gives the following estimate of the direct and collateral cost of a church carpet. The price was $800, but as the women of the church raised the money by giving entertainments the pastor's estimate was that when all the items of cost were figured in the carpet had cost fully $4000.

He reached this astonishing total by estimating the work, worry, nervous strain bodily weariness and headaches of 100 women, the heroic efforts of men, women and children to eat the things which were to be eaten and hear, see or buy things which had been provided to extract money from them; the colds, fevers and other ailments contracted while attending the entertainments and the consequent doctor's bills; the money spent in other churches, for if they come to your entertainment you must go to theirs, and, worst and most costly of all, the demoralization of the church and the curtailment of the legitimate giving which follow in the train of such methods of raising money. But they got the carpet.

The following rules are said to be reliable for carrying a person to a green old age: "Keep cool, don't get excited, don't overload the stomach, don't eat late suppers, don't smoke all the time after you get out of bed in the morning until you retire at night, and take a snooze after dinner."

Hot on the Trail of Coffee!

What will you take to try a single pound of Chase & Sanborn's High-Grade Coffee?

All beginnings are hard, as the theif said when he began by stealing an anvil. But listen to the facts!

The beginning of everything is a curious machine used only by them. It separates out the full-grown berries. Other firms would call this extravagant, but you won't when you come to drink the coffee.

These berries are then only roasted to order. The same day they are hermetically sealed in canisters so that not a breath of aroma is lost. (By the great Abu Bakr of blessed memory, what a flavor this gives to your coffee pot in the kitchen!)

Your grocer breaks the hermetic seals and puts the coffee into Chase & Sanborn's imported parchment-lined bags, each bearing the Seal trade-mark with their signed warranty of Highest Quality. This he gives to you.

And you never buy any other coffee afterward!

EXPERIMENTAL FARMS.

By the Aid of Practical Education Agriculture Is Encouraged in New South Wales.

The importance attached by the various Australian governments to the encouragement of agriculture, especially by the diffusion of practical knowledge is shown in the fact that in most of the colonies a department of agriculture has been established, the official head of which is a member of the colonial ministry. In New South Wales the necessity for providing the means of technical agricultural education, and establishing a college and model farms in various parts of the colony, became fully recognized, and a site suitable for a central establishment was selected at Ham Common, near the town of Richmond, in the Hawkesbury district about 39 miles from Sydney, where an area of about 4,000 acres was resumed for the purpose. The buildings and furnishings of the college and farm now in their seventh year of existence were completed in January, 1896, and officially opened on the 14th of April of the same year. Accommodation is provided for 96 resident students, and during 1898 there was a full roll. Theoretical as well as practical instruction is imparted by experts in every branch of agriculture, and experimental work is carried on with cereal and other crops fertilizers are tested, analyses of soils are made and the arts of dishorning and spaying cattle, with other veterinary surgeon practices, are taught. The live stock attached to the farm and college comprises 46 horses, 57 bullocks 151 head of dairy cattle, 140 pigs and 1[illegible] sheep. There is an orchard, 3[illegible] acres in extent, and a vineyard, ten acres in extent, and the cultivation of plants for the expression of scent has also been begun.

Beside the practice of general dairy farming work, instruction is imparted in cheese making, also in the management and breeding of poultry, in the rearing of bees and the preparation of honey for the market, in the killing and dressing of sheep, in the carpenter's and the blacksmith's arts, in the construction of fences, and in various mechanical trades. There are also experimental farms at Bomen, 304 miles from Sydney, in the Murrumbidgee district; and at Wollongbar, 366 miles from Sydney, in the Richmond river district. The former is near the town of Wagga Wagga, and embraces an area of 2,469 acres, of which 1,200 acres are in cultivation, 1,[illegible] acres being devoted to growing cereals, of which 5[illegible] acres are for seed wheat, the remainder being utilized for oaten hay and malting barley; 85 acres to fruit trees and grape vines; and 80 acres to forage plants such as maize, sorghum, millet, barley rye oats, cow pea, roots, grasses, etc.; while eight acres are under olive trees the remaining portion being taken up by irrigation plots, nursery, and experimental plots. Quarters have been provided for 25 students, and there are also cottages for the manager and workmen; likewise barns, a hayshed and stables. There is no natural water supply, but dams of 6,000, 10,[illegible] and 40,[illegible] yards' capacity have been excavated, and are used for supplying water to the irrigation plots. Some thousands of farmers have visited the farm since its establishment. — Brooklyn Eagle.

HOME LIFE IN FRANCE.

Parents Are Greatly Honored by Their Children and Family Feeling Is Deep.

To understand the true nature of French home life one must see its place in the national life and its relations to society. There is a fact of transcendent importance that must be always borne in mind in trying to grasp the characteristics of the French people. It is that there is a difference between the aims, aspirations and ideals that run through the activities and institutions of France and those of the United States.

American society and American institutions are those of a pushing, enterprising and conquering people; the French are those of a nation which has found its place in the world, but kept within certain geographical limitations, has accumulated wealth—or what for it takes the place of wealth—and blessings of civilization, in themselves sufficient for happiness. The Americans are men who most value energy, power, endurance and determination of purpose; the French, ease, determined duties, an ornamental culture social order and a considerable social hierarchy. The land of Washington develops the isloated man, France the social body. The former represents a nation of individuals living in families, and the other a nation of families with individuals in them. The one is displaying unparalleled power in making for herself a civilization, and the other to increase and distribute to the whole the fruits of civilization that it has. The one is free from a burdensome past, and the other has its roots in the depths of centuries. The one is thoroughly competitive in its activities, the other accumulative and distributive.

The Americans wish men who can fight their own individual battles; the French, men linked by indissoluble ties to those who preceeded them and to those who follow, continuing family traditions. Hence domestic life in France must of necessity be very different from that of the United States. In the narrow compass of this article, I will bring out only the best and the most typical traits of normal French life.

This much may be fearlessly asserted—that the position of the father in France is still paramount.

The authority of the father is recognized even after the marriage of the son or daughter, until very late in life, but with it go dowries and financial help, which not infrequently entail great sacrifices on the part of the parents. French fathers, as a whole, are diligent in looking after the education of their children. Few there are who will not visit the teachers of their loved ones and be careful as to the associates in schools. On birthdays, Easter, New Year's day, or when he travels, the French father is the perfection of thoughtfulness—no one is forgotten. When his children are baptized or take their first communion, whatever his belief, he is present. When possible he will lunch with his family at noon, and at night he reigns supreme at a table around which everybody talks at once. Attentions to his family do not decrease much with time. The ideal of a business man is to retire from active life at 5[illegible], and thenceforth much of his time is devoted to his children, married or single.

A certain part of the French father's time is given to pleasure. Even among the workingmen, whose life is so hard during the week, Sunday afternoon is the time when the whole family goes to walk in the country, or in the woods, and in order that the poor mother may have a vacation the evening meal is often taken at a restaurant.

The place of the mother is also one of great consideration, though one of genuine subordination to her husband. If he is in business, she is thoroughly acquainted with his affairs, and in a large number of cases she is associated with him in the business management. This was especially true of the wife of the founder of that well-known commercial institution of Paris, the Bon Marche. At the death of her husband the enterprise is often carried on by the widow. The wife is thus associated, as all the members of the family are, not in the struggle for the acquisition of wealth, but for existence.

All the children until their marriage bring all their earnings to the common family purse, and if one member of the family is married a united effort will be made to provide the best possible dowry.—Prof. Jean C. Bracq, in the Congregationalist.

Honor in "Pairing."

A curious incident, involving the question of honor in "pairing," is reported from North Adams, Mass. A citizen who desired to be out of town on election day arranged a pair with another citizen of opposite political faith, the latter pledging himself not to vote. Citizen No. 1 went on his journey, but citizen No. 2 violated his pair and voted for his candidate. For this he was summarily discharged from his position in a prominent manufacturing establishment, the proprietors saying that they had no desire to dictate to their employes how they should vote, but that they could not regard as worthy of trust or confidence any person who would dishonorably violate his solemn pledge. This so impressed the discharged employe that he made a public apology for his offense, saying that he had not at first realize its seriousness.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Domesticated Ostriches in Africa.

Ostriches have only recently been domesticated in South Africa. Only 80 were in captivity in 1865; ten years later there were 21,751 being cared for in Cape Colony, and in 1897 237,960. The true wild bird still exists north of the Vaal and Orange river, but is eagerly hunted for its feathers, which demand a higher price than those of the domesticated feathers.—N. Y. Sun.

A Sprained Ankle Quickly Cured.

"At one time I suffered from a severe sprain of the ankle," says Geo. E. Cary, editor of the Guide, Washington, Va. "After using several well recommended medicines without success, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm and am pleased to say that relief came as soon as I began its use and a complete cure speedily followed. This remedy has also been used in my family for frost bitten feet with the best results. I cheerfully recommend its use to all who may need a first-class liniment." Sold by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

Scrofula, salt rheum, erysipelas and other distressing eruptive diseases yield quickly and permanently to the cleansing, purifying power of Burdock Blood Bitters.

The little folks love Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Pleasant to take; perfectly harmless; positive cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma.

SOME HISTORIC BOOKS.

The Largest, the Smallest and the Most Valuable Volumes In the World.

Queen Victoria possesses the largest bound book ever made. It weighs 64 pounds and is 18 inches thick.

The most valuable book in the world is the Hebraic Bible. At the Vatican, in 1512, the Jews tried to buy it of Pope Julius II. for its weight in gold. It is so large and heavy that two men can hardly lift it, and it would have brought $100,000 if the pope had consented to part with it.

The smallest book in the world is not much larger than a man's thumb nail. It was made in Italy. It is four-tenths of an inch long and about a quarter of an inch wide. It contains 208 pages, each having nine lines, and from 95 to 100 letters. The text of a letter—before unpublished — written by the famous inventor of the pendulum clock to Mme. Christine, of Lorraine, in 1615. The next smallest book is an edition of Dante's "Divine Comedy," and it is a little less than an inch wide, with type so small that it takes a microscope to read the letters.

When it is finished the official history of the war of the rebellion will be the costliest book in the world. It is being issued by the government of the United States, and at a cost up to date of about $2,000,000. It will consist of 112 volumes, including an index, and an atlas, which contains 178 plates and maps illustrating the important battles of the war, campaign, routes of march, plans of forts, and photographs of interesting scenes, places and persons.

The most voluminous encyclopedia work in the world is in the Berlin Anthropological museum. It is in 1,000 volumes and is in Chinese. It embraces literature, philosophy, astronomy, natural science and industries. Each volume has from 100 to 150 pages. Originally only 100 copies were printed, and those were not put on sale. But recently a new edition was put forth which sells at $300 for the set. It is splendidly illustrated with maps and pictures.

The largest private library in this country was owned by the historian H. H. Bancroft. It consists of 50,000 volumes, valued at $200,000. A fine collection of manuscripts in dialect, and manuscripts relating to the early settlement of the Pacific coast, of the Spanish colonies and of the early ecclesiastical missions is included in the Bancroft library.

The highest price ever paid for a single volume was $50,000. It was for a vellum missal, which was presented to King Henry VIII. by Pope Leo X. The missal was accompanied by a document making King Henry the defender of the faith. It is now in the possession of the German government. Charles II. gave it to an ancestor of the duke of Hamilton, and it was sold a few years ago at the sale of the duke of Hamilton's library.

It was supposed that only two copies of Washington's first essay in authorship existed, but in 1897 a third copy came to light and was purchased by a gentleman who makes a hobby of collecting Washingtonia; he quite willing paid $1,000. "The Journal of Maj. George Washington" appears upon the title page, and it was printed in 1754.

In Russia miniature Bibles are often worn as watch charms. One of these Bibles is owned by a Bostonian, who received it from a friend living in Russia. It is about one inch long, three-fourths of an inch wide and three-eighths of an inch thick, and contains the first five books of the Old Testament. The text of the Book is in Hebrew and the titles in Latin. It can only be read with the help of a powerful magnifying glass.

Not only in numbers, but also in point of territory, the circulation of the Bible exceeds all other books. The American Bible society has printed it in 300 tongues. Thousands of copies even now are traveling through the frozen polar regions to people who have not only never heard of the book, but to whom books are unknown.—N. Y. Sun.

Cordovan Leather Boots.

At the court of Elizabeth the wide-topped Spanish boot—handsome, and, to our eyes, theatrical—became popular among the rival courtiers, each endeavoring to outvie the other in the queen's eyes. The most handsome and admired of all were made of white Cordova leather edged with costly lace and having gold spurs. Sometimes buff and red and much more rarely the now prevalent black leather was the material. Shoes for men seem to have gone out of fashion during the Stuart era, so far as the upper classes went. Your plain citizen always adhered to a more or less substantial shoe when at home, and seldom drew on boots save when on a journey—a terrible expedition, however short the distance, up to the middle of the last century. Thus, in Charles II.'s day Cowley, writing to Dr. Thomas Sprat from so near a place to London as Chertsey, says that he might very conveniently come thither "the way of Hampton town—lying there one night."—Gentleman's Magazine.

Where Hope Lingered.

Negroes are unconsciously humorous. The other day two roustabouts were overheard talking. They met on the levee, after one had been absent from the city for several weeks.

"Hello, Bill; how is yer?" said the first.

"Well," was the reply, "de doctors is give me up, but de police ain't."—Minneapolis Scimitar.

Way of a Woman.

Salesman—This shoe is too small. Will you try a larger size?

Sure of Them.

"Jimmy, if you are going to wear a collar to school, you ought to wear cuffs, too."

"Oh, no, ma; the teacher furnishes them."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Great Disappointment.

Excitement is often the cause of strange telegrams, as well as other queer manifestations.

A man who had been one of the passengers on a shipwrecked vessel was rescued almost by a miracle. On arriving at a place from which he could send a telegraphic message, he forwarded the following dispatch to his brother:

"I am saved. Try to break it gently to my wife."—Tit-Bits.

Stored Energy.

"You didn't act with your usual fire and enthusiasm," said the acquaintance.

"No," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes, "an actor sometimes finds it necessary to husband his powers for a supreme effort. I was saving myself for the argument with the manager when the box office receipts are counted."—Washington Star.

Our Debt.

O woman, what we owe to thee!—
Yet in thy debt we joy to be.
With grateful hearts must we recall
The wonder of thy giving—

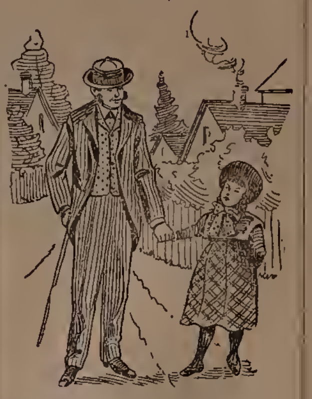
A YOUTHFUL DIPLOMATIST.



"Grandpa, it is very kind of you to take me out for a walk, and, as I've got a penny, I should like to give you a present. You can either have some flowers or some sweets. But I should recommend you to have the sweets."—Punch.

Before and After.

Sidelights on History.

"Come on," said Noah, looking at his watch. "It's time we were getting into the ark."

"You'll have to wait a minute," replied Mrs. Noah from the top of the stairway. "I'm not going out without my rainy day skirt on."—Chicago Tribune.

JOHN HELPED HIM OUT.

But He Had to Get Beyond Earshot So John Could Turn Himself Loose.

Some 50 years ago there lived in northern Virginia a spirited old gentleman by the name of Col. Carter, whose habitual profanity made him notorious throughout the neighborhood. Pleadings and expostulations were equally vain to break him, and his friends at last hopelessly gave him up as one to whom swearing had become a second nature. In the course of time, however, the Methodists held a revival in the neighborhood, and much to the surprise of everyone, Col. Carter became converted of his sin, and made a professior of religion.

The next morning, in the woodshed, he interviewed his negro teamster to the effect that there was to be no more swearing, not even at the horses. The teamster, who was about as much addicted to the habit as his master, was at first incredulous and thought the matter a huge joke, but finding the colonel to be in earnest, he promised to do his best in future to manage the team without using profane language.

"But 'tain't no use no how, massa,' he said, in parting, "you dun train dem hoses up to it yo'sef, an' dey ain't gwine go wit out it!"

A week later the colonel and his teamster started out for Alexandria with an extra heavy load of wheat. The teamster guided the horses over the rough and hilly road while the colonel rode alongside on horseback. All went along smoothly at first, and the colonel had begun to eloquently expound the beauty of chaste language when they struck a steep hill and the horses stalled.

"Now don't get angry, John," said the colonel; "just speak to them gently and they'll start again."

But the team refused to budge. Coaxing, patting, scolding, lashing were equally without avail. The colonel grew perceptibly red and nervous, and the teamster had great drops of sweat on his brow.

"'Tain't no use tryin' any mo'," yelled the angry negro. "I dun tole you dis de way it gwine be!"

"Well, John," replied the colonel, in desperation, "I'll just ride on ahead a little bit, and you see if you can't get these horses started and overtake me."

And John did.—Detroit Free Press.

Her Sure Thing.

"Ah, you will mourn when I am gone,
I know you will!" she cried.

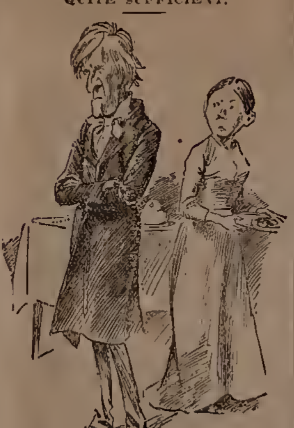
QUITE SUFFICIENT.



"Lor, Mr. Squebling, you ain't tasted your fish! Is anything the matter?"

"Yes, I smelt it."—Ally Sloper.

THINK IT OVER. There's a reason for those pains in your back and sides, for those dull, dragging aches, that listless, "keep-away-from-me" feeling. The kidneys are to blame. They get sick, can't do their work and the whole system feels the effect, just as a whole town feels the effect of a blockaded sewerage system.

Doan's Kidney Pills

Set matters right quickly and easily. They never fail, even in the most advanced stages of kidney disease.

Mrs. C. V. Pitts, of 21 Broad street, New London, Conn., whose husband conducts a grocery store says:

"Previous to using Doan's Kidney Pills in the winter of 1896 I was greatly inconvenienced by pain and lameness across the small of my back. The treatment cured that particular attack, and I made the facts known to the people of New London through our daily papers. It is over three years since my original statement was given to the public, and all I can add to it is that during the time specified I have found that a dose or two of Doan's Kidney Pills prevent recurrences."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers; price 50 cents a box. Mailed on receipt of price by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no substitute.

A Dancing Procession.

A peculiar, but famous, dancing procession annually takes place at Echternach. In Belgium, France and Germany excursions are organized to the little Luxemburg town, whose church contains the remains of St. Willibrord. The pilgrims to Echternach execute in a certain rhythm what is called the dance of the "leaping saints." It takes the form of advancing three steps, making a step backward, advancing three more steps, and so on. It is in this quaint way that the procession, in which 10,000 persons take part each year, starts from the bridge on the Lure, the place of assembly, to the church.—The Ball Room.

What "the Queen's Shilling" Is.

According to the British system of enlistment, a "queen's shilling" is paid over to every man who enters the service. The "queen's shilling," by the way, is not a coin of special design. It is exactly like every other coin of the same denomination and is termed "the queen's" from the fact that its acceptance from a recruiting sergeant makes the receiver a "queen's man," body and soul.—Chicago Chronicle.

Proves the Best of All.

Fairhaven, Mass., April 26, 1900.—Mrs. Arthur G. Caswell of this place says they have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla in her family every spring for a long time and it has proved the best of all tonics. This medicine is unequalled for purifying and enriching the blood and this is what is needed for the cure of that tired feeling and all humors

"Fortune favors the brave." It is also favorable to those who purify their blood at this season by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

WRENTHAM.

The series of lectures given by Rev. John B. Koehne in the Congregational church the past week were greatly enjoyed by good audiences. A number came over from Franklin and Walpole to listen to the lectures.——William B. Wicks, a former citizen of this town, but now of Sharon, died the latter part of the week.——On Wednesday a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Dodd, and on Thursday a son to Mr. and Mrs. Chas E. Wilkinson.——A comedy drama, entitled "Diamonds and Hearts," will be given in the town hall Wednesday evening under the auspices of Wampum lodge, 190, I. O. O. F., by talent from Norfolk, to be followed by a social dance. This performance has been given twice in Norfolk to crowded houses.——The condition of Alonzo Cook is greatly improved.——Mrs. Charles J. Randall is on the sick list.——Charles Messenger of Brooklyn, N. Y., has been visiting his father, Henry M. Messenger.——E. D McClennen attempted to shoot himself in the head Sunday morning at 5 o'clock, but was not successful. Failure in business is said to be the cause of his strange action.——Daniel Brown, as tree warden, was called out last week to save a fine elm tree on the land of W. H. Ide, which workmen on the electric road were in the act of demolishing.

HOW TO PRESERVE WIVES.

If These Directions Are Faithfully Followed the Result Will Be Satisfactory.

This special sort of preserve might prove to be an invaluable household article, did the many conscientious and well-meaning men who believe in the propriety of preserving their wives understand the culinary art required for their best preservation. The following method, if carefully adhered to, never fails to give satisfactory results:

In the first place, wives are a fruit which should be selected for quality, more with regard to their flavor than appearance, which will result in the agreeable surprise of tasting better than they look. They should never be placed in an earthen agate-ware pot of any old dimension or shape, but into a generous loving cup, having a true heart shape. Cover with water judiciously flavored with pure grape sugar to keep them sweet and palatable.

That they may be kept thoroughly warmed, place the receptacle on the back of the stove in which must be used for heating purposes the free burning coal, never gas. Do not make the mistake of submitting the fruit to a varied temperature, as it is apt to impair the flavor and extract an uncertain bitterness. It may be necessary to stir it occasionally, but this should be done with a heart-shaped spoon.

Throw into the loving cup now and again a handful of herbs, sweet violets and fragrant mignonette. You will be surprised at their preserving quality, and the deliciousness of the aroma which will permeate the atmosphere will prove most appetizing. A few gold coins dropped gently at the right time into the water and allowed to simmer during the process of preservation will tinge the mixture to the king's taste.—N. Y. Sun.

Washing and Drying the Hair.

Once a month at the very least, the head should be washed. Borax makes the best cleanser. Plenty of warm water is needed after the process of cleansing has been gone through. The warm water should be poured over the head by a second person, the hair being held over a bathtub while this is being done. Yolk of egg makes an excellent wash for the hair, but even greater care is needed after its application than in the case with borax. Otherwise the hair will be sticky when dry. No time should be lost in drying the hair after it has been washed. The best way to dry it quickly and thoroughly is, after a good rub with dry towels, to sit on a rug in front of a good fire, and, still rubbing, allow the heat to fall on the back, the sides and the top of the head alternately. A douche of cold water should always be poured over the head after the warm water, and in cold weather some alcohol should be rubbed well into the scalp. The hair should never be done up until it is perfectly dry, and it should be well shaken before beginning to brush and comb it after it has been washed.—Ladies' Home Journal.

"You have moved three times this winter."

"Yes," answered young Mrs. Torkins, with a sigh. "It was a dreadful lot of work, but we had to do it. We have had so much trouble with servants. When I discharged them they got angry and when Charley discharged them they just laughed. So the only thing to do was to wait till their afternoons out and move to another neighborhood."—Washington Star.

ESSENTIALS OF THE TOILET.

Aigrettes and Other Decorations of the Hair—Latest Things in Toques.

One very distinctive feature of evening dress is the decoration of the hair, and a fashionably dressed head is absolutely essential to the success of any evening toilet, no matter how simple the gown may be. The old days, when the locks were twisted into a simple knot, have passed away, and we have reached a happy medium between the high, outlandish headdress and the quaint simplicity so unbecoming to most women. An evening coiffure is not complete without some decoration besides the curling and puffing of the hair. Aigrettes, both jeweled and plain, are a prominent part of hair ornamentation, and then there are all sorts of fanciful wings and butterflies sparkling with spangles. One very uncanny design is a bat with wings of jet and steel and a body of steel sequins. Pretty dragon flies made of gauze and hand painted are charming in the hair, and then there are little silver gauze horns spotted with rhinestones. Flowers and upstanding bows of velvet ribbon wired in aigrette form are very much worn, and wired lace bows, both black and white, are very pretty. There are some variations in the mode of doing up the hair, but the full, round pompadour still prevails. Some of the latest modes show a suggestion of a parting; yet they are pompadour in effect, and softened a little by some little curls on either side of the forehead. A parting at one side and the hair drawn down on the forehead is another pretty mode, very becoming in some faces. Curls are worn in the back, and the little jeweled pin so commonly used to confine the short locks is very much in evidence. The golden rule for a becoming style of dressing the hair is to choose the one that is individually becoming, and not change with every passing fancy.

Toques with sable crowns and brims of mirror velvet, trimmed with muslin flowers, are a feature of millinery. Roses are the special kind, and the smaller sizes are much used, a wreath of white roses being the only trimming on a sable hat.

Long coats of velvet, a half-fitting loose sacque, in shapes without any seam in the middle of the back, are one of the specialties in winter garments. Wide bands of stitched panne are the trimming, and distinguishing feature in this style of garment, whether of cloth or velvet, are triple revers, one of cloth like the coat, one of white satin, embroidered with lace on the edge, and one of colored cloth covered with stitching.

The combination of mink and ermine appears among the novelties in fur neckwear.—N. Y. Sun.

He Did.

"Whenever she asks me to do anything," soliloquized Mr. Meeker, pensively, "I always go and do it, like a fool."

"Yes," said Mrs. Meeker, who happened along in time to overhear him. "Whenever I ask you to do anything you always go and do it like a fool."—Chicago Tribune.

Beware of a Cough.

A cough is not a disease but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing the diseases which cause coughing. If it is not beneficial it will not cost you a cent. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

"Itching hemorrhoids were the plague of my life. Was almost wild. Doan's Ointment cured me quickly and permanently, after doctors had failed." C. F. Cornwell, Valley street, Saugerties, N.Y.

PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin and all other persons interested in the estate of Jane D. Fisher, late of Franklin, in said county, deceased:

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said court for probate by Metcalf E. Pond of Franklin, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, without giving a surety on his official bond,

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham, in said county of Norfolk, on the sixteenth day of May, A. D. 1900, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper published in Franklin, the last publication to be one day at least before said court, and by mailing, postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate seven days at least before said court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esq., Judge of said Court, this twenty-fourth day of April, in the year one thousand nine hundred.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
NORFOLK, ss.

FRANKLIN, MASS., May 1st, A. D. 1900.

By virtue of a warrant of sale issued by the Superior Court within and for said county of Norfolk and to me directed, I shall sell at public auction on at two o'clock p. m., on the premises described below, with all the privileges and appurtenances thereto belonging, the following described real estate, to wit:

MONDAY, the FOURTH day of JUNE, A.D. 1900,

A certain tract of land, with the buildings thereon, situated on the corner of Village and Broad streets, in Medway, in said county, and bounded and described as follows, viz: Southerly by Village street, westerly by Broad street, northerly by land of one Wilder and easterly by land of one Billings and Sarah Woodward, and known as the "Gladstone Hotel."

JEROME B. FITZPATRICK,
my1,8,15 Deputy Sheriff.

Mortgagee's Sale.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Edwin J. Fairbank, Jr., to Abner Chute, dated December 21, 1895, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 752, folio 233, will be sold at public auction upon the premises, on at two o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, the said premises being described in said mortgage deed as follows, viz:

A certain parcel of land situated easterly of Union street, in Millis, commonwealth of Massachusetts, being lot 111 on a "Plan of building lots in Millis, Mass., owned by Helen E. Van Kleeck, Oct. 13, 1893, Geo. A. Kimball, civil engineer," recorded with Norfolk Deeds, containing according to said plan 6484 square feet, and bounded as follows: Beginning at the southeasterly corner of said lot, at land now or formerly of Timothy Bullard and at a point 43.64 feet west of the westerly line of a proposed street 40 feet wide, as shown on said plan; thence running westerly by said land formerly of Timothy Bullard 50.14 feet to a corner; thence in a straight line a little west of northerly by lot 110 on said plan 128.03 feet to the southerly line of a proposed street 40 feet wide, as shown on said plan; thence in a direction a little north of easterly by the southerly line of said proposed street which leads easterly from Union street 50 feet to the northwesterly corner of lot 112 on said plan, thence in a direction a little east of southerly by lot 112 on said plan 131.75 feet to the point of beginning; together with a right to use for all the purposes for which public streets are ordinarily used all the streets laid down on said plan.

SUPERIOR COURT.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court, next to be holden at Dedham, within and for the county of Norfolk:

Respectfully represents and libels George E. Despeaux of Medway, in said county, that he was lawfully married to Addie E. Despeaux, now of Eastford, in the state of Connecticut, at Hopedale, in the county of Worcester, September 3, 1884, and thereafterwards your libellant and the said Addie lived together as husband and wife in this commonwealth at Medway, in said Norfolk county; that your libellant has always been faithful to his marriage vows and obligations, but the said Addie, being wholly regardless of the same at said Medway on or about the twenty-fifth day of January, 1900, committed the crime of adultery with one Nelson Tanner and has committed said crime with said Tanner on divers days and times between January 25, 1900, and the date of this libel.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said Addie E. Despeaux.

Dated the eleventh day of April, 1900
GEORGE E. DESPEAUX.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
NORFOLK, ss.

SUPERIOR COURT.

On the foregoing libel it is ordered that the libellant give notice to the said Addie E. Despeaux, the libellee, to appear before the justices of this court, to be holden at Dedham, within and for said county, on the first Monday of June next, by causing an attested copy of said libel, and of this order thereon, to be published once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Franklin Sentinel, a newspaper printed at Franklin, in the county of Norfolk, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before the said first Monday of June next, and further, by sending through the mail, as soon as may be, by a registered letter addressed to the last known residence of the said Addie E. Despeaux an attested copy of said libel and of this order thereon, that the said Addie E. Despeaux may then and there show cause why the prayer of said libel should not be granted.

By the Court.

LOUIS A. COOK, Clerk.

April 16, A. D. 1900.

NORFOLK, ss.

FRANKLIN, MASS., April 24, A. D. 1900.

Seized and taken on execution and will be sold at public auction on TUESDAY, the TWENTY-NINTH day of MAY, A. D. 1900,

at two o'clock in the afternoon, at my office in Morse Block in Franklin, in said county, all the right, title and interest that Lawrence McGuinnis, alias McGinnis, of Medway, in said county of Norfolk, had (not exempt from attachment or levy on execution) on the twenty-eighth day of November, A. D. 1899, at ten o'clock in the forenoon (being the time the same was attached on mesne process) in and to the following described real estate, to wit: A certain tract of land situated in Medway, in said county of Norfolk, on the northerly side of Village street, with buildings thereon, and bounded as follows: Commencing at the southeasterly corner of the premises on said Village street; thence running northerly on land formerly of one Eaton, and known as the Eaton place, to land supposed to belong to one Wentworth, formerly of one Philbrick; thence westerly on said Wentworth land to a stake and stones at the northerly end of a drain at land of William Schroeder; thence southerly along the line of said drain and with said Schroeder land to said Village street; thence easterly with said Village street to the point of beginning, being the Phillips place, so called, and a part of the Dr. Brown estate, so called.

A certain tract of land situated in Medway, in said county of Norfolk, on the southerly side of Village street, opposite the above described tract, and bounded northerly on said Village street, southwesterly by Charles river and easterly by land supposed to belong formerly to Mrs. A. H. Clark, and being the second parcel described in the mortgage of Lawrence McGinnis to Margaret H. Kenny, dated August 6, 1895, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, book 744, page 522.

JEROME B. FITZPATRICK,

A number of grangers went to Woonsocket Wednesday evening to enjoy "neighbors' night" with the Border grange, having a most fraternal time.

Rev. F. B. Sleeper will give the second of his series on "The Fine Arts" next Sunday evening in the Baptist church. His theme will be "The Fine Art of Christian Development."

Rev. Dr. Sneath proved the presence of the name of God in the book of Esther at the Congregational church last Sunday evening, the acrostic nature of the book affording the clue.

President J. H. Riordan and Vice President M. F. Kearns of Division 8, A. O. H., took part in the A. O. H. parade in Boston last Wednesday and were present at the banquet in the evening.

The Ladies' Benevolent society of the Congregational church will meet Wednesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. A large attendance is desired, as this is the annual business meeting. Only an afternoon session.

Workmen have nearly finished the repairs upon the house occupied by Mr. Scott, recently struck by lightning. The plastering was so loosened upon the laths inside that much new plastering was required.

Pond & Tingley's men returned Tuesday night from camp near Kingsbury's pond, where they have finished cutting and sawing a large lot of wood and lumber on which they have been engaged since January 1.

The Deans had everything their own way in the game with the M. I. T. freshmen on the campus Wednesday afternoon, outclassing their opponents at every point and batting out a victory to the tune of 14 to 2.

Lack of iron is materially delaying work upon the Medway and Franklin Street railway, but just as soon as it arrives the work will be pushed as rapidly as possible, so as to get the benefit of the summer travel.

The Epworth league met with Miss Mary Bright at Hillside Farm Wednesday evening and after the business meeting a pleasing program, arranged by the social, committee, was enjoyed. Refreshments were served.

Rev. I. W. Sneath and C. B. Johnson have been selected to represent the Congregational church at the General Association of Congregational churches to be held at Amherst next week Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Quite a party from here went to Medway last evening to enjoy the High school entertainment, "Woodcock's Little Game" being presented. John Cosseboom assisted from here. The play was a good one and a fine sum was netted.

The "bloomer" cars were put on the electric line to Woonsocket on Wednesday morning, when the air was balmy, but a change in the atmosphere occurring in the afternoon the vestibule cars were again substituted and are still in use.

Revs. I. W. Sneath, F. B. Sleeper and S. A. Cook will all preach next Sunday forenoon on "What the Ecumenical Conference Saith Unto the Churches." This will be a very interesting description of the missionary council lately held in New York city.

Bicyclists will be pleased to know that the legislature has passed a law compelling railroads to carry wheels free, and also permitting wheelmen to ride in the park system about Boston without lanterns, both of which acts will be thoroughly appreciated.

Town and gown meet for the third time on the campus at Dean tomorrow, when the Dean boys and the town team will strive for supremacy, each side having taken one game. Both sides claim an ability to win, so the anxious ones must wait for the morrow.

A delegation of Excelsior lodge, A. F. & A. M., contemplates a fraternal visit to the Woonsocket lodge the latter part of the month. If the arrangements are carried out, special electrics or a special train on the steam road will probably be secured for the return home.

A number of citizens have already pledged their support to the Carter baseball team for the season by agreeing to purchase season tickets, which are now on sale at $5 each. The move is a popular one and no doubt there will be large number of tickets disposed of.

Some days ago a forest fire burned over several acres of valuable woodland, and there is evidence pointing to the supposition that the fire was started maliciously by a certain boy. The matter will be thoroughly investigated and if the facts warrant, an arrest and prosecution will follow.

Ice will be higher here this summer, while in Framingham the two principal ice companies have combined forces, under the name of the Framingham Ice Co., thus securing control of Framingham's trade in that commodity, under one management, and will kill out competition. More trusts.

It is understood that J. B. McKinnon is today concluding arrangements to take the Hotel Briggs, satisfactory terms having been settled upon. He took the hotel some weeks ago, but a misunderstanding occasioned a hitch in the transfer.

Waldo C. Everett was a member of the class of 1900 graduated from Emerson College of Oratory, Boston, on May 4, and received his diploma as a full-fledged orator. Mr. Everett intends to continue in this line of work, and he shows a natural talent for it which will prove of material value.

Lattimer W. Ballou of Woonsocket, well known here, and at one time treasurer and president of the board of trustees of Dean academy, died at his home on Wednesday afternoon, aged 88 years. Death was due to old age. He was one of the most prominent men of this section and was grandfather to William H. Sweatt.

There was a rumor current about the street that the repair of the Catholic church had been ordered by the bishop, but this proves not to be the case. More than likely the entire structure will be carefully gone over by an architect selected by the bishop, whose opinion will materially aid the latter in rendering a decision in the matter.

The street railway in Wrentham has, literally, run against a stump. About two days' more work will complete the line to Plainville, but a tree three feet through at the base stands directly in the line of the track. The authorities will not allow the road to go around the tree and other authorities will not allow the tree to be cut down.

John Fairbanks died early this morning at his home on School street of heart disease, aged 75 years. He was about yesterday and no intimation of an early demise was afforded him or his friends. He has been a resident here for many years and was a straw worker by trade. The funeral will be held on Monday at 2 o'clock at the house, Rev. Dr. Hodge officiating.

The funeral of Elijah Leonard, who died on Tuesday, was held from his residence on Cottage street yesterday afternoon, Rev. Dr. Hodge officiating. Mr. Leonard has been a resident here about four years, coming here from Holliston. He was born in New York state, going later to Kansas, where he had a fine farm. He was 74 years of age and leaves a widow.

In their newly-furnished home at 40 Dean avenue Neil McIvor and Miss Eunice McNeil were happily united in marriage on Wednesday evening. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Isaiah W. Sneath in the presence of a number of guests from Boston, Chelsea and Franklin. A number of handsome presents were received. Mr. McIvor is a carpenter and is one of Mr. Grant's thorough workmen.

As an illustration of how children are governed by sound rather than by sense in much that they learn in school, a Brooklyn family were horrified to hear their little girl singing "To hell with the birth of Christ." Investigation proved that the child had learned in school to sing "To herald the birth of Christ" in the above sacriligious manner, all ignorant of the irreverence which the sentence possessed.

Annual Social.

Alden club members will remember that next Monday night brings the annual social. This year the regular club "musicale" will be united with the social and the club wishes the gentlemen to understand it will also be a gentlemen's night. It is hoped the club members will come as in the old fashioned times, removing hats and wraps and joining with the committee in making the evening a truly social one. Following is the evening's program: Short reception, musicale, social. Artists: U. S. Kerr, basso; A. Frank Adams, baritone; George P. Long, mandolin; Miss Sherman (Dean), reader; Miss Whiting, soprano; Miss Gould, pianist. For the pleasure of hearing Mr. Kerr we are indebted to one of our honorary members, Mrs. Charles Whiting. Mr. Kerr needs no introduction to a Franklin audience. The harp and mandolin soloists are among Boston's best. We feel sure the club will appreciate this treat and respond heartily. R.

Dean Tonight.

The Dean pupils have provided a most pleasing entertainment for this evening for the benefit of the Athletic association, the two farces being "Thirty Minutes for Refreshments" and "A Happy Pair." Some of the best histrionic talent connected with the institution will participate, and a meritorious entertainment is assured. A slight admission fee will be charged.

Card of Thanks.

The undersigned desires to thank the neighbors and friends for their kindness during the illness and death of her husband, and for all who assisted at the funeral. MRS ELIJAH LEONARD.

Franklin, Mass., May 11. 1900.

Fine hair cutting, smooth shaving, razors honed and put in order. Ocbee the barber.

A Pleasant and Successful Party.

One of the pleasantest events of the season was the summer dress party given under the auspices of Miss Razee's dancing classes at the Opera house last evening, the affair marking the close of the season of 1899-00 for the pupils, which, under the guidance of Miss Razee, has been one of signal success. This young young lady has heretofore pleased the public by well-planned and highly entertaining affairs in this line, and last evening's party was abreast of all the pleasant events given in the past by the accomplished tutor and her pupils.

A most pleasant feature of the evening's programme was the exercises by the juvenile class, composed of seventeen accomplished and well-drilled little ones, including the little Misses Mildred Fairfield, Sadie Mannell, Hortense Razee, Grace Russell, Julia Coleman, Esmah Metcalf, Helen Halloran, Pearl Fairfield, Ruth Whitaker, Masters Herbert and Harry Gray, Willie Dauphinee, Raymond Schuster, Harold Talbot, Percy Fairfield, Stanley Chilson, Dana Searle and Ralph Tracy. The grace, ease and proficiency with which they executed the figures in the german, the society dances and the cake walk quadrille was a revelation and showed excellent training, and the juveniles fully merited the hearty applause given them.

The juvenile programme opened with a march and two-step, which was led by Mildred Fairfield and Herbert Gray, and at intervals between the execution of the six remaining numbers by the little ones the Philharmonic orchestra rendered selections. The cake walk quadrille was a taking feature, Percy Fairfield, Hortense Razee, Ralph Tracy and Ruth Whitaker forming the head couples, and Stanley Chilson, Henry Halloran, Dana Searle and Pearl Fairfield the side couples. Harold Talbot was the trumpeter who called together the graceful little walkers, and Mildred Fairfield deftly cut the cake and presented each little member with a generous slice when the cakewalk quadrille was ended. During the exercises Miss Bertha B. Razee presided at the piano.

The juvenile programme concluded, the order of dances for the adults was taken up, beginning with the promenade and two-step, led by W. F. Noyes and Miss Nellie Razee, and the seventeen remaining numbers were participated in by eighty couples, who danced away the hours to the sweet strains of the Philharmonic orchestra, the pleasant affair coming to an end at 2 o'clock this morning. The floor aids were W. F. Noyes, W. J. Stewart, Charles Whitaker and Edwin Stewart. There was an intermission at midnight for supper, which was served in the hall at midnight by Caterer Fairfield.

The party was a complete success in every way, and among the large number present were guests from Boston, Providence, Norwood, Wrentham, Sheldonville, Diamond Hill, Arnolds Mill and Abbott's Run. Altogether there were nearly 300 participants.

Support Needed.

For a number of years Franklin has had a firstclass base ball team, and for a number of years the expense has fallen upon one man, O. B. Carter. We should also add that the deficit for a number of years has also been borne by him. This year he naturally desires to shift the burden a little, and dispose in advance of a number of season tickets, which shall insure the financial success of the affair. Few realize how much it costs to run a ball team. Few games are played here costing less than $125, which means that the attendance must average 500 people per game.

In the event of a rain, with his and the other team here, the outgo is large for expense without a particle of income. Hence it may be seen that the financial burden is no light one, and that Mr. Carter has consented to bear it year after year is no reason why he should continue to do so, especially since he has so many other interests demanding his attention. But with a portion of this expense guaranteed he can see his way clear to continue to give Franklin a ball team worthy the reputation it has already secured. With the trolley bringing in patrons from Milford, the Medways, Bellingham, Wrentham and the Attleboros this season promises better than has any preceding one.

W. A. Fairfield is, therefore, going about among our merchants and other interested persons seeking to sell the season tickets, which have been placed at $5. We are glad to note that he is meeting with excellent results, and will doubtless secure a sufficient number of names to insure the success of the ball season of 1900.

Fresh Lobsters.

Our lobsters are boiled fresh every Saturday morning and received here at 4 30 p. m. You can get old, cheap ones elsewhere. Also asparagus, string beans, spinach, dandelions, radishes, lettuce, rhubarb, cucumbers, Bermuda onions; fresh killed fowls, lamb, veal, pork, choice beef, and as a delicacy we have Van Camp's celebrated concentrated soups of all kinds. Try them. Also the Brunswick canned goods.

EMERSON'S MARKET.

Beckett—Bent.

At 8 30 o'clock Wednesday evening, at the residence of Jacob Quilter, Wesley J. Beckett and Miss Maggie S. Bent were united in marriage, the ceremony being performed by Rev. F. B. Sleeper, of the Baptist church. Rupert G. Bent and Miss Sadie Barteaux, brother and cousin of the bride, acted as groomsman and bridesmaid, the wedding party entering the room to the strains of a march played by Mrs. George Bacon. The bride was attired in white organdie, with trimmings of white satin ribbon, and wore white pinks. The rooms were most artistically decorated with evergreens and branches of apple blossoms. Ice cream, cake and coffee were served after the ceremony.

Miss Bent is a native of Nicteaux Falls, Nova Scotia, but for the past two years has acted in the capacity of waitress at Dean academy, where she has made many friends Mr. Beckett's native place is Rutland, where his father, John R. Beckett, is proprietor of a large general store. He is employed as conductor on the Milford, Attleboro & Woonsocket Street railway, and his associates on the line did not forget to give the bridal couple rousing salutes as the cars passed the house during the evening.

Among the beautiful and useful gifts were a carving set and olive fork, Prof. Peirce and students; salad spoon, sugar spoon and two dessert spoons from teachers and young ladies at Dean, and a silver service from brothers of the bride. Out of town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. John R. Beckett of Rutland, Fred. O. and Rupert G. Bent of Marblehead, James N. Bent of Everett and Charles C. Balcome of Lynn.

Mr. and Mrs. Beckett have taken apartments at Mr. Quilter's.

The Street Railway Boom.

The street railway fever has struck Franklin in all its intensity. For the past two years there has been agitation for extensions along every one of the lines which now attract the local interest, and there has seemed to be enough in it to warrant actual building. This is undoubtedly due to the fact that there is just now a great deal of money seeking investment. The ride through the various parts of the town will be enjoyable and at times convenient. It will afford a connection with a cheap railway fare to Boston, Woonsocket and Milford and that those who have ample time will frequently avail themselves of. It will also serve to develop some sections of the town as a residential district. There are many acres of land yet free in parts of the town adjacent to places of employment, for a building boom to strike a spot a half hour or more away from all business. From Franklin to Unionville there is a large tract of very desirable land. The street railway will aid in bringing much of this on the market, and in such a way the town will receive large benefits.

Are You In It?

Father, dear father, come home with me now, for ma has some carpets to beat; she got all the furniture out in the yard, from the front door clear out to the street. The stove must come down and be put in the shed, and the yard must be cleaned of some grass; for it's time to clean house and the devil's to pay—and the front windows need some glass. Father, dear father, come home with me now, and bring some bologna and cheese; for 'tis most twelve o'clock and there's nothing to eat—I'm hungry, I'm weak in the knees. All the dinner we'll have will be cold scraps and such, and we'll have to eat standing up, too, for the table and all are in the back yard; Oh, I wish house cleaning was through. Father, dear father, come home with me now, for ma is as mad as a Turk; she says that your only a lazy old thing, and that she will put you to work. There's painting to do, and paper to hang, and the windows and casings to scrub; for 'tis house-cleaning time, and you've got to come home, and revel in suds and cold grub.—Exchange.

Are You Ready?

With the opening up of the trolley lines to Wrentham and the Medways, every one expects that Franklin merchants will receive a large amount of what is practically new business, especially from those who have heretofore been compelled to do their trading at home largely, owing to the poor facilities for getting outside. The trolley will change all that. With reasonable fares between the Medways and Franklin, and also Wrentham, the trade is coming here in much larger amount than the volume of Franklin trade which goes to Woonsocket, which is admitted to be quite an important factor in our merchants' cash balance. Therefore it behooves our merchants to be ready to receive the new trade, both by invitation through a reputable medium like THE SENTINEL, and also by a quality and quantity of goods upon their shelves which will continue to induce trading here in preference to elsewhere. The right kind of work will do this.

Safe Home from Manila.

Valentine Schaeffer, brother of Romey Schaeffer of City Mills, aged about 18 years, has just returned from the Philippines, where he served in the navy. When the Spanish-American war broke out Schaeffer was serving his time at Newport. When the United States fleet was chasing Cevera's fleet about the West Indies he was placed on the Brooklyn as a messenger, where he served while the Spanish fleet was bottled up in Santiago. His ship took part in the chase and destruction of the fleet. He came home with the Brooklyn in the fall of 1898 and was presented a medal from the citizens of Brooklyn, as were all the sailors who were on the Brooklyn at Santiago. After a brief furlough Schaeffer left on the Buffalo for Manila. On reaching there he, with 300 companions, was transferred to the Charleston, which was wrecked on an uncharted rock. There were 300 men on the ship when she struck, and every one, with some rifles and ammunition and a small amount of provisions, got safely away from the vessel. The men took to the boats and after rowing all day landed on a barren island. The next morning a band of friendly natives came over to the island and the marines went to their town, where they remained for four weeks.

A crew sent out to find an American boat returned with the Oregon at the end of the fourth week and the sailors were taken on board. While in Manila Schaeffer met his brother Jacob, who was in Company G, 18th infantry, and who went to Cuba with this regiment and afterwards to the Philippines.

Tonight, at Morse Opera House

"O'Hooligan's Wedding" will be produced with their own scenery. O'Hooligan is full of human interest, the dialogue is breezy, the characters bright and the comedy all that could be desired. The most refined and elegant comedy company on the road, presenting more new features, new acts, more laughable oddities than any other similar enterprise. Remember that "O'Hooligan's Wedding" is a play which, though boisterous in merriment, yet is pure in sentiment, refined in tone, correct in moral bearing and spontaneous in action; in fact, it is the theme of praise for editors and the public everywhere. Furious fun from start to finish. Excitement and laughter sandwiched with charming instrumental music. Latest vocal oddities, topical songs and choruses are offered patrons of "O'Hooligan's Wedding. Tickets, whole orchestra, 35 and 25.

Richardson's Market.

Think of it! Corned beef at 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12 cents. Some of these are choice bits and cannot be beaten. Then we have the finest "green stuff" to be found in the Boston markets, all kinds. Try our new string beans. Home-killed veal, extra fine; roast beef as low as 8 cents, toothsome asparagus, fine, sweet butter for table or cooking, canned goods of all kinds.

The Event of the Century.

Getting persons to agree as to the one great event of the century is about as difficult as reaching a decision on the "100 best books," and so on. The old saying, "Many men of many minds," is well illustrated in the experiment of the Philadelphia North American, which has collected the opinions of several prominent gentlemen as to what is the preeminent achievement of the century now closing. Their opinions are as follows: Secretary Root—The process for making Bessemer steel. Russell Sage—The progress that has been made in electrical appliances. Mr. Sage thinks that the complete mastery of electrical power will probably be the great work that will mark the coming century. Dr. Cyrus Edson—The application of electricity to useful ends in general, and in particular the discovery of the Roentgen ray. Nikola Tesla—The mastery of electrical forces. C. W. Cridler, third assistant secretary of state—The abolition of slavery. Senator Depew—The development of electricity. He thinks the peril of the twentieth century will be in congestion. Maj. Gen. Miles—The preservation of the American republic. Rev. Dr. Hillis, of Plymouth church—The laying of the Atlantic cable. Prof. Langley—The advent of electricity. A. A. Adee, second assistant secretary of state—The aseptic treatment used in surgery. Henry Irving—The civil war of 1861-1865. Regarding what may be accomplished during the next century he quotes: "Never prophesy unless you know."

To Catch Tax Dodgers.

A company formed in Iowa for the unique purpose of the prosecution of tax dodgers has submitted a proposition to the board of supervisors of many of the counties of the state. The concern offers to make investigation and determine whether or not any persons, firms or corporations in any given county carelessly or fraudulently omit any part of their personal property or real estate subject to taxation in their statements furnished to the assessors. The company proposes to report all such property that it may find to the proper official for assessment, collection and entry, and assist in collecting much as does a bad debt collecting concern. The concern that makes this offer does not do so from philanthropic motives. On the contrary, it asks the large price of 50 per cent. of all that it collects—a price which is rather larger than is usually asked by bad debt collecting agencies. The scheme will tempt many counties, as it would undoubtedly bring to the surface much property that has hitherto been concealed, and whatever taxes may be received in this way will be so much more than nothing, while the proceedings would be apt to discourage future dodging of taxes. It is a pity, says the Chicago Tribune, that the county officials cannot be fearless enough to make investigations of their own and not suffer the humiliation of an offer such as that of the tax collecting company.

Members of the house are getting very particular about the cards that are sent in to them, says the [illegible] Washington Star. The agitation of [illegible] has made them sensitive to the suspicion of too much gallantry. [illegible] the members now [illegible] sent from the ladies' [illegible] a half dozen members have been [illegible] sitting in the ladies' gallery [illegible] their wives were [illegible]. The deep window recesses [illegible] the corridors, where [illegible] flirtations were wont to be held, are now vacant, except when occupied by men only. It was amusing to observe the alertness of members to whom flowers were sent on the opening of congress, in getting possession of the cards of presentation, lest some cards should bear a lady's name and excite comment.

INDIGESTION

If you have it, you know it. You know all about the heavy feeling in the stomach, the formation of gas, the nausea, sick headache, and general weakness of the whole body.

You can't have it a week without your blood being impure and your nerves all exhausted. There's just one remedy for you——

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

There's nothing new about it. Your grandparents took it. 'Twas an old Sarsaparilla before other sarsaparillas were known. It made the word "Sarsaparilla" famous over the whole world.

There's no other sarsaparilla like it. In age and power to cure it's "The leader of them all."

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

Ayer's Pills cure constipation.

"After suffering terribly I was induced to try your Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles and now feel like a new man. I would advise all my fellow creatures to try this medicine, for it has stood the test of time and its curative power cannot be excelled." I. D. GOOD, Jan. 30, 1899. Browntown, Va.

THE BUZZING MOTOR BOX.

Pump Arrangement in Under Trolley Cars That Sets One's Teeth on Edge.

Every change in the street car transit facilities in this city produces some new sensation to the riders. The latest of these is felt by those who travel in the new 41-foot long, cross-seated cars of the Third avenue line, and is particularly noticeable when the cars come to a stop. In the comparative quiet which then prevails the passenger suddenly becomes aware of a peculiar noise and vibration which is transmitted throughout the body of the car, and appears to be caused by some one being at work sawing the track in two under the car with a coarse-toothed saw.

It is a sensation which has a tendency to set one's teeth on edge, and the passenger is glad when the car starts up again, hoping that he will soon be over that bad spot in the track. He discovers then that the sawing is still going on under him, and if he is nervous will be pretty nearly ready to leave the car to escape it, when it will suddenly cease. After a period of quiet, during which the car may have made two or three stops, the sawing will start up again for a new effort.

This annoying noise and vibration is made by an electric motor and pump which is carried under the bottom of the car inclosed in a thick, wooden case attached to the body of the car. Its work is to keep up the supply of air under pressure which works the air brakes, and the reason it does not run all the time is that it is so arranged that it is only put in operation when the pressure in the air storage cylinder falls below a certain point. When this is reached a plunger fails and makes an electric connection which starts the pump motor and the pumping continues until the pressure reaches a maximum point, fixed at the will of the company.

To avoid the transmission of the unpleasant noise and vibration to the car and passenger, it will probably be necessary to separate the pump motor box from the car body and suspend it on a spring connection.—N. Y. Sun.

Not Complimentary.

Mrs. Stamford Hill—I hear you are trying joint housekeeping with the Lovejoys. How does it work, dear?

Mrs. Mincing Lane—Oh, splendidly! We never have the slightest disagreement.

Cooking by Guesswork.

Mr. Newwed—[illegible] coffee is weak is [illegible] again.

Mrs. Newwed—I can't [illegible] for it, my [illegible]. No matter how careful I am, it's always the same way.

"Perhaps you don't use enough coffee."

"Nonsense! I put in a whole halfcupful, and everybody says that's plenty."

"Do you measure the water?"

"Hah! Whoever heard of measuring water? All cooks pour it right out of the tea-kettle. I've seen 'em often, so there!"—N. Y. Weekly.

MACADAMIZED ROADS.

A Prominent L. A. W. Official Tells How They Should Be Constructed and Maintained.

"As the necessity for good roads increases, more frequent attempts are made by the country road builders to construct stone or macadam roads. Of course, some of this macadamizing is excellently done, but the great majority of cases are characterized by an utter want of that expert knowledge which is required for selecting the best materials and using them in the right way. Failures are especially numerous in respect to the methods adopted," says Otto Dorner, chairman of the L. A. W. highway improvement committee.

"A stone road of any kind is necessarily expensive, and a poorly constructed macadam road always means a waste of considerable funds. The subject is, therefore, deserving of especial study, and the farmers may be depended upon to familiarize themselves thoroughly with the principles which have governed this work, especially in New Jersey, where so much macadamizing has been done by state aid. We may expect that, in time, the construction of stone roads will become as familiar to farmers as the growing of wheat, but at present there is very little general information on the subject."

"The two points to be observed in building stone roads are, first, to provide a proper foundation, and, second, to roll and compact the stone metal with the utmost thoroughness. To begin with, the subsoil, which is to serve as a foundation for the stone, must be properly crowned, sloping down from the middle to each side of the road, and must then be rolled until it is absolutely hard and smooth. The road should take its shape from the shape of the foundation. The stone is but a covering or roof for the protection of the ground beneath."

"The stone used should be put down in layers not more than four inches thick, and it is well, where several layers of stone are used, to sort the material and to use the larger pieces for the lower layer. This sorting is done by means of a rotary screen attached to the rock crusher. In building macadam roads in Massachusetts and Ontario, the lower layer is usually composed of stone which will pass through a hole 2½ inches in diameter. The second layer usually consists of pieces which will pass through a 1½-inch hole."

"Rolling is the most important point in the treatment of macadam or stone roads. A heavy roller should always be used, heavy enough to wedge the pieces of stone firmly together. The roller accomplishes this by shifting the pieces about until each is lodged firmly between adjoining pieces, which readily explains the greater effectiveness of the heavy machine. Two things may prevent successful rolling; either the failure to provide a solid foundation, or the practice, which is very common, of spreading gravel or dirt over a layer of stone before it is rolled. The idea of using such a "binder" is a bad mistake. In either event, the dirt or gravel, getting between the loose particles of stone, will prevent their becoming firmly wedged. A mixing of stone and earth, which is thus frequently brought about in an attempt to build a macadam road, is little better than an ordinary dirt road; indeed, it is inferior in some particulars. The material in a road thus constructed is sure to shift about under the pressure of narrow-tired wheels, which results in the larger pieces of stone working their way to the top, rendering the road rough and uncomfortable for travel. The best way to help the stone to "bind" is to thoroughly sprinkle it with water before and during the rolling process. Almost every kind of stone has more or less cementing qualities, and its saturation with water while it is being rolled serves admirably to help unite the different pieces firmly. The second layer of stone is frequently of less thickness than the layer below. This layer should also be thoroughly and repeatedly rolled without the use of gravel or dirt as a supposed binder, and with the use of abundant water to help in cementing it. After the layers of stone are entirely completed and have been thoroughly rolled and packed, it is well to spread a layer of gravel, by way of top dressing, and to roll that thoroughly. Better still is to make this layer of stone screenings, which will unite better than gravel does. This dressing will prevent wearing the macadam road proper, and, as it disappears with use and travel, should be renewed from time to time, leaving the stone construction below absolutely perfect."

"A macadam road, properly built and with proper slope to each side will readily drain off water and snow. The object of all road experts is to so construct a macadam road that water cannot permeate it. If water is allowed to find its way through the macadam road into the foundation [illegible] it is sure to work mischief; and [illegible] the road is then subjected to [illegible] pressure [illegible] it is certain to give way. Hence the [illegible] a road [illegible] construction [illegible] strength [illegible] it is, therefore, [illegible] to prevent this first [illegible]"

"Taxpayers [illegible] tribute to the cost of macadam roads will [illegible] that the work is properly done. The old adage that what is worth doing at all is worth doing well applies with irresistible force. Many of us still believe that we cannot afford, in the United States, to build first-class highways. It is even more emphatically true that we cannot afford to waste money [illegible]"

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female disease quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a Godsend to weak, sickly, run-down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by A. C. Mason & Co. druggists.

HOW TO BE HAPPY ANYWHERE

Every Woman Carries Her Happiness with Her, If She Knows How to Develop It.

A married woman—happily married—ought to be happy anywhere, but she isn't, sometimes, and when she isn't it is because she lacks adaptability. The woman who cannot adapt herself to her surroundings is to be pitied. Perhaps you think that the woman that lacks adaptability is the exception, but I'm afraid she is the rule.

The woman who marries an army officer ought to know that there is going to be a great change in her life. She goes out to Fort X in Arizona, and when she is inducted to the log hut that is to be her home for a year at least, and perhaps for three, her heart goes down into her little boots. There are other women there, and they assure her that she will soon get used to it, but she refuses to believe in the possibility, and within three months is planning to take a trip home to mother. Of course, he lets her go, but don't you suppose he feels a trifle disappointed in his wife?

Then there is the naval officer's wife. Doesn't she know that naval officers have to travel away at 24 hours' notice? He must have told her that, and yet when the order comes to go she tries to delay him, and thus makes the parting ten times harder. Or suppose she follows him to the China station, and has to put up at Hong-Kong or Yokohama, where the manner of living is so different from this country. There are some women who find it rare fun and drop right into oriental ways, because they are adaptable, but the majority pass their time in groaning, and, when hubby comes ashore, take up all his shore leave wishing that he could be removed to the Mediterranean squadron, or at least to the North Atlantic. Of course, he wishes so, too, but he is under orders, and it would make it much easier if she was as contented as he tries to be.

Let me tell you a little story of a frontier town. It was situated on the northwestern frontier 25 years ago, and, although now of considerable importance, then numbered 300 souls, all told. It was the terminus of a railroad, which brought in one train every second day, but which did not run any trains between October 1 and April 1 because of the tremendous snowdrifts.

There was just 40 women in this town, all married, and about six had children. With the exception of four all these women came from the "east," which in frontier vocabulary means St. Paul and anything east of that point. Their husbands had come out west to grow up with the country, and after a year's experience had felt justified in going east to claim the fulfillment of a previous engagement.

The brides were brought to this town in the spring and had passed through the summer very cheerfully. Then came the first frosts of September, and as the time drew near for the departure of the last train their brows grew dark. They looked forward with terror to six months' exclusion from the world they had left. I do not know what they said but I know what they did.

There were four women in town who had been "movers," as they call those restless people who are always in the advance of civilization, and of course they stayed, and there were two other married woman who decided that if their husbands could stand the climate and the solitude so could they, but every other woman took that last train for the east. Now, don't you think all these women might have adapted themselves to their surroundings if they had tried?

Think of the wife of a missionary. He must go to the farthest points on the globe, and she must go, too. Of course she knows in a general way that she must encounter hardships and privations, but you know you can't form any but the faintest idea of a place from a written description, just as in summer you can't really shiver over a story of arctic perils. So when she actually is installed in a hut with an earth floor, with surroundings little more than barbaric, you can't blame her if her heart feels sick. And how wretched she is going to be if she cannot train that heart to cease its repinings! It is nonsense to think that any civilized woman can ever come to prefer a hut to a house, or the presence of savages to the society of America, but she can make herself a philosopher and extract fun, instruction and even a modicum of comfort either at the equator or the pole.

If you will sit down and figure it out you will find that of all the things in your house there are nine out of ten that you could do without if you had to do so. The talent of adaptability is simply doing without these superfluities and not missing them—at least not enough to fret about it. It is a very pleasant fate to not have to do without anything you want, but when the times comes when you must, then make up your mind to adapt yourself if you would be happy.—Effie Wybrant Smith in Chicago Times-Herald.

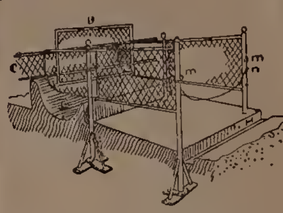
NEW WISCONSIN BARN.

In Its Construction Every New and Progressive Idea Has Been Carefully Considered.

The Wisconsin experiment station people have built a new barn after studying carefully the best to be found in various parts of the country. They have decided to use metal in making the stalls, and a sample stall is shown in the cut. The stable is arranged for 36 cows, 18 on each side of the center passage, with the two rows of cows facing this center passage, which is ten feet wide, so that a team may be driven through to feed the crops taken directly from the fields. The stalls are constructed of gas pipe posts with a framework of gates and panels of channel iron supporting a mesh of No. 7 woven steel wire. In the picture, C shows the framework extending to the length of each row of stalls to support the front part of the side panels; D is a swinging panel, which may be moved to suit the length of the cow; thus a small cow may be forced to stand well back in her stall, over the gutter. The side panels of the stall are hinged so as to accommodate the milkers and let the cows pass out without backing.



A NEW COW STALL.

The floors of this stable are made of Portland cement and crushed granite with the surface sloping gently, so as to lead all water to the sewer drains. The manure gutters behind the cows are 16 inches wide, with the bottom sloping three-fourths of an inch to the rear side and 1½ inches of slope to the center of the stable. The floor of the cow stalls is raised four inches above the other parts of the stable floor. The mangers are composed of the same material as the floor and are built up from it. The side of the manger nearest the cow is eight inches high and three inches thick, rounded down at the bottom. The front of the manger is 16 inches high; the manger is two feet six inches wide and reaches from one end of the stable to the other. It is used both for feeding and for water. The water is turned into the manger on either end from a pipe, and as the mangers slope towards the center from both ends it is readily drained into the sewer by opening a valve, after the cows have had sufficient time to drink. It is said that this means of watering cows is just as convenient and satisfactory as any of the individual watering devices, while it is more cleanly and more wholesome.—Rural New Yorker.

BUTTER-MAKING TESTS.

Cleanliness and Attention to Details Give Better Results Than Commercial Cultures.

The discovery of the important part played by various bacteria in producing the flavor and aroma of butter has led to the introduction of what are known as commercial butter cultures, and dairymen have been led to hope that by the use of such cultures and of the process of pasteurizing, the quality of their butter might be materially improved. Recent trials at the Pennsylvania experiment station, however, reported in bulletins No. 45 and No. 46, now in press, seemed to indicate that cleanliness, the careful selection of milk and close attention to details promise to effect more in improving the flavor of our butter than pasteurizing and the use of commercial cultures. With pasteurized cream, the acid-forming cultures were found to give slightly but distinctly better results than were obtained from unpasteurized cream ripened spontaneously, while non-acid-forming cultures gave results, if anything, slightly inferior to those obtained by spontaneous ripening. With unpasteurized cream, as might have been expected, the results were less marked. A home-made starter, however carefully prepared from skim milk, was found to give as good, if not better, results than the more expensive commercial cultures, and this was true both with pasteurized and with raw cream. No distinctly beneficial results were observed from pasteurizing, although the experiments were not specially planned to test this point. These results are similar to those recently published by the Wisconsin experiment station and the two taken together do not seem to indicate that, under present conditions, marked advantages are to be anticipated from the use of the commercial cultures. Trials were also made of heating milk to a temperature of about 165 degrees Fahrenheit before separating, but without any marked effect on the flavoring of the resulting butter.

Aim for Good Cows.

What we dairymen should aim at is to secure the best cows we can, and try testing each cow's milk by churning separately, and ascertain for sure whether they pay for their keeping and give us a little profit. We can be satisfied with a small profit, but cannot afford to keep cows at a loss for the benevolent purpose of supplying dairy products to consumers at a low cost. Excelsior should be the watchword, and the poorer cows kept only until their places can be filled by better.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.

ALL MET WITH MISFORTUNE.

The Old Superstition Relative to the Number Thirteen Singularly Verified.

"I would not sit down to dinner in a party of 13," said a broker who is credited with plenty of "horse sense," "for the simple reason that I don't intend to give coincidence a chance to play into the hands of superstition. Moreover, I have had one very disagreeable experience along that line. In the early spring of 1890 I was one of a bachelor party gotten up to give the usual send-off to a friend about to commit matrimony. There were 15 of us in the crowd, but at the last moment two were called away. That reduced us to the fatal number, which nobody noticed until we were seated at the table, when a desperate effort was made to scare up another guest, but no one could be found. So we laughed the matter off and went on with the fun, but there was a palpable undercurrent of depression and several of the boys acquired lachrymose jags—which, next to the English comic newspapers, are saddest things in the world.

"If you are not familiar with the terms I will explain that a lachrymose jag is the stage of inebriety at which a man tells you the story of his life and weeps on your shoulders at intervals of six months in the narrative. However, to get to the point, two of the fellows present died in 1896 and the way the circumstance demoralized nearly all the others was simply amazing. In several of them it effected a total change in disposition. The death of distant relatives, petty misadventures in business, occasional attacks of sickness and a hundred and one other incidents of everyday life were all charged up to the blight of 13, and finally, about a year and a half later, I became so tired of hearing that sort of stories that I took the pains to collect statistics on another stag party given within a few weeks of ours. An even dozen had been present and the net result was: Two deaths, three business failures, one lost a leg and one lost an eye in accidents, one embezzler skipped out, one divorce and two men gone to the dogs through drink. This was not a party of hoboes, either, but average chaps about town, and their catalogue of disaster put an end to further croaking over our 13 supper. All the same, I don't yearn for a repetition of the experience. Life's too short for all worry not strictly necessary."—N. O. Times Democrat.

Prevented a Tragedy.

Timely information given Mrs. George Long, of New Straitsville, Ohio, prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. A frightful cough had long kept her awake every night. She had tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle wholly cured her, and she writes this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of the matchless merit of this grand remedy for curing all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at A. C. Mr. and Mrs. George H. Cook have returned from their wedding trip to Thomasville, Ga., and have taken the Hutchinson house on School street. Mr. Cook is the manager at the Worcester Textile Co., Unionville.

Mine Host McKinnon looks a veritable boniface in his new quarters at Hotel Briggs, and he proposes to do all in his power to make it a firstclass hotel. The hotel was purchased by H. D. MacMillan, Mr. McKinnon being the agent.

A petition is being circulated among the farmers, or people living on the outskirts of Franklin, for free delivery. Money has been appropriated by the government for this object, and if a petition receives 100 signatures they will no doubt be signed by all the suburbanites.

Fern chapter, O. E. S., was represented at the meeting of the Grand chapter held in Worcester, May 10, by Mrs. Mabel M. Mason, worthy matron, and Mrs. Nellie C. Bachelor, associate matron. Mrs. Mason was elected and installed as grand adah of the Grand chapter of Massachusetts.

Patrick Dunion, a veteran of the civil war, died at the residence of James F. Doherty, Union street, yesterday, at an advanced age. He was a member of the G. A. R., and the members of Post 60, G. A. R., will attend the funeral, which will be held at 10.30 a. m. tomorrow from St. Mary's chapel.

The Textiles on Saturday afternoon played a nine from the Hayward mill and the latter won out after an exciting battle. The game was played at Unionville and was witnessed by a large crowd. The Cross brothers were the battery for the Textiles, and Chilson and Doan for the Haywards.

The city fathers gathered in their room Friday evening for the usual routine business and such other matters of public interest as might properly come before them. An innholder's license was granted to Harry A. Worthley and a pool table license to the same. Alfred A. Jordan was appointed a forest fire ward.

George H. Grant has begun the preliminary work for the summer theatre at Hoag pond, which is to be completed by June 18. Entertainments are to be given afternoon and evening through the season of three months, and vaudeville companies have been engaged for each week. The auditorium is to seat 1250 people.

A letter from Mrs. S. W. Squire, dated Canton, N. Y., May 10, shows that she is nearing home. She reports that before she left the West trees and grass were green, lawns having been mowed two or three times, while in Canton she finds snow squalls, but no verdure. She intends to return to her home the last of this month.

Road matters seem to be quiet and few comments are heard upon the condition of the highways. The new superintendent is taking hold of the problem fearlessly and good words have been spoken for him in one or two instances, when road matters formed the topic of informal discussion. At the present time the pay roll of the regular working force amounts to about $90 a week.

If you want a cheap trip to Chicago, just remember that the next national encampment, G. A. R., will be there in August, when it is expected 250,000 of the veterans will assemble and renew old ties. Each year these assemblies attract more attention, from the increasing age and infirmities of the battle-scarred veterans. In less than a generation more the encampments will be small indeed.

A gentleman was in town this week investigating a complaint which had been made to the New England Telephone and Telegraph company relative to injury of trees where the company's men had been putting up wires. The company disclaims any intention of causing damage or discomfort to any one, and says that the men have strict orders to use the utmost care when working along the streets.

A forest fire at Hardyville on Saturday afternoon at 3.30 was cause for the ringing in of an alarm from box 13. The alarm whistle got out of order after ringing out the number once, and for a time the populace was in doubt as to the location of the fire. A number of firemen went to Hardyville and aided in putting out the flames, which had burned over several acres before being checked. The land is owned by Lawrence J. Kelly.

Philadelphia has had a three weeks' trial of an ordinance prohibiting the distribution of circulars and flysheets at doors and on stoops in that city. It has worked an instant improvement in the streets. April winds have less paper to blow about. The streets are neater and cleaner. The litter on the lee of the gutters and sidewalks is less, and the general aspect of the streets is better than ever before. The way to keep the streets clean is to keep all the rubbish out of them.

Rev. Dr. Sneath gave a most interesting account of the recent Ecumenical council in New York on Sunday, showing the wonderful enthusiasm developed there, and the truly remarkable gathering of missionaries and laymen. The impetus which must result from such a meeting can hardly fail to be marvelous, and a source of inspiration to the many workers who are now laboring in foreign fields to further the cause of the gospel in heathen lands.

An editor of an exchange says: "If newspaper subscribers would only pay their bills as they do almost any of their other expenses, there would better papers and more prosperous and happy editors. But most people seem to think that the editor can be paid last just as well. We haven't the least doubt that there is a special felicity in store for people in the next world who have always responded promptly and cheerfully to the demands of the newspaper man."

Dean and a town team crossed bats on Saturday afternoon in the presence of a large crowd of spectators, the latter winning by a score of 15 to 12. The Dean boys felt no chagrin over their defeat, as they claim it took the assistance of some of the crack players from the North Attleboro and Brown University teams to defeat them, and the clever North Attleboro pitcher to clinch the game. Both sides developed some excellent playing, a number of individual plays being thoroughly appreciated.

Owing to the interest in base ball here it is quite likely that a meeting of the citizens will be called some evening this week to make arrangements for forming an association, with officers, etc. Mr. Carter will be back of the team, as usual, in a way, but so much of the responsibility will not fall upon him as heretofore. With a good live association here in the interest of the sport, such as North Attleboro has had, the game will increase in interest and in financial profit. We shall give further particulars later.

Everyone in town who has occasion to send packages by express will be interested to learn that, according to a decision of the United States supreme court, the stamp tax on express packages must be borne by the shipper. The opinion is based upon the case of the American Express company vs. Atty-Gen. Maynard of Michigan, and came to the supreme court from the decision of the supreme court of Michigan, which decision was adverse to the express companies' claim. The present opinion reverses the opinion.

Hubbard M. Bullock was brought home from Dedham on Friday unconscious. He began to feel badly at Walpole, and word was telegraphed here to prepare a conveyance to take him home. This was done, and a messenger went ahead to prepare Mrs. Bullock for the unwelcome news. He was found to suffering from what threatened to be a slight congestion of the brain, though he is now more comfortable. Dr. Elliott, who attended him, thought the difficulty was the after effects of his recent attack of the grip, from which he had not entirely recovered.

The two farces, "A Happy Pair" and "Thirty Minutes for Refreshments," were presented Friday evening by some of the Dean pupils in the chapel. A medium-sized audience witnessed the presentation and evinced their appreciation at different points by frequent applause. All the parts were well rendered by the different young ladies and gentlemen, and in some instances good dramatic ability was shown. The stage was prettily and suitably arranged for both plays and reflected credit on the dainty fingers which helped to make it so.

The selectmen of Bellingham held a conference last week with President George W. Wiggin and other officers of the Milford, Attleboro and Woonsocket street railway at Caryville in reference to the condition of the highway and road-bed from Caryville to Bellingham Four Corners. The selectmen had felt there was just ground of complaint as to its condition and were averse to further concessions to the company until it should be made better. The conference was harmonious and a satisfactory understanding was had. The track-laying through South Milford will be begun this week.

A Record Breaker.

It was understood that Vardon, the crack golfite, had recently returned to England, but this report appears to have been unfounded. It seems that he made his appearance one day last week on the Franklin Country club links and broke all previous records, besides a number of other things. His lofts were something terrific, and a number of the balls went so high, it is presumed, that they never came down—at least they were never found. Some of his strokes were fearfully and wonderfully made, and the sticks should have been similarly made to have withstood the terrific sweep of his stroke. Sticks, earth and ball were unrecognizably blended. Indeed, the executive committee are seriously considering a number of changes about the links to accommodate the new record maker. It is possible the grounds may be enlarged and a balloon secured to recover skyward balls; a boat will be bought for the brook, or the latter covered the entire distance, and a sinking fund will be established for the purchasing of new balls and sticks at frequent intervals. The stone wall will doubtless be removed, what there is left, and every rock, wood and piece of obstruction cleared away.

Waiting for the Trolley.

The business men of the town generally are anxiously awaiting the time when the direct electric route to Medway, as well as the route to Wrentham and Attleboro will be opened. Many of the merchants declare that since the Woonsocket Franklin line was opened last September, there has been a material falling off in several lines of trade here, and they say that the Woonsocket merchants acknowledge that their business has been greatly increased since the electrics began running between the two places. The Franklin business men believe, however, that when the lines to Attleboro and to Medway are in operation they will receive a large share of trade from people along the routes, more than enough, they say, to even up the loss sustained by Franklin people going to Woonsocket for their purchases.

High School 17, Dean Second 11.

On Friday the High school team administered a crushing defeat to Dean second on the Academy campus. The principal features of the game were the heavy hitting and a triple play made by the High school boys. Grant found the plate while a number of the Deans were unable to find the ball. This game was the first this season for the victors, with the exception of a few practice games, and can be taken on the whole as a very good beginning. Grant and Hood were the battery for the High school, and Forbes and Sweatt for Dean until the seventh inning when Nowell and Tooles, the first team battery, took up the fight, but made no impression. D.

One of the Finest.

The Alden club provided one of its most enjoyable entertainments last evening, it being, as Mrs. Ray expressed it, in the nature of a "combine." It united the usual "gentlemen's night," the club musicale and the annual spring meeting. The hall was very tastefully trimmed, presenting a most inviting appearance with its apple blossoms, violets and other reminders of spring. After a short and pleasantly informal reception chairs were brought in and the musical program was enjoyed, as follows:

Harp and Mandolin	Profs. Adams and Long
Bergnacht (German Song)	Mr. Kerr
Harp Solo—Song of Schubert	Prof. Adams
A Pastorale from the Opera Rosalinda—	Miss Whiting
Mandolin Solos	Prof. Long
Robber's Dream	Mr. Kerr
Harp Solo—Old Folks at Home	Prof. Adams
King Henry to Fair Rosamond	Mr. Kerr

In this the instrumentalists played delightfully, receiving merited encores. Mr. Kerr charmed his hearers by his magnificent voice and his superb handling of it, making new friends and fully sustaining the expectations of his old ones. No vocalist comes to Franklin with such a warm reception, and deservedly so, as does Mr. Kerr. In fact, he is heard much too infrequently.

Succeeding the music refreshments were served, consisting of cakes, ice cream, coffee, etc., and social chat prevailed for an hour or more, the whole affair proving one of the pleasantest of the season. Miss Ham was the chairman of the general committee, and had most efficient assistants, Miss Eleanor Ray being chairman of the refreshment committee, Miss Bowers of the decorative committee and Miss Connors of the ushers and waiters.

"The Fine Arts."

Rev. F. B. Sleeper gave the second sermon in his series on "The Fine Arts" in the Baptist church last Sunday evening. His theme was "The Fine Art of Christian Development." The gospel offers an infinite sphere for the growth of the soul. The young convert has learned only the alphabet of the ever-enlarging heavenly philosophy. There are two instructors, Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit, whose work is perfect along the line of divine progress. To be under such training is the privilege of every saint.

The musician is ever seeking for finer and richer melody in the higher realm of music. His is an exhaustless science. The artist beholds an ideal vision of beauty that he has not yet painted or sculptured. The poet aspires after a poem more heavenly in thought and genius than his pen has ever written. The law of growth is an essential characteristic of the fine arts without which there is stagnation and death. The gospel is the highest, finest art of all. And men must develop or fearfully retrograde. There must be constant progress in Bible truth, in divine sweetness and usefulness and in eternal life. He who conceives that he has mastered all the fullness of the revelation of Holy Scriptures and of the attributes of God is acting the fool. There is an infinity of heavenly thought and development before us. It is the one supremely fine art that all may know, and that to the uttermost. Under such divine instruction what may not the soul become in purest wisdom, in noblest, holiest life, in sublimest aspiration.

It is the Lord incarnating Himself in us. "We live and move and have our being in Him." And glorified by such a life we are exalted to the highest. We are thrilled by the joys and ambitions of the gods. We know in our own souls the powers that are supreme. The theme next Sunday evening will be "The fine art of christian endurance.

Tracks Laid to Plainville.

By Memorial day it is expected we will be able to step on an electric car here and with one or two changes make a trip by trolley to Attleboro and Pawtucket. Saturday the rails of the Milford, Attleboro and Woonsocket company were brought up against those of the Interstate at Plainville. One of the managers of the company said on Saturday: "We feel quite sure that we will have this line so far advanced as to permit through traffic on Decoration day. A larger crowd of men are to be put to work on the overhead construction and everything will be rushed."

This new road will make Lake Pearl more easy of access from all directions. The summer cottagers in that section who have heretofore enjoyed perfect quiet are understood to look with disfavor upon the entrance of the road into their midst.

Hotel Briggs.

I shall be pleased to greet all old friends of the hotel and many new ones, and will treat them right. Table first class. "All the comforts of home"

The Sporting Fever.

Milford appears to have gotten the impression, according to the Gazette, that Franklin is to have no ball team here this year. This illustrates the old saying that one has to go out of town to hear the news. But while this may be news it isn't the truth. Franklin will be in it to trounce Milford, as she has always done heretofore. North Attleboro is also preparing for the coming season, though "Bobby" Sherman will not be able to give his time to base ball as he has done in the past and will not manage that team. The personale is as follows: Donald Le Stage, manager of the team, has secured the following players: Lipp p., LeStage c., Crolius 1b., Murphy 2b., Shannon 3b., Duvally s. s., Slade l., Woodcock r., Clarkson m. Most of the men played with the team last year and good ball is assured.

Who Is Going?

Will Franklin be represented at the Nineteenth International Christian Endeavor convention in London, which will be held from July 14 to 18, and at the World's Fair in Paris? The trip will be made from Boston, July 3, on the steamship "Saale," of the North German Lloyd line, the itinerary of travel being as follows: From Boston to Southampton, London for ten days, from London to Antwerp, then to Brussels, Cologne, up the Rhine, Mayence, Heidleberg, Munich, Ober-Ammergau, Venice, Florence, Rome, Pisa, Genoa, Milan, Lucerne, Interlaken, Geneva, Paris to New York and home. The trip will take 58 days, from July 3 to Sept. 6 The longest stops will be made in London at the convention, 10 days, and at the Paris exhibition about the same length of time. The Passion play, at Ober Ammergau, will probably be the third place of importance.

Yes, Pictures Again!

Our most kind friend, Mr. Calkin, has just remembered all the school rooms of the Thayer building by the presentation of three portraits of the late Rev. William Thayer and one of Daniel Webster. The pictures of Mr. Thayer are placed in the rooms of Misses Reilly, Connor and Fernald. Mr. Frazer's room, already having a portrait of Mr. Thayer, was favored with the Webster picture. The pictures are in handsome frames 11x13 inches, the pictures and frames being of the excellent work which is so characteristic of Mr. Calkin.

We all feel truly grateful to Mr. Calkin for his manifested kindness to our public schools. F.

Attention!

Comrades Post 60, G. A. R.: You are requested to meet at G. A. R. hall Wednesday, May 16, at 9.30 a. m., in uniform, to attend the funeral of our late comrade, Patrick Dunion.

Here are a few of the foreigners who have applied for citizenship papers in the United States circuit court, New York city: Spiro Papastavaropulos, Calogero Tutotica, Ferzian Dikran Garabus, Fascheliere Le Hengelieive, Henri A Van der Paauwert, Pinens Tvachtenbroit, Gander Torkildsen, Felix L. De Cuspere Barriel, Schwarzbard Schilbse, Bertijose Serbas and Antonio S. Fernances y Boswisez. The above named are in their respective order natives of Greece, Italy, Turkey, France, Holland, Russia, Norway, Spain, Austria, Portugal and Cuba. These will make great ornaments for the city directory.

An old man recently went into a Lewiston (Me.) bank and asked the treasurer to count a roll of bills for him. He said that he could not count and had no idea how much money there was in the roll. It was rolled round, bill after bill being rolled on and stuck together and fastened with paste. It took a bottle of perfumery to ravel out the snarl. The man said that he thought there was about $2[illegible] there but it proved that there was $[illegible] when the treasurer had counted it.

A Findlay (O.) young man was arrested a few days ago because he persisted in perching himself in a tree near the dormitory of a female seminary and whistling serenades to a student with whom he was in love. He paid for his pucker.

There is certainly such a thing as carrying things to extremes. For example, says the Kansas City Journal, the universal determination in Kansas to lay something by against a rainy day does not justify that Fort Scott young woman who swallowed a [illegible] dollar.

The ice in indoor skating rinks is made by ammonia piped under the water. Perhaps some time we may have wagons delivering cans of coldness or liquid air at our doors just as milk is brought at present.

Congress is always said to sit. The members generally have to run so hard for it, that when they get there it is safe to say they are mighty glad to engage in sitting.

There are some men, says the Washington Post, who feel that the highest round of greatness has not been achieved until they have been tucked away in a public office with a colored gentleman stationed at the door to keep out the fellows who whooped it up for them.

An Aurora girl who has wasted two years of her young life on a too timid lover sent him a popgun as a Christmas gift in the way of a gentle hint. It was thought that he might recover from the surprise and get up courage about New Year's.

That there are more Indians in the United States now than there were the day the Pilgrims landed cannot be proved, but it is generally believed and stoutly affirmed by statisticians.

Are peculiar in many ways.

They like to drink water without ice.

They would rather walk upstairs than take an elevator.

They use ordinary portable bath tubs in place of stationary porcelain or metal ones such as we have.

What seems to us the funniest thing of all is that they absolutely prefer chicory in their coffee.

It is easy enough for any one to get adulterated coffee in this country. But the good housewife watches carefully that she is not thus imposed upon.

Those who have learned by experience and wish to be absolutely sure that they are getting pure coffee and the best coffee, without a grain of adulteration, ask for and insist upon having Chase & Sanborn's Coffees.

There is none better on the market. Every bean has been carefully selected from plantations, famous for their coffee crops.

The fact that these coffees bear the seal of Chase & Sanborn is in itself a sufficient guarantee that they are full weight and in every way perfect.

Seal Brand Coffee comes in one and two-pound tin cans, and their other high grades in richly colored parchment-lined imported bags.

THE DUTY OF SELF-CONTROL.

Influence and Usefulness Involved in Every Effort Toward Mastery of Self.

Everybody agrees as to the fact, but in practice most of us sometimes come very far short of our ideas. There is a difference, however, between being angry and losing one's temper. He who loses his temper is angry, but he who is angry has not necessarily lost his temper; that is, one may be righteously angry, deliberately and voluntarily angry, angry in the sense that his soul revolts from evil and he feels that he is discharging a duty in expressing himself in condemnatory terms. In other words, conviction and purpose may moderate and guide anger, and to righteous ends. But the loss of self-control, which usually, although not always, is accompanied by an ebullition of temper is literally a loss. The reins of control for a time are dropped and one is at the mercy of his mood.

Of course self-respect is involved in self-control. When we realize that we are off our balance, that we are being swayed by forces which we ought to be able to control, we cannot help being ashamed. The momentary gratification which some people find in yielding to anger soon passes away, and at its best is no compensation for the feeling of weakness and self-contempt which accompanies the consciousness of having failed to retain one's poise of mind and conduct. To keep the tone natural and the language calm, to conquer the impulse to return the blow or the insult, to preserve a clear, cool, resolute mastery of conditions when the attempt is made to baffle and mislead one—this, in the lower and the higher grades of effort alike, reveals the master of self and therefore of others, for influence and usefulness are involved.

It is a maxim in the working world that no man can control others who cannot control himself; that the soldier, the sailor, the operative can be handled much more surely and rendered much more effective by him of the low tone and the quiet yet decided manner than by cursing and threatening. He who can restrain and control himself wins inevitable respect and admiration. We admire him who succeeds thus, and he whose self-control evidently is based on Christian principle, he who seeks to restrain himself and in this way honor his God and Master wins a double influence. And it is credited where credit is due. His Christian character is acknowledged. To some people the duty of self-control is far harder than to others. [illegible] the victory when [illegible] is [illegible] but it is a [illegible] every one of us [illegible] those who are young [illegible] Christian experience, should [illegible] heart [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city."—Boston Congregationalist.

A Fine Appetizer.

Oyster cocktails are sometimes served in grapefruit. The fruit is cut into halves and the pulp nearly all removed, the juice being kept to use in the dressing. Six raw oysters are put in each cup, and to the usual cocktail dressing is added the juice of the fruit. If it is found not to be quite sour enough, a tablespoonful of pure vinegar may be added. The fruit and the oysters should be thoroughly chilled before serving.—N. Y. Post.

PROFESSIONAL SERVICES.

Compensation of the Physician and the Clergyman in This Country.

The naked fact of inadequate sums received by the doctor is his own skeleton in the closet, but he can covertly and privately match it with the published accounts of salaries with which the ministers must be satisfied. Altogether it must be admitted that the medical man, inadequate as his earnings may be, is much more fortunate than the clergyman. The latter, it is true, gets his rent free, with occasional yearly donations of potatoes, hay, flour and the like, but his living expenses must be within the limits of an income scarcely equal to that of an average mechanic with regular daily employment.

It is somewhat of a surprise to learn that a first-class clergyman in a country town averages only from $500 to $800 as yearly salary, while those in the large cities are not enough above those figures to make up the relative differences in incidental expenses of living. The latter amounts are said to range from $1,000 to $1,200 yearly. Certainly the average doctor must do much better than this, otherwise he must either run in debt or look for some other occupation. If the doctor in practice must make any living at all, he is bound to calculate on a sum one-third more, and perhaps double that which the preacher can get. We are now speaking of the average man in both professions, it being well known that special skill and recognized ability in either calling always command proportionately increased remuneration.

In some respects the physician and the clergyman are equally handicapped by conditions which make their clients more or less independent of their special services. The doctor has the free dispensaries, the while the minister sees his flock spurring away on the Sunday bicycle, sneaking for the train with the golf bag, or read the Sunday papers for the latest Gospel heresies. Still there is one advantage for the doctor over the clergyman: men, women and children will get sick and must have faith cures, while the would-be Christian is too ready to postpone repentance until it is too late to do church, minister, or himself any good either from a spiritual or pecuniary standpoint.

With both professions there is a sentiment of so-called charity and a sympathy for suffering, spiritual, mental, or physical, that hinders the more direct appeals for ready compensation which appertain to most callings. This attribute certainly does not cut a figure with the lawyer, whose retainer before and after the trial is a matter entirely in his own hands as the controller of the funds in his direct keeping. In his case the client gets what is left before all is gone, while ofttimes the physician and preacher must wait until their legitimate share has been divided and exhausted among the numerous and importunate creditors who work their claims on what is conventionally termed purely business principles. Thus it is that the doctor particularly is the best friend in need and the last to be considered when his indispensable services have been conscientiously and dutifully rendered. In these practical days it is no longer an optional and generous honorarium to be freely given, but a prosaic bill that is too frequently entirely ignored, or worse, is cowardly disputed.—Medical Record.

DECORATING FOR RECEPTIONS.

Some Hints Upon the Arrangement of Flowers, Ferns and Hangings.

Whether the decorations be few or many, let the position of every spray of flowers or greens, every ribbon streamer, every strip of bunting, be considered not only individually, but in connection with the entire scheme of decoration. Generally speaking, if but little material for decoration is to be used it is better to concentrate it in one effective mass than to make it extend over so large a space that no part of it can be made effective. Thus the flowers may all be given to the large table, the smaller ones simply having the fronds of hardy ferns scattered over the cloths. This will give a much better effect than a meager bunch of flowers on each table. These hardy ferns can usually be procured at the florist's for about five cents a bunch of 100 fronds. If no flowers at all are used, there are great decorative possibilities in these ferns alone. Carrying out the same idea in other decorations, it would seem better to mass the ribbons and bunting or flags in one handsome grouping over a window at the end of the room, or about the rostrum, than to so scatter them that the meagerness of the quantity would of itself attract attention. One of the most attractive of decorations was seen in a church vestry, over whose window ivy was trained. The nearest approach to this could be made with trailing greens.—Inez Redding, in Woman's Home Companion.

"The Strength of Twenty Men."

When Shakespeare employed this phrase he referred, of course, to healthy, able-bodied men. If he had lived in these days he would have known that men and women who are not healthy may become so by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by making the blood rich and pure and giving good appetite and perfect digestion, imparts vitality and strength to the system.

A Sprained Ankle Quickly Cured.

"At one time I suffered from a severe sprain of the ankle," says Geo. E. Cary, editor of the Guide, Washington, Va. "After using several well recommended medicines without success, I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm and am pleased to say that relief came as soon as I began its use and a complete cure speedily followed. This remedy has also been used in my family for frost bitten feet with the best results. I cheerfully recommend its use to all who may need a first-class liniment." Sold by Albert C. ELEPHANT AND ENGINE.

The Fate of a Big Tusker That Tried to Push a Locomotive Backward.

It is not only in South Africa, and by statesmen who ought to know better, that the march of civilization is opposed and obstinacy pitted against progress. The elephant has many human qualities, and if the story that comes to us from Perak, one of the Straits settlements, be well founded, occasionally shares with politicians hardly less intelligent their prejudice against the spirit of the age. It appears that a big tusker which had long been an object of pursuit to the sportsmen of that remote district wandered on to the railway line and tried conclusions with the engine of a goods train, charging it repeatedly and keeping up the contest for nearly an hour. The engine was reversed in the hope that the beast would quit the field and allow the train to proceed; but just as soon as there was any attempt to renew the journey the elephant returned to the encounter and resumed its obstructive tactics. The driver was afraid to charge the brute, lest the train should be thrown off the metals; and the contest might have gone on much longer had not the elephant backed into the engine, and, setting its fore feet firmly between the rails, endeavored to shove the train backward with its hind quarters.

The driver took advantage of the opportunity and put on steam, gradually forcing the beast off the line. In this maneuver one of the wheels of the engine went over the hind legs of the animal, which was put out of its misery by the guard of a following passenger train. This is not the first time that the engine in question has encountered an elephant on the line. Just about five years ago, while it was drawing a passenger train on a dark night through the heavy tropical forest, a sudden shock was felt and the train came to a standstill. The engine and tender were thrown off the metals and half way down the embankment, though fortunately they did not drag the carriages after them. When the driver, who had been pitched off, went back to ascertain the cause of the accident he saw a large bull elephant at the bottom of the embankment at the other side of the line. It died a few moments after the collision from the violent shock and loss of blood, its off fore leg having been shattered and a piece of the trunk torn off. Beyond the fright and shock caused by the sudden stopping of the train, which, luckily, was traveling at only 15 miles an hour, no injury resulted to any of the passengers. In the same month of the same year a similar accident occurred on the Bengal-Nagpur railway in India.

On a pitch-dark night a mail train was running at the rate of 27 miles an hour through a very thick jungle which was known to hold wild elephants. The driver felt an obstruction and attempted to reverse, but the engine left the metals, dragging with it a brake van, the carriage of the locomotive superintendent and some other carriages but without causing injury to any of the passengers or officials. At first it was thought that the accident had been brought about by cattle straying on the line, but the officials soon found a dead elephant. Apparently the animal had been crossing the line just as the train came up and had been struck by the engine and hurled down the bank. The agent of the company sent home one of the tusks to be put up in the boardroom as a memorial of the occurrence. These instances of a train being thrown off the line through collision with an elephant show that, while such accidents are pretty sure to be "bad for the elephant," they are also attended with considerable danger to rolling stock, and even to human life. The latter consideration completes the analogy we have already drawn.—London Standard.

PIGS ON PASTURE.

Important Extracts from the Annual Report of the Oklahoma Experiment Station.

April 27, 1899, eight pigs were divided into two lots, one weighing 250 pounds, the other 270 pounds. They were placed in alfalfa plats of about one-half acre each, one lot receiving no other food, the other full feed of Kafir meal or shelled corn.

During five weeks the pigs with no food but alfalfa made gain of 61 pounds, or 15.25 pounds each. For next three weeks, to June 22, they gained only seven pounds, less than two pounds each. While there was a good stand of alfalfa and the season was favorable for its growth, the four pigs, averaging about 80 pounds, each kept it well eaten off.

The four pigs full fed grain with the alfalfa gained 199 pounds in five weeks, or practically 50 pounds each in 35 days. In next three weeks they gained 125 pounds, or nearly one and one-half pounds per day.

With this last was a sow with a litter of pigs. She gained 61 pounds in first five weeks, when she was removed, her five pigs gained 146 pounds in first five weeks and 96 pounds in next three weeks. A young boar in same lot gained 46 pounds in 26 days and 29 pounds in next three weeks.

There was fed to all the pigs in this plat 1,688 pounds corn and Kafir. They made total gain in eight weeks of 764 pounds, using only 2.21 pounds grain, in addition to the alfalfa for each pound of gain. Counting the small pigs with the others the grain eaten was less than three pounds per day each.

Obviously the grain feeding was profitable. Possible equal or greater profit might have resulted if only partial feed of grain had been given. The plat pasturing the pigs with grain feed carried at least one-half more stock than the other, but alfalfa remained green and fresh.

Six young brood sows, with pigs, were kept during same period on a small native grass pasture with access to a very small quantity of the droppings and waste from feeding the work teams. They gained 50 pounds in five weeks and 90 pounds in next three weeks. The sow which had been full fed grain on alfalfa pasture during May was put in this pasture June 1 and lost 11 pounds in three weeks. This trial illustrates the fact that our native grasses will enable pigs to make some gain during the early part of the season. They become less palatable as the season advances.

HOW TO KILL CATTLE.

Failure to Fell the Animal at the First Blow with the Ax Means Terrible Torture.

Cattle are most readily and conveniently destroyed by blows on the head with a heavy ax or hammer, followed by immediate blood-letting. The animal which is to be killed should be secured by means of a rope passed round the horns and fastened to a post, or, if practicable, carried through a ring in the floor, and held or made fast by an assistant. The animal being blindfolded, the operator, armed with a heavy ax or hammer, stands at the side and a little in front of it, and aims his blow at a spot in the middle of a line drawn across the forehead about one and one-half inches below the base of the horns, or, perhaps better, at a spot where two diagonal lines intersect, drawn from the eyes to the base of the horns, as illustrated. In most cases, if the blow is heavy and properly directed, the animal falls instantly; but it is better even then to repeat the blow, and to follow it by immediate bleeding. This is accomplished either by drawing back the head and cutting deeply across the neck at the upper portion of the windpipe, severing all the blood-vessels, or by plunging a long and sharp-pointed knife into the heart and large blood-vessels at a point corresponding to the upper portion of the brisket, and just above the breast bone. Failure to fell the animal at the first blow cannot be attributed to any difference in the anatomical structure of the part, but rather the fact that the blow was ill-directed, almost invariably too low, that it was not sufficiently powerful, or that both of these faults were combined.—Farm and Home.

A LASTING EFFECT.

This Evidence Should Prove Every Claim.

Relief from the pains and aches of a bad back is always welcome to every backache sufferer, but to cure a lame, weak or aching back is what's wanted. Cure it so it will stay cured. It can be done. Here's the strongest evidence to prove it.

Mr. H. P. Smith, blacksmith, of Elm street, Amesbury, Mass., says: "Mrs. Smith, from a cold which settled in her loins, suffered so severely from backache that she was unable to attend to the ordinary household duties, often finding it impossible to even make a bed for three months. I had read a great many statements of residents of Amesbury who positively declared that Doan's Kidney Pills had cured them of backache and other symptoms of kidney complaint. This led me to make some inquiries, and as a result Mrs. Smith took a thorough course of the treatment. It cured her. It is so long ago that I am confident the results are permanent. We never lose an opportunity of advising others who suffer from either weakened or over-excited kidneys to procure Doan's Kidney Pills, and we know of scores in and around Amesbury who have taken our advice and were not only surprised but gratified at the benefits received."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers; price 50 cents a box. Mailed on receipt of price by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.

A Suspicious Case.

"You," said the attorney for the defense, addressing the chief witness against the accused, "you are the man who found the body of the dead person, I believe?"

"Yes, sir."

"Now, tell the jury all the circumstances."

"Well, sir, I was going down the street and I heard shots fired. Then I saw a man running away, and then I found the body of Bill Jones. He was dead with two bullet holes in his head, and I at once suspected that something was wrong."—Town Topics.

Innocence.

"Of course we have to pay more for coal now than we did a month or two ago," said Mrs. Chugwater, "but we ought not to mind that. I suppose it means that they have been raising the poor coal miners' wages."

A Queer Lot.

Stranger—I have heard that you have a good many queer people in this town.

Citizen—As odd a lot as you'd find in a year's travel. They are a queer set, the whole of 'em, outside my family. And my wife is almost as bad as the others; but then, you know, she wasn't originally of my family. — Boston Transcript.

And, Therefore, Keyholes.

"I wonder if the man in the moon has any trouble finding the keyhole when he's full and stays out late?"

"Keyhole? Of course not. What a silly idea!"

Beware of a Cough.

A cough is not a disease but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears are easily cured. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing the diseases which cause coughing. If it is not beneficial it will not cost you a cent. For sale by Albert C. Mason, druggist.

Save Your MONEY.

To save your money, by getting more for it, ask your dealer in medicine to show you the new 50 cent size bottle of JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT. It contains over three times as much as the old 25 cent style, which is a great saving to those who use this valuable family medicine. The superior quality of this old Anodyne has never been equaled.

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT

Fifty years ago this month, Dr. Johnson left with me some Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. I remember him distinctly, and could tell you just how he was dressed on that day. I have sold Johnson's Liniment ever since. Can truly say it has maintained its high standard from that time to this. No medicine today possesses the confidence of the public to a greater extent. JOHN B. RAND, North Waterford, Me., Jan., 1891.

As a family remedy it has been used and indorsed for nearly a century. Every Mother should have it in the house for many common ailments. Internal as much as External.

HEALTH HOARDERS.

The Highest Conception of Life Is That It Is Not So Much a Thing to Be Kept as to Be Used.

Some people are misers with their health just as other people are with their wealth. There is such a thing as being too careful about living. Life is not a thing so much to be kept as to be used. People who put off every burden and neglect every duty, lest in some way these weary them or wear them out, both make for themselves the ill health which they fear, and have the sad sense that the good health did not go in anything that was worth the r while. Civil Engineer Robeson, who gave his life and health in planning and constructing the great Brooklyn bridge, and in the last few years of bodily infirmity spent his time at his window looking out on the bridge which he had made, could indeed know that the work was worth the health which he had given. We can well remember, in these days, the words which Sarpedon spoke to Glaucus in the heroics of the Iliad: "Ah! friend, if once escaped from this battle we were always hereafter to be ageless and immortal, I would not myself fight in the foremost ranks, nor would I send thee into the war that giveth men renown; but now, since 10,000 fates of death beset thee in every way, and these no mortal may escape or avoid—now, let us go forward."—S. A BULLFINCH REVIVAL.

The Little Red-Breasted Songsters Are Enjoying Great Popularity in New York.

In the usual course of change in fashions, which affect the choice of pets as much as they affect taste of dress, literature and drama, that old favorite the piping bullfinch is coming into high favor in New York just now. The bullfinch is "the parrot of the temperate zone," not because he ever learns to talk, like his tropical prototype, but because, having no "wood notes wild" of his own, he can learn to whistle human music and often distinguishes himself as a soloist.

A leading New York bird seller who is now doing a flourishing business in bullfinches last week gave this account of the bullfinch revival: "They used to be favorite pets on the other side; I don't know that they were ever before very popular here. Of course, the bullfinch is not an American bird, but a native of Europe. Some of those I import come from England, but more from Germany. As you know, a fashion like that is generally set going by some notable or another. In this case the German kaiser is responsible. Bullfinches are a hobby with him; he has six of them that whistle 'Die Wacht am Rhein' in chorus, and now some of my men from over there tell me he has a new bird learning to whistle a song which has lately become popular in Germany—'Kruger Is a Bully Boy.'"

This startling indication of the kaiser's international tendencies, the dealer said, has not yet got into print on this side of the Atlantic. "But," he added, "we in the trade are far ahead of the papers on all that kind of news."

The consignments of birds are brought over from Germany under the care of a regular professional "vogelhandler." The great field for gathering bullfinches is said to be the duchy of Hesse. There the birds are taken, unfledged, from the nests and patiently taught to whistle their little repertories while they are still young. The old story that needles are thrust into their eyes to make them sing better is ridiculed by the dealers, who say that nothing but petting will make a bullfinch a good performer. "You can't do anything with them by punishment. Even a cross word will upset a bullfinch and make him sulky. As for putting out their eyes, to say nothing of the cruelty of it, it would ruin a bird's appearance and destroy his market value."—N. Y. Tribune.

HOT SUPPER DISHES.

Some Fruits Are Much Better When They Have Been Slightly Warmed.

The cold days of midwinter call for comfortable, hot suppers of rich foods and sweets or preserves, in place of the cooling fruits of summer and autumn. It is only when we have created an artificial atmosphere within doors which resembles that of a sultry summer day that we find iced fresh fruit grateful food in winter. There is considerable doubt whether any fruit is digestible eaten at a lower temperature than that in which it grew in its native soil. Tropical fruits, according to this theory should never be chilled, but should be eaten at about the temperature they are when they hang in the tropic suns, which would be a little higher than the temperature of the properly regulated dining-room. This makes necessary the heating of oranges and bananas a little. These fruits are much sweeter when eaten with the chill taken off from them.

Bananas and oranges, as well as preserved fruits of various kinds, make excellent supper fritters. Slice bananas lengthwise after peeling. Sprinkle them with sugar and squeeze a little lemon juice over them. Slice oranges across the lobes at what has been called the equator of the fruit, in even circular slices about a quarter of an inch thick. Grate a little of the yellow rind of the orange over a plate before peeling or slicing, and dip each slice in a little of this grated peel. Scatter sugar lightly over them. Let the sliced fruit stand a few moments, then dip it evenly in a fritter batter made by beating the yolks of two eggs in a bowl with a tablespoonful of lemon juice and a tablespoonful of olive oil or melted butter, or tried out chicken fat; sift in a heaping cupful of flour, and little by little add just water enough to make a thick batter. Set it away at this stage well covered for a day, and when it is needed, add the beaten whites of two eggs. Dip the prepared slices of bananas or those of oranges in this batter, coating each one thinly on both sides, and fry them two minutes in very hot fat. They should be a golden brown on each side.—N. Y. Tribune.

Mortgagee's Sale.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Patrick Hart to the Medway Savings Bank, a corporation duly established in Medway, in the county of Norfolk, by the laws of Massachusetts, dated May 14, 1891, and recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 654, folio 554, and by the said Medway Savings Bank assigned said mortgage deed to Peter Hart, dated May 7, 1900, recorded in Norfolk county deeds, for a breach of the conditions thereof and to foreclose said mortgage deed, will be sold on the premises in Medway, in said Norfolk county, in said Massachusetts, at public auction, on at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed. Excepting such lots as have been released under this mortgage deed by said Medway Savings Bank, and known as lots Nos. 50, 60, 71 and 72 on plan of farm plots of the Boston Agricultural City Co. drawn by H. S. Partridge, April 16, 1896, to which reference may be had.

All that certain lot or tract of land situate in said Medway, bounded and described as follows: Beginning at the Medway branch railroad bridge on Charles river; thence running southerly on said river ten (10) rods and fifteen (15) links to land formerly of Aaron L. White; thence southwesterly on said White's land to a stone bound; thence running northwesterly across the open plain on a line parallel with the line of said railroad to the Franklin road, so called, bounding on the west by land formerly of Bucknam and Rayner; thence running northeasterly on said Franklin road to the line of the railroad aforesaid (excepting herefrom a house lot of forty and five-tenths (40 5-10) rods conveyed to Edward Eaton, lying near to said railroad); thence southeasterly on said railroad to Charles river aforesaid. Together with all the rights and privileges of water and otherwise belonging to said premises, together with all improvements on said estate, same as described in deed to me from John J. Raynor, recorded with Norfolk Deeds, libro 546, fol. 605.

Also another tract of land in said Medway, and in Franklin, in said county of Norfolk, near to Medway village, so called, containing about thirty (30) acres, be the same more or less, and bounded as follows, viz: Beginning at a point where a town road crosses the old Medway branch railroad; thence running southerly on said road to land formerly of Aaron L. White; thence running southwesterly and bounded southeasterly by said White's land to land sold by Pierce and Ammidown to Edward Eaton; thence continuing to run southwesterly on said Eaton's land (formerly) seventy-three (73) rods and nine (9) links to land formerly of Clark Walker; thence continuing westerly on said Walker's land ten (10) rods and twenty-one and a half (21 1-2) links to a bound; thence continuing to run on said Walker's land westerly ten (10) rods and twenty-one and a half links more to land formerly of Pierce and Ammidown; thence running northerly on Pierce and Ammidown's land twenty-five (25) rods to a bound on other land formerly of said Pierce and Ammidown; thence running easterly fifteen (15) rods and fifteen (15) links on the land last mentioned to a street or way reserved for passage to other parcels of land conveyed by Bucknam and Rayner; thence running northerly on the west line of said street and bounded westerly by land formerly of said Pierce and Ammidown twelve (12) rods and seven (7) links to land formerly of Mrs. Adeline Fuller; thence on Mrs. Fuller's land twelve (12) rods and two and a half (2 1-2) links to a house and lot (since conveyed) of Pierce and Ammidown; thence on said lot five (5) rods and twenty-four and a half (24 1 2) links to land formerly of said Pierce and Ammidown; thence on said last named land to the Franklin road, so called, twenty-eight (28) rods and twenty-four and a half (24 1-2) links; thence running northeasterly on said Franklin road to the line of the old Medway Branch Railroad Company fifty-six (56) rods and six (6) links; excepting therefrom a lot of land containing forty rods and five-tenths (40 5-10) near the said railroad, sold by Bucknam and Rayner to Edward Eaton, as by his deed will appear; thence running southeasterly on land of said railroad company to the town road aforesaid; subject to the reservations contained in deed of said Pierce and Ammidown (see Norfolk Deeds, libro 892, fol. 58, and also plan of various lots drawn by J. C. Lovering in June, 1860.

Also one other tract of land in said Medway, described in a previous mortgage from grantor to grantee. (See Norfolk Registry of Deeds, libro 480, folio 281.

The Dean boys went to battle with Phillips Exeter academy on Wednesday, but were beaten by a score of 13 to 6. Jennes and Perkins both took turns at pitching. Up to the seventh inning Dean led, but the home team got in its work later and batted out a victory.

Don't think of trying to do business without a standing advertisement in the SENTINEL. When for a small sum you can tell a large number of people just what you have to sell, you will make the biggest kind of a mistake if you don't avail yourself of such an opportunity.

Manager Enegren is planning for a great season at Lake Pearl this year, and is fixing up the grounds, erecting new buildings and is providing a number of extra attractions. He will open the season on Memorial day and will have fine music and many other attractive features.

It is understood that the gentlemen who are interested in the formation of a base ball association are to get together this evening. The prospect is said to be bright for the scheme going through and an organization being effected. A number of merchants are interested and will be on band.

Hubbard M. Bullock is slowly but steadily gaining and his memory is returning to its normal condition. It will be some time before he will be able to resume active business, and he will probably let or close up his house for the summer and go away for the change and rest absolutely needed to regain health.

Tufts gave Holy Cross a hard battle on the latter's ground Wednesday and kept the wearers of the purple guessing throughout the game. Tufts led 5 to 4 up to the ninth inning and then went to pieces, giving Holy Cross two runs and the game. Woodworth, who pitched for Carter some last season, was in the box for Tufts during the first six innings and then retired.

In a number of cases forbearance has ceased to be a virtue, and warrants for delinquent taxpayers have been put in the hands of a sheriff for collection. In one or two instances, where open declaration was made that the assessment would not be paid, a different conclusion was reached just in time to save extra expense.

The secretary of Corps No. 89, W. R. C., has received a letter from Post 60, G. A. R., inviting the members to attend the memorial services at Norfolk Sunday, May 20. Barges leave G. A. R. hall at 1 o'clock p. m.; also to join them in all memorial services, Baptist church, Franklin, and decoration of graves at Bellingham Sunday, May 27.

The straw goods season has not been a very good one this year, either to manufacturers or employees, and the short time of fairly good demand for goods the past few weeks will hardly bring it up to what be classed as a fair six months. The reports indicate that the condition of the trade in other straw good centres is practically the same as here.

The next regular meeting of Corps No. 80 will occur next Monday evening. Members are earnestly requested to be present. As a mark of respect and in recognition of the grand work she has accomplished, a memorial service will be held for Sarah J. Martin of Brookfield, Mo., past national president W. R. C. Color bearers are requested to be present

Miss Jennie McGroary was surprised by fifty of her friends last evening, who hung a May basket on the door knob at her home on Ruggles street. The "hangers" were captured, invited within and there royally entertained, dancing being one of the features, which was enjoyed in a vacant house adjoining, good music being furnished. The guests sat down to a bountiful spread during the evening.

A strawberry festival will be held in the Congregational church on Wednesday evening, May 23, at 7.30. A good program has been provided and music will be furnished by Mann's orchestra. The festival will be held in the banquet hall, where there will be strawberries, ice cream and candy for sale. An interesting feature will be a "clipping bee" in charge of four ladies. Aprons will also be on sale.

A rumor was current here this week that Manager Enegren had disposed of his Lake Pearl property to B. F. Keith, the amusement caterer of Boston. Mr. Enegren denies this, though admitting, however, that within the past two weeks Boston parties have waited upon him with a view to buying the resort. Concerning the visit of these Boston gentlemen Mr. Enegren was reticent and their identity was not revealed.

Judge Flint held a probate court session for Norfolk county at Dedham on Wednesday and transacted the following Franklin business: Wills allowed—Jane D. Fisher, Metcalf E. Pond, executor, bond $150. Accounts allowed—First and final on the estate of William M. Thayer, for $2,705.50; first and final on the estate of Joseph Ray Wyckoff, a minor, for $925.50; first and final on the estate of H. Lyman Towne, for $220.

At the annual meeting of the Ladies' Benevolent society Wednesday afternoon the following officers were chosen: President, Mrs. I. W. Sneath; vice pres., Mrs. John Fisher; sec. and treas., Miss Hattie A. Daniels; col., Mrs. David Campbell; directresses, Mrs. Lydia Harris, Mrs. Mary Blake, Mrs. William Cleveland, Mrs. C. A. Lawrence, Mrs. James Knapp; matron, Mrs. E. C. Abbott; supper com., Mrs. John Fisher.

Cyclists who ask Baggage Master Colgan to check their bicycles as baggage today and tomorrow are doomed to disappointment, as the new law will not go into effect until thirty days after it was signed by Governor Crane, which means that after 2 45 on June 15 the law will be in force. This will enable the railroad companies to have special bicycle checks printed and to issue instructions to baggage masters in all parts of Massachusetts regarding the new law.

Patrick Dunion, who died Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Doherty, Union street from the effects of a shock received about two months ago, was buried Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. Owing to the unavoidable absence of Rev. M. J. Lee in Boston there was no mass celebrated at St. Mary's church, as was expected. A low mass was celebrated, however, at 8 o'clock Thursday morning. Mr. Dunion was about 68 years of age, a veteran of the Civil war, and belonged to the Grand Army. Post 60, G. A. R., attended the body to the grave.

The tree warden has had many of the advertisements posted on trees removed, it being against the law to post any notice or advertisement upon shade trees. All such advertisements will be removed and any person detected in posting them is liable to prosecution. Many people are under a misapprehension in regard to the law protecting shade trees, and assume that they have a right to trim or cut trees along the street upon their own premises. Under the present law this is not the case. The jurisdiction of the tree warden extends to all shade trees within twenty feet of the highway.

Miss Grace E. Hadley, who has been appointed valedictorian at the Worcester classical high school and who expects to continue her studies and will enter Wellesley college this fall, was a graduate of the Franklin High school, and a member of the freshman class of the Horace Mann. She resided here about five years, her home now being in North Grafton. In Worcester she has been president of the Aletheia society and has taken part in some of the society's debates. She is especially strong as a writer, and has contributed many articles to the High School Sentinel.

It will be remembered that last year Judge Doe ordered the license forfeited issued to Lawrence McGinniss. The full bench of the supreme court at Boston has just overruled Mr. McGinnies' exceptions in the case of Lawrence McGinnis, Jr., vs. the town of Medway, holding that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover $2,300 paid by him to the defendant last May for liquor licenses for the new Gladstone hotel in Medway, which, though authorized to be granted, were subsequently revoked because one of the selectmen failed to post statutory notice upon the premises. The selectman posted the notice on the adjoining premises.

O. B. Carter is wanted by the Norwood people to manage the ball team there. For a number of years Norwood has had a team, but of late years the management has been very unsatisfactory, notwithstanding the support would have been adequate had the team been rightly handled. The Norwood Messenger intimates that Mr. Carter has his eye on the field, and says that his success here has given him the confidence of the Norwood people, adding that he has shown himself one of the shrewdest managers in the state for a minor league team. Norwood hopes that Mr. Carter will add that town to his list of managerial successes.

Many will remember Charles Jenks, a son of H. R. Jenks, who was formerly in the grocery business here. Last summer he cut his hand and blood poisoning followed, and his condition has continued to grow worse. A bad cough developed and he was advised to go to Jamaica. The trip apparently cured his cough, but he continued to grow weaker, and upon his arrival at Boston on his return he was taken to the home of Mrs. Jenks' parents, where he remains critically ill. Mr. Jenks is a young man who had reached the point in his business career where success seemed assured, so that the misfortune is doubly depressing to his friends.

Rev. G. W. Miner delivered a very interesting address upon missionary work at the 115th annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal church of the diocese of Massachusetts, at Trinity church on Wednesday evening. In Bishop Lawrence's report he says: "The number of clergymen canonically resident in this diocese is now 260, the number of parishes 154, or organized missions 62; total of parishes and missions 216; the number of postulants 2, of candidates for holy orders 36, of lay readers 79. During the conventional year I have confirmed 2,344, other bishops 60, making a total of 2,404. I have ordained four men to the diaconate and five to the priesthood."

On Monday the pupils of the High school listened to a short lecture given by Judge Ruggles. The title of the lecture might properly be termed "How Laws are Passed," a lecture from which many points of interest and instruction might be grasped. Mr. Ruggles purposely allowed a few minutes at the close of his address for any questions the scholars or teachers might care to ask in regard to the topic he had considered. After a brief classification of law he traced the passage of a bill through its several readings until it finally appeared on the statutes of the state, taking for illustration a bill for the appointment of a superintendent of music recently presented to the Massachusetts legislature by President Capen.

Master James Healey of East street was the recipient of a well-filled May basket on Wednesday evening, hung by thirty of his young friends. The presentation was a complete surprise to the young man, who made haste to corral the donors while they were in the act of speeding away after leaving the good things at the door. Some of the party fell while trying to escape in the darkness, and one young man, in an endeavor to vault a picket fence, was impaled and hung by one pantaloon leg until rescued by his friends. He was damaged to the extent of several slight bruises and his brand new dress suit is now in the hands of his tailor for repairs. But, as stated, the party were invited into the house, where, after partaking of a bountiful spread, music, games and withal a merry and happy time prevailed until 10.45, when the donors departed for their homes, all voting the reception given them by Master Healey a most pleasant one.

What came very near being a fatal accident was that at the Heliotype crossing yesterday forenoon, as the Milford train was coming into Franklin. Thomas Madden was driving a team belonging to Patrick Collins, the cart being loaded with cess pool matter in barrels. The engineer had whistled three times just as the horse's head appeared at the track. The horse cleared all right, but the engine struck the wagon and demolished it entirely, throwing Mr. Madden to the ground, and the contents of the barrels completely covered him. The front of the engine and car was similarly treated, and Engineer Smith did not escape the general deluge. Madden was brought to town and treated by Dr. Crowley, only a slightly sprained ankle developing. He was one of the worst looking objects seen upon the streets in a long time, and decidedly unpleasant as to odor. He seemed satisfied to think he escaped with his life. The horse was unhurt. Richard Collins, who was also on the wagon, jumped and escaped injury.

Richardson's Market.

Meat is rising, but we shall continue to sell the best the market affords at prices as low as possible. Our line of vegetables includes everything obtainable at present. Our corned beef ranges from 5 to 12 cents; everyone suited. Home-killed veal, choice roasts, prime butter, etc. We have some selected tomato plants at 25 cents a dozen for home gardeners. Drop us a card and our team will call for your order.

Street Railway Notes.

Supt. Young has a large gang of men strengthening the Franklin line roadbed so that perfect safety and comfort for the travelling public will be assured when the big 12 seat bloomer cars are put on. This will be in about ten days when the cars will be equipped with the latest patent safety air brakes.

There has been much discussion as to the route of the street railway from Medway going over the Richardson hill, many thinking that it would be carried around through private land. That question seems to be settled, as the rails are laid in the highway which runs over the hill. The construction has reached the foot of the hill toward Franklin center.

The eight-wheeled open cars of the Milford, Attleboro and Woonsocket street railway, taken out for the first time Monday and run over the line, attracted a great deal of attention. The car is a beauty and a very easy riding one. It had a tight squeeze to get under the railroad bridge on Main street in Woonsocket, as the car is rather high, but special trolley holders have been ordered and will be put on, so the cars of this type will experience no difficulty in passing under the bridge.

The underpinning work for the new building at Hoag's is now going on, and before many weeks a large, commodious theatre will be completed for the accommodation of patrons of what promises to be a popular summer resort. In addition the lake will also be fitted up and boats installed and probably a boat house erected. Refreshments will be served in a small building at one end of the lake. Cars will run to Woonsocket every 15 minutes during the season and special excursion rates will probably be made

Between the Four Corners and North Bellingham the electric road crosses the highway twice, near Holbrook's corner, the crookedness of the highway requiring it. The proposed plan is to build a short highway direct, avoiding a curving highway and transferring the present electric road to the proposed new highway. If this is done the electric railway company will meet some of the expenses, and a special town meeting will be called to see what the town will pay. The change is positive in freeing the town from damages that might occur and would straighten the highway for the betterment of all.

Peaceful Rest.

On Sunday last, May 13, Mrs. Grace A. Ellis, beloved wife of C. Elmer Ellis, residing on the Deacon Bacon place, was translated to the peaceful rest of those who die in the Lord. Mrs. Ellis was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Peary. She leaves two little children, one two years and the other one week old. Mrs. Ellis at her death was but 21 years and 7 months of age. Her beautiful young life seemed to be but blossoming and was full of promise. But however much to human eyes she may have seemed to be needed in the holy calling of wife and mother, He who knoweth all summoned her to the higher service of that larger life beyond. Mrs. Ellis was a member of the Evangelical church at Everett. The funeral service was held at the house Tuesday, at 2 o'clock, Rev. S. A. Cook of the Methodist church of Franklin officiating.

For the encouragement and help of those present Mr. Cook gave a tender message of the sweet gospel of love from the text "Jesus Wept." Jesus was set forth as the great sympathizer, who because He was Deity incarnate, was and is able, not only to enter into full sympathy with humanity, being himself affected by the affections of men, whether of joy or grief, but also to speak that word of life and power to the true believer which yields perfect victory, making even death resplendent with heavenly prospect. Mrs. C. L. Stewart, who had the music in charge, rendered two appropriate selections, and most effectively did she sing the gospel of healing balm to the grief-stricken hearts of tearful listeners.

The interment took place at the Franklin cemetery. Many friends join in kindly sympathy with the bereaved husband and other relatives. A.

E. B. Guild's auction sale of store and household goods, at City Mills, advertised for the 19th, will not take place till the 26th.

Fresh cut flowers at Slade's.

Who Will Start It?

"Rummage sales" promise to be the sensation of the season. Second-hand goods of all kinds and descriptions are sold at prices ranging from one cent up. Merchants as well as housekeepers, who, at this clearing up time of the year, find articles they do not care to carry over or put away, send them to be sold. A team collects all sorts of articles useful as wearing apparel or for ornamental purposes from benevolent people that have either discarded or else have no further use for articles which needy ones would be glad to purchase at a very low price. The articles thus collected are often quite valuable and would otherwise have been rendered useless by long vacations in garret or cellar or else blundering into the rag man's bag. A place of sale and an auctioneer are selected, and the proceeds go to some charitable object.

The Census Enumerator.

It will save inconvenience all around if the census enumerators, Messrs. Newell and White, who are soon to begin their rounds, are provided with such information as they seek to obtain as pleasantly and as expeditiously as possible. In brief, they act under orders to gather statistics which congress deems it will be of public value to collate. Give them, therefore, courteous welcome and ready access to all such facts and figures as they may be called upon to secure. Treat the enumerators and their questions kindly. Not to do so would be to subject yourself to endless trouble and annoyance.

List of Unclaimed Letters.

Letters remaining unclaimed in the post office at Franklin for week ending May 16, 1900:

Ladies—Mrs. W. W. Bailey, Mrs. W. Fifield.

Gentlemen—E. B. Carpenter (2), C. Carter (2), Arminaus Chavas, Charles Cook, Highland, S. A. Robinson, Francesco Said, Ludryk Senkewicz, Louis Vandal, Jos. Lamroureux, Francesco de Ramio, Francesco Said.

Persons claiming the above will please say "advertised" and give date of above list.

Many men of small income spend 5, 10 or 20 cents a day for beer, says the National Advocate. Five cents a day saved and at the end of each year put to interest at 5 per cent. would at the end of 10 years amount to $205.50, 20 years $560, 25 years $815. Ten cents a day so treated would in the same periods respectively amount to $405, $1120 and $1630. Twenty cents a day would amount to $910, $2240 and $3260. Think what a comfortable cottage home with beautiful surroundings in the suburbs of a city or in a village might many a working man possess for the money he needlessly expends in a few years on beer.

The editor can write more cheerfully of the business interests of the town when his columns are liberally filled with the advertising of the business houses. No editor can advocate the doctrine of buying from the home merchants unless the home merchants show they are interested in catering to the home trade by advertising in the columns of the local newspaper. It is depressing to the editor to find business men patronizing every advertising fake that comes along, and at the same time the names of these business men are rarely, if ever, seen in the advertising columns of the local newspaper.—Press and Printer.

A Close Call

A high trestle [illegible] a quarter mile [illegible] of the [illegible] ley [illegible] young [illegible] thrilling [illegible] He had [illegible] passed the [illegible] fast train rounded the [illegible] him. There was not a moment [illegible] he quickened his pace, not [illegible] task on the ties. As he neared the end the train was close behind and he had just time to swing himself over the side of the bridge as the locomotive thundered by. The ends of the ties were slippery with grease, and his foot slipped as he left the track. His right hand, stretched out blindly, touched an iron brace, and he clutched it. Then for a moment he swung in space, and in another his left hand found a place beside his right, and his feet touched a welcome beam below. With bleeding fingers clutching the slender iron bar that bent and vibrated, moments seemed hours, but at length the train passed, and the young man was able to climb slowly to the track above and crawl over the ties to firm ground.

Some days ago, reports the Cincinnati Enquirer, Charles West, of Bowling Green, was engaged in a game at a well-known resort in Toledo. He had been losing heavily and his last dollar was at stake. As the cards were being dealt he remarked: "If the queen of hearts turns up again I hope to God that I may never speak again." To his consternation the fateful card turned up. He attempted to utter an oath, but found that he could not articulate above a whisper. He has tried various remedies, agents, but up to the present time he has not regained his voice. Many of the friends of Mr. West look upon his affliction as a visitation from God.

A valuable testimonial to the advancement of this country in the field of medical science is given by Dr. Kutnow, an eminent English physician. He says: "This is my first trip to America, and I am very sorry I did not come here long ago. When I go back to Europe I shall make it a point to advise all young medical students who have the opportunity to come to this country for study. This is a great place for them and I regret very much that I could not have had the advantage of an early training here."

The police force of Jefferson, Pa., is so fascinated by the splendor of his apparel that he is neglecting his duty. A correspondent of the local paper complains that the church pavements are so crowded on Sunday that churchgoers can hardly pass and says: "If our policeman would take a little more pride in keeping order and a little less pride in his [illegible] he met, he would certainly do justice to the borough and credit to himself."

As sensible men and women give more and more time and thought to the care of their health, walking steadily grows in favor, says a health authority. There is only one way to keep well, and that is to exercise rationally. A raffle for a White House crazy quilt has just taken place at [illegible] a "throw." SABLE ISLAND PONIES.

They Are Said to Resemble Those Found on the Sculptures of Nineveh Island.

The story of animal life on Sable island is strange. Roaming the sandy wastes are herds of wild ponies guarded by patriarchal stallions. These ponies resemble the horses on the sculptures of Nineveh, and approach the beholder seemingly out of the framework of antiquity. They are stocky and remarkable for their long manes, which in instances have been known to grow to the length of three yards. These ponies are the remnant of a stock thought to have been left by some Portuguese fishermen—"Portingalls" the old records quaintly call them—who touched at the island on their fishing expeditions at even an earlier date than Marquis de la Roche. At one time there were from 400 to 500 wild ponies on the island, but their number has been decreased by exportation, the severity of the winters, and, some people think, by the importation of improved, domesticated stallions which have made the stock less hardy and consequently more susceptible to death from exposure. There are now between 80 and 100 wild ponies and about 30 for domestic use. Mounted on ponies, the life-savers gallop over the dunes and among the hillocks on their long patrols, and the life-boats are drawn to the scenes of shipwreck by teams of five ponies, three at the shaft and two leaders. Some of the wild ponies are sent to Halifax every year or two, and are sold at auction at an average price of from $15 to $18.

The "Portingalls" also stocked the island with cattle, which increased so rapidly that people from the mainland made expeditions to the island and returned with enough live stock to make their trips most profitable. At one time the island was quite overrun with rabbits. Then two rat-infested Norwegian vessels were wrecked there and the rats, swimming ashore, began to exterminate the rabbits and to attack the government stores. Cats were then imported from Halifax to kill the rats, and after awhile the cats increased so in number that dogs were imported to kill the cats. Latterly the island was again overrun with rats from wrecked vessels, and another cargo of cats was imported from Halifax. Once there were pigs on the island; but they have been exterminated because they had become ghouls feasting on the remains of castaways. Death in its most horrid forms is always the burden of Sable island's story.—Ainslee's.

MARK TWAIN'S DEBUT.

How the Famous Fun-Maker Became "A Literary Person," Thirty-Three Years Ago.

Mark Twain's first appearance in an eastern magazine was made over the name of "Mike Swain." How it came about he explains:

In those early days I had already published one little thing ("The Jumping Frog") in an eastern paper, but I did not consider that that counted. In my view, a person who published things in a mere newspaper could not properly claim recognition as a literary person; he must rise away above that; he must appear in a magazine. He would then be a literary person; also, he would be famous—right away. These two ambitions were strong upon me. This was in 1866. I prepared my contribution, and then looked around for the best magazine to go up to glory in. I selected the most important one in New York. The contribution was accepted. I signed it "Mark Twain;" for that name had some currency on the Pacific coast, and it was my idea to spread it all over the world, now, at this one jump. The article appeared in the December number, and I sat up a month waiting for the January number; for that one would contain the year's list of contributors, my name would be in it, and I should be famous and could give the banquet I was meditating.

I did not give the banquet. I had not written the "Mark Twain" distinctly; it was a fresh name to eastern printers, and they put it "Mike Swain" or "MacSwain," I do not remember which. At any rate, I was not celebrated, and I did not give the banquet. I was a literary Person, but that was all—a buried one; buried alive.

My article was about the burning of the clipper ship Hornet on the line, May 3, 1866. There were 31 men on board at the time, and I was in Honolulu when the 15 lean and ghostly survivors arrived there after a voyage of 43 days in an open boat, through the blazing tropics, on ten days' rations of food. A very remarkable trip; but it was conducted by a captain who was a remarkable man, otherwise there would have been no survivors. He was a New Englander of the best sea going stock of the old capable times—Capt. Josiah Mitchell.

I was in the islands to write letters for the weekly edition of the Sacramento Union, a rich and influential daily journal which hadn't any use for them, but could afford to spend $20 a week for nothing. The proprietors were lovable and well-beloved men; long ago dead, no doubt, but in me there is at least one person who still holds them in grateful remembrance; for I dearly wanted to see the islands and they listened to me and gave me the opportunity when there was but slender likelihood that it could profit them in any way.

I had been in the islands several months when the survivors arrived. I was laid up in my room at the time and unable to walk. Here was a great occasion to serve my journal, and I not able to take advantage of it. Necessarily I was in deep trouble. But by good luck his excellency Anson Burlingame was there at the time, on his way to take up his post in China, where he did such good work for the United States. He came and put me on a stretcher and had me carried to the hospital where the shipwrecked men were, and I never needed to ask a question. He attended to all of that himself, and I had nothing to do but make the notes. It was like him to take that trouble. He was a great man and a great American, and it was in his fine nature to come down from his high office and do a friendly turn whenever he could.—Century.

Wifely Credulity.

Hettie—Harry is always to be trusted. He has never deceived me.

Clara—How do you know that?

Hettie—Know it? Why, he told me so himself only last evening.—Boston Transcript.

Retentive.

"She is certainly bright. I don't see how she manages to know so much about the latest books."

"Well, for one thing, she has a remarkable memory. She never forgets a book review."—Brooklyn Life.

How to Win.

"He's always broke."

"Yes; he plays the races."

"And the fellow next to him seems to be always prosperous."

"Yes; he sells tips on them."—Chicago Post.

Suspicious Boarder.

"Will you have some of the sugar cured ham?" asked the landlady.
